CHANLER GAVE UP ALL TO WED CAVALIERI

Ante-Nuptial Agreement Shows He Turned Over Everything He Owned to Her.

MADE HER HIS ATTORNEY

This to Insure Her Obtaining $20,000 a Year in Addition to Real Estate Transferred.

W. Russell Osborn, counsel for Lina Cavalieri, filed yesterday with the Register of New York County, in the Hall of Records, the much-discussed ante-nuptial agreement between her and Robert Winthrop Chanler. The agreement shows that Chanler divested himself of all his real estate in New York County, which is considerable, and also of his real estate holdings in Dutchess County. In addition, he bound himself to pay his bride $20,000 a year. To insure the payment of this money he constituted Cavalieri his irrevocable attorney.

Lawyers who saw copies of the document yesterday in the County Court House were amazed at the legal strength with which it was drawn. It named as consideration of the transfer $1 cash in hand, the receipt of which was acknowledged under seal. The prophecy that Chanler might be able to defeat the enforcement of the instrument by setting up that the consideration was love and affection, in which he was disappointed, was overthrown by the disclosure of the contents.

Much surprise was expressed that the officials of the American Consulate in Paris, the official seal of which is affixed to the remarkable transfer, did not notify Chanler's relatives and step in to protect an American citizen from signing such a document.

Mr. Osborn said yesterday:

"The filing of the ante-nuptial agreement is a purely formal matter. It is a transfer of real estate in addition to a contract for income. As such it is recorded with the Register just like any other deed. Now that the transfer has been filed, there's nothing for us to do but wait for any possible attack on it. The document speaks for itself."

Here is the agreement in full:

Text of the Agreement.

This indenture made the 31st day of May, 1910, between Robert Winthrop Chanler of Red Hook, Dutchess County, a citizen of the State of New York, United States of America, now temporarily sojourning at the Grand Hotel, Paris, in the Republic of France, of the one part, hereinafter called the party of the first part, and Natalina, commonly called Lina, Cavalieri, spinster, an Italian subject of 22 Avenue de Messine, Paris, in the Republic of France, of the other part, hereinafter referred to as the party of the second part: Whereas a marriage is about to be solemnized between the parties hereto. And whereas a doubt might exist owing to their different nationalities as to the law governing their mutual property rights, in the absence of final stipulation, and it is desirable to remove any such doubt.

And, whereas, upon the treaty for the said intended marriage it was agreed that the party of the first part should make such provision for the party of the second part as is hereinafter contained.

Now, this indenture witnesseth, that the party of the first part and the party of the second part, for the purposes set out in this instrument and to the end of giving effect to the same, and for all other purposes, hereby declare it to be their intention and agree that the property of each of them respectively, both present and future, and of whatsoever nature and wheresoever situated, shall remain the separate property and under the sole control of each of them, and furthermore, that their mutual property rights and their status and capacity generally shall from and after the celebration of the said intended marriage be governed by the laws of the State of New York, aforesaid.

And this indenture witnesseth that in pursuance of the said agreement in this behalf and in consideration of the said intended marriage and of the sum of $1 to said party of the first part by the said party of the second part, paid, the receipt whereof is hereby confessed and acknowledged, the party of the first part hath granted, bargained, sold, and by these presents doth grant, bargain, and sell unto the said party of the second part, her heirs, executors, administrators and assigns,

Real Estate Transferred.

All those three farms, known, respectively, as Cole farm, Chowell farm, and Benna farm, situate in the township of Red Hook, Dutchess County, of an approximate area of 350 acres, or thereabouts, subject to a mortgage of $6,000 or thereabouts, and secondly:

All that the land and buildings formerly part of the Cosine farm, situate at New York, comprising 830, 832, 834, 836, 838, and 840 Ninth Avenue; 831, 833, 835, 837, and 839 Tenth Avenue; 360, 362, 364, 366, 368, 370, and 372 West Fifty-fifth Street, 503, 505, 507, 509, and 511 West Fifty-fifth Street, and Lots 17, 18, 19, 20, 45½, 46½, and 47½, part of Cosine Farm.

And all other realty (if any) forming part of the share of the above-named Robert Winthrop Chanler of and in the estate of the late Mrs. Laura Delano, subject to a mortgage of $140,000, or thereabouts. And all his right, title, and interest therein, but subject to the mortgages thereon. To have and to hold the said tenements and hereditaments with their appurtenances unto and to the use of the said party of the second part, her heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns absolutely to such uses and purposes as are hereinafter mentioned, to wit: For the use and benefit of the said party of the second part until her said intended marriage shall take place, and from and after the solemnization thereof for her sole and separate use absolutely.

And this indenture also witnesseth that in further pursuance of the said agreement in this behalf, and for the consideration hereinbefore referred to, the party of the first part doth hereby covenant to pay to the party of the second part the yearly sum of $20,000, during her life, by four quarterly installments of $5,000 each, the first of which shall be paid within thirty days from the celebration of the said intended marriage; the next three months later, and so on every three months, all payments to be free from income or other taxes which may be payable according to the laws of the State of New York aforesaid, or otherwise.

Wife His Irrevocable Attorney.

And for the purposes of securing the payment of the said yearly sum of $20,000, and only for such purpose, the said party of the first part doth hereby make, constitute, and appoint the party of the second part his true and lawful attorney, irrevocable, for him and in his name, place, and stead to collect at the periods aforesaid, out of the income, rents, and

WELLMAN AIRSHIP IN DANGER.

Gale Buffets Building in Which It Is Housed in Atlantic City.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 16.—A forty-mile gale is battering the balloon shed of Walter Wellman's dirigible airship America, from which he will send messages to THE NEW YORK TIMES, The London Daily Telegraph, and The Chicago Record-Herald on his attempt to fly across the Atlantic, at the inlet to-night, and a corps of watchmen will stay on duty throughout the night to prevent injury to the gas bag. The entrance to the hangar points toward the northeast, and as a heavy canvas curtain affords the only protection against storms, great care is needed to guard it.

"We are almost ready for the preliminary trial trip," Wellman said to-night, "and while we may be held up by a few days of bad weather, Chief Engineer Vaniman of the America and I confidently expect to try out our craft in a flight over Atlantic City and the ocean near by some time next week."

A COLLEGE STUDENT AT 80.

Mrs. A. D. Winship of Racine Begins Second Year in Ohio State University.

Special to The New York Times.

RACINE, Wis., Sept. 16.—Mrs. Amy D. Winship, widow of E. B. Winship, founder of the Winship Manufacturing Company of Racine, to-day entered on her second year in the Ohio State University at Columbus despite the fact that she is nearing the eighty-first anniversary of her birth.

For many years Mrs. Winship has been recognized as one of the best-read women and closest students in Wisconsin. For a time it was believed she would become the recognized leader of the woman's suffrage movement in this country.

Four years ago she informed her relatives that she intended entering some State University. Her relatives induced her to remain here, and with a large library at her disposal to continue her studies at home, but last July Mrs. Winship went to Columbus, Ohio, unbeknown to her relatives, took the examinations for entrance to the State University, and was admitted. She took an optional course in literature, language, and science, and met with success. This Summer she attended Summer school at Tower Hill, Wis.

Mrs. Winship declares she will finish the four-year course and probably take a post-graduate course. She is the mother of Dr. J. J. Davis, a physician of Racine, and Mrs. Park Wooster, wife of a local business man.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 16.—Mrs. A. D. Winship has registered for the Winter course in the Ohio State University. She will study philosophy, psychology, and literature, and will make a specialty of Shakespeare.

ROCKEFELLER IN CLEVELAND.

Postpones Tarrytown Visit Because of Mrs. Rockefeller's Ill-Health.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 16.—While citizens of Tarrytown, N. Y., were awaiting to-day the coming of John D. Rockefeller for his annual Fall visit, he was reclining on the front porch of his Forest Hill home reading a newspaper, the front page of which was full of reports of the census of Cleveland.

"I guess I will stay here for a while," he said. He was much pleased over the big showing of Cleveland's population.

Mr. Rockefeller will not go East before Oct. 1, and perhaps will remain here longer. It is said that Mrs. Rockefeller's health is not improved sufficiently for her to make the trip.

When the Rockefellers go to Tarrytown they will stay there until Christmas, and then move south for the Winter.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, Sept. 16.—The question here is "Where is John D. Rockefeller?" Yesterday twenty-six trunks were dumped off at the Tarrytown station for him, and he was reported as on his way to Pocantico Hills from Cleveland. George Ferguson, the iceman, said this afternoon that he saw Mr. Rockefeller at 11 o'clock driving around his estate and he spoke to him.

At Pocantico Hills it was stated positively that Mr. Rockefeller would not return until Oct. 29. That is all the information that could be obtained to-night.

Ferguson said that Mr. Rockefeller gave him his familiar greeting, "Hello, Mr. Ice Man."

It was said to-night that Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., had returned from Seal Harbor, Me.

NEW ISLAND RISES FROM SEA.

Added to Aleutian Group as the Result of an Earthquake.

SEWARD, Alaska, Sept. 16.—A new island was added to the Bogoslof group in the Aleutian Channel on Sept. 11, when Unalaska and Dutch Harbor were shaken by an earthquake. The island rose from the sea at a point where a sounding by the Geological Survey last year showed seventy fathoms of water. The island is in the form of a great round hill, close to Percy Peak, an island that rose last year.

The revenue cutter Bear, which arrived from Nome yesterday, brought this news and also reported that officers of the revenue cutter Tahoma were making a survey of Bogoslof Islands to obtain full details of the recent changes. The party landed on the new island last Saturday to camp a week or ten days.

The explorers are under command of Lieut. R. R. Waesche.

The famous volcano Bogoslof in the Aleutian Islands is again in eruption.

The codfishing schooner Vega found the sea for scores of miles about Unimak Island, where Mount Shishaldin has been in eruption for five months, covered with with ashes and pumice.

While the fishing schooner W. H. Diamond was going through Unimak Pass her spanker and rigging were set on fire by hot ashes. Sailors extinguished the fire.

DRESS BILLBOARD FIGURES.

Delaware Women Provide Muslin Raiment for Female Forms in Tights.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Sept. 16.—The feminine residents of Wyoming, a town near Dover, and the fruit centre of Delaware, will not allow the pictures of female acrobats in tights to be displayed on billboards. When the advance brigade of Haag's Circus struck the place recently every billboard was covered with gaudy lithographs in which figures of female performers, all in tights, were conspicuous.

The women of Wyoming, many of them Quakers, were shocked. They appealed in vain to have the display of sights removed, and to-day the problem was solved by the more progressive of the objectors, who bought large quantities of muslin and literally dressed the figures.

The showmen will find their posters decorously draped.

GAMBLERS RAIDED ON MITCHEL'S ORDER

Baker Gets Busy After the Acting Mayor's Letter Says Police Are "Grossly Negligent."

"CLUB" DOORS BATTERED IN

Inspector Walsh Leads His Men on Three Axe-Smashing Expeditions —Five Prisoners Taken.

Following the letter written to Police Commissioner Baker by Acting Mayor John Purroy Mitchel yesterday, in which he said that, from evidence in his hands, the police had been proved to be derelict in their duty so far as the enforcement of the laws against gambling and disorderly resorts were concerned, Inspector Richard Walsh got busy in his district last night, and within four hours raided three alleged gambling houses, captured a lot of paraphernalia, and landed five prisoners.

The places raided were the Hard Tack Social Club, at 877 Seventh Avenue; the Tiger Lily Club, at 103 West Forty-second Street, and a room on the second floor of Faust's restaurant building, at 311 West Fifty-ninth Street. All of the raids were spectacular, and in each case the invasion of the police was followed by the congregating of great crowds on the streets, who cheered or jeered, according to their sympathies, as they watched the police batter their way into the suspected places.

The evidence in the raids at 877 Seventh Avenue and at 103 West Forty-second Street followed the swearing out of warrants by a boyish-looking young man named Charles Jones, who, Inspector Walsh said, was a civilian employed by Police Commissioner Baker to get evidence against gambling houses and other illegal places. Inspector Walsh said that Jones was "a mighty smart fellow." None of the police would admit that Jones was from the office of Commissioner of Accounts Fosdick. It was Fosdick's men who got the evidence that called forth the Acting Mayor's letter to Commissioner Baker.

Done on Baker's Orders.

Both the Seventh Avenue and the Forty-second Street raids, it was stated, were Police Headquarters inspirations made by order of Police Commissioner Baker. The evidence on which the warrants were issued in those two cases was obtained several days ago by Jones, who is said to have played in both places.

Both raids got under way about the same time, Inspector Walsh being in personal command of the attack on the Hard Tack Club, while Lieuts. Belton and Rheinish of the Inspector's staff were in command of the expedition against the "Tiger Lilies."

With Walsh went a dozen policemen. The Inspector commanded the attack on the front door in Seventh Avenue, with Lieut. Radloff as wielder of the axe. Lieut. Scoble commanded in the rear to see that nobody got away, while on the roof Sergt. McGill was in command. It was 8:35 P. M. when Radloff swung the axe for the first blow.

The street door was a stout one, but it was as nothing compared to the second door at the top of the first flight of stairs. There the door was of the kind that Inspector Walsh described as "ice box"—a solid affair several inches thick and fitting into the frame like an iron safe door fits into a safe. Radloff had a hard time making an impression on the door, and it did not give way until he was reinforced by two policemen with crowbars. It took ten minutes to batter it down.

In the meantime McGill and his detachment of raiders were coming down into the room by way of the roof. Both invading parties met in the room about the same time. Had the raid been delayed an hour, the police are of the opinion that only bare walls and floors would have been left to reward them for their hard work. As it was, a roulette table that was in the place when Jones played there a few days ago was gone, while the numbered cloth that had covered the crap game table was also gone.

Besides the body of what had been the crap-game table there still remained in the room a big blackboard, believed to have been used in gambling on the races; four telephones, many chips, and several packs of cards, while pieces of paper found on the floor, when pieced together, proved to be racing charts, the police said. There were ten men, with one exception all very young, in the place when the police broke in. Most of them appeared to be greatly frightened.

For two of the ten in the room the police had Jones warrants. These two who were locked up in the West Forty-seventh Street Station, were Harry Walles, 22 years old, who said he was a machinist of 750 Seventh Avenue, and Patrick Cody. He said he was a clerk. Walles and Cody were charged with being "common gamblers," in violation of Section 970 of the Penal Code. The charter of the "Hard Tacks" was found. It was issued from the Secretary of State's office in Albany, and was signed by Second Deputy Secretary of State Horace G. Tennant.

Belton and Rheinish began operations against the Tiger Lily Club about the same time that Walsh and his men got busy in Seventh Avenue. This place is above a shoe store a few blocks west of Sixth Avenue. The lookout was reading a paper and was taken unawares, and Belton, followed by two of his men, was inside before the lookout could give an alarm. Rheinish watched the rear, while a policeman was on guard on the roof.

What the Police Found.

The police had to break down the door that opened into the alleged gambling room, which extends the entire length of the building. Inside they found a billiard table marked off in numbers such as is used as a crap game table, and dice, cards, &c. There were six men in the room, and three were arrested. They were Charles Brooks, 153 West Forty-ninth Street; Lee Curley, 215 Manhattan Avenue, and John Ferrone, a boy not more than 18 years old, of 239 East Forty-second Street. They were locked up on similar charges to those preferred against the "Hard Tack" prisoners.

The Fifty-ninth Street raid went wrong and all the police got was a roulette table, same poker chips, some dice, and several packs of cards. The policeman who had been assigned to get the evidence against this place was recognized and put out before he had time to find out "who was who." The police, led by Inspector Walsh and Capt. Thompson of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station, found 125 men and boys in it. Many of the men jumped from the rear windows and were captured by the rear guard. But nobody knew who

ALEXANDRA CLINGS TO HER QUEENSHIP

Commissions Tosti to Compose Music for a Royal Anthem in Her Honor.

100,000 PRAYER BOOKS LOST

Term Queen Mother Used in Them Caused Royal Intimation Which Sent Them to Scrap Heap.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Queen Alexandra has commissioned Sir Francis Tosti, composer of many famous songs, to write for her the music of a new song which it is her desire should become a sort of secondary national anthem. The title is to be "God Save Queen Alexandra."

This move on the part of the late King Edward's consort, which is as yet known only to a few people, is calculated to make a great sensation when the news becomes public. It is an interesting addition to what may be termed the psychology of Queen Alexandra's case. Readers of THE NEW YORK TIMES are already aware of her Majesty's reluctance to sink into the relative obscurity of Queen Dowager or Queen Mother, both of which titles are indeed abhorrent to her.

Her objections to that of Queen Mother cost one of the leading firms of publishers—that of Eyre & Spottiswoode—a considerable sum of money, for they have been obliged to consign to the dump heap some hundred thousand copies of the new edition of the Book of Common Prayer which they issued immediately after the death of King Edward, and in which the form of prayer for King Edward's relict was given as "For the Queen Mother." Queen Alexandra took early opportunity to signify her disapproval of the title, and had herself always described in The Court Gazette as "Queen Alexandra." Various institutions which she patronized were also informed they must go under the name of "Queen Alexandra's" home or institution, &c., while Eyre & Spottiswoode received a royal intimation that the Prayer Book with the Queen Mother designation was undesirable.

Queen Alexandra already has a royal standard of her own, she has already gathered around her a nucleus of a Court of her own, and in various other ways asserted her individuality. Her latest act in this direction—that of having the special hymn, "God Save Queen Alexandra," written and composed for her—will probably arouse more comment than any previous one. She has a certain quasi precedent for it, in that her late husband before he succeeded to the throne had a song, "God Save the Prince of Wales," written to relieve the monotony of always hearing the bands play "God Save the Queen" when he officiated at a public function in place of his mother. "God Save the Prince of Wales" never usurped the place of the national anthem, but was usually rendered as a second selection. Queen Alexandra's commission to Tosti is regarded as an indication of her intention to take a conspicuous part in public life, and in some quarters there is considerable speculation as to how long Queen Mary will acquiesce in her royal mother-in-law's ambition to keep the place of first lady in the land.

POLICE QUELL POLITICAL ROW

Hudson County Republicans Fight at a Committee Meeting.

Scenes of wild disorder, surpassing any witnessed at a political meeting in Hudson County in recent years, marked the meeting of the newly elected members of the Hudson County Republican Committee at Lincoln Hall, Jersey City Heights, at their attempt to organize and elect a Chairman and other officers last night. Anticipating trouble because of the bitter ill-feeling between the three factions —the regulars, the Dickinson supporters, and the new-idea man, Inspector Leonard and Capt. Toppin, with fifteen policemen, were stationed at the door to refuse admittance to all except those having credentials.

The main wrangle came over the election of the Chairman and the question as to whether he should be elected by a majority or plurality vote. A majority vote was decided upon, and after two ballots the regular candidate, Samuel Smith, was declared elected by a vote of 208 2-3 to 101 for Henry Frank, Jr., the Dickinson-New Idea candidate, and 91 1-3 for William Ely, the straight Dickinson candidate.

During the voting chairs were smashed in frequent rushes toward the platform. John Rotherham, the Temporary Chairman was forced to mount a table in order to make himself heard, and a picture of the late Vice President Hobart was thrown from the wall and shattered.

The police had to rush in every now and then to pull obstreperous members of the committee from the platform and from each other. After the election of Smith the members of the other factions hissed and jeered Prosecutor Garven and his supporters, who, by swinging enough of the Bayonne delegation to Smith, had made his election possible. All the other regular officers were elected without opposition. This restored control of the Republican Party in Hudson County once more to Rotherham, who was deposed about a year ago.

WOMEN LAY BRICKS IN BUILDING CHURCH

Jersey City Sect Determined the Edifice Shall Be Erected with Their Own Hands.

THE MEN CARRY THE HODS

Foundation and First Floor Finished and Two More Stories Are to Go Up.

Half a dozen women, their aprons bespattered with mortar, and trowels in their hands, labored beside about a dozen men, by lantern and torchlight last night, in building the first floor of a church on Wayne Street near Baldwin Avenue, Jersey City Heights. Faithfully the men, each carrying his load of mortar or bricks, toiled up the short ladders that led from the street; and faithfully, by the light of the flaring torches, the women laid on the bricks and laboriously plastered them into place. When a line of one brick's thickness was successfully laid along one wall, they rested for only a moment, uttering in chorus:

"Glory be!"

A surprised policeman who happened upon them in the midst of their labors was told that the work had been going on there for some time, and that the bricks and mortar, laid thus upon a woman suffrage or equal rights basis, would ultimately be the new Apostolic Church, whose congregation of about 300 members have hitherto been holding their worship in meeting rooms just adjoining the present site

The congregation, he was told, was determined that this should be, literally, their own church, and so had decided to build it, brick by brick, themselves. Incidentally, he was told, this would be most economical, as the work would be given quite free, and the building grow in exact proportion to the funds in hand to buy material.

Those engaged in the work would not tell anything about themselves. They merely said they were a sect that believed in taking all the old Bible doctrines literally. In charge of the work of construction was Mrs. Sarah B. Earle, pastor of the congregation. Among the other women, it was said, were five sisters, and another younger woman, said to be the daughter of a Confederate Colonel. All of them wore dark suits of heavy material, liberally sprinkled with lime and mortar.

Mrs. Earle finally explained that they were going to build a three-story structure on the lot, 67 feet long and 36 feet wide. It would have a basement, an auditorium on the second, and meeting rooms on the third floor. She said the original impetus had been given to her a few years ago when altogether, without solicitation on her part, small contributions began to pour in upon her, without any suggestion as to what should be done with them. She saved them until she had $700, and then broached to the congregation the plan of building a new church. It took at once.

They were balked for a while by the foundation, feeling that unless real masons should build this important groundwork, they would labor in vain who built it. Finally, she said, some member of the congregation who was in the building trade volunteered to look after the foundations. Thereafter another member of the congreation who was a bricklayer gave instructions to the rest in the gentle art of laying bricks, and after nightly rehearsals they were able to lay the bricks, men and women alike, to suit the most exacting boss. The head bricklayer of the congregation, it was said, was John Lutz. The members took part in the work in relays of eighteen or twenty persons.

Last night the first floor of the new building was almost completed before the men laid aside their hods and the women their trowels and aprons. All looked tired and ready for sound sleep. They said, however, that the work would be pushed steadily as fast as the material for building could be purchased.

BULKELEY PRAISES TAFT.

Also Says Every Pledge in Platform Has Been Redeemed.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 16.—Roosevelt's name was studiously avoided and Taft was extolled as the equal in greatness of any President at the banquet of the New Haven Young Men's Republican Club this afternoon. United States Senator Morgan G. Bulkeley, who fought tooth and nail to prevent the Connecticut delegation from being instructed for Taft two years ago, said to-day:

"I had the honor in the last campaign of voting for as great a President as we ever had—William H. Taft. You have never had a Congress more willing than the present one to carry out the pledges of the Republican Party. Every promise made in the platform on which Taft ran has been redeemed. The three Congresses of which I have been a member have been marked by progressive development in the policy of the Republican Party, and we can safely go before the people with the record we have made of pledges redeemed."

Ex-Gov. George P. McLean, who is Mr. Bulkeley's rival for election to the United States Senate, said:

"While we in Connecticut want to conserve our coal fields in Alaska, and our water power in the Rockies, we want to conserve our common sense in the present campaign. The air is charged with the scare microbe that brought panic and poverty in 1892. We have in Taft the safest, sanest, and most sympathetic President the country has ever had."

CALL BEEF CASE WITNESSES.

Twenty-five Packers Subpoenaed to Testify for the Government.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Subpoenas for twenty-five witnesses who will testify for the Government in the beef cases were issued to-day. It is probable that the total number of witnesses will run well over 100.

The subpoenas are returnable Nov. 1, and it is said that they were sent out at this time to keep the more important witnesses within the jurisdiction of the court.

Among those named in the papers are Charles Higgins, manager of the Boston branch house of Armour & Co.; Charles Barris, manager of the New York branch house of the National Packing Company; George W. Ballantyne, Vice President and General Manager of the Denver Stock Yards Company; Henry Gebhart, ex-President of the Colorado Packing and Provision Company; J. P. Lyman, President of the National Packing Company, and J. D. Standish, ex-Secretary of the National Packing Company.

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—A special dispatch to the Morgen Post from Fünfkirchen, Hungary, says that a formidable bomb was discovered yesterday lying on the track in front of Emperor William's train in which he was proceeding to the hunting lodge at Mohacs, twenty-five miles southeast of Fünfkirchen.

The correspondent adds that the bomb did not explode.

VAIL JURY DISAGREES.

President of Insurance Company to be Tried Again for Forgery.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Saturday, Sept. 17.—The jury in the case of Louis H. Vail, President of the Dutchess Fire Insurance Company, charged with forgery in the third degree, reported at 1:15 o'clock this morning that it was unable to agree.

The jurors, who had been out four hours, stood evenly divided, six for acquittal and six for conviction. They were discharged by Justice Morschauser. The case will be retried.

FINED FOR SPEEDING TO FIRE.

Mr. Sheppard Going to His Burning Factory When Police Stopped Him.

While dining at a Fifth Avenue hotel with his wife last night, Charles Sheppard of 8,905 Broadway, a member of the firm of E. R. Sheppard & Co., jewelry manufacturers at 13 Maiden Lane, learned over the telephone that his factory was afire, so he told Magistrate Butts in the Night Court. He had been taken there by Policeman McGrath, who said he caught Mr. and Mrs. Sheppard speeding down Fifth Avenue at Thirty-fifth Street at a rate of twenty miles an hour.

Mr. Sheppard insisted that he had gone only fifteen miles an hour, a rate which he did not think unlawful in view of the fire. But Magistrate Butts fined him $10.

WINSTED, Conn., Sept. 16.—When a fire occurred in Manchester yesterday the fire horses were not in the hose house, and E. L. G. Hohenthal, candidate for Governor on the Prohibition ticket, hitched his white steed to the truck and drove the members of Centre Hose 2 to the blaze.

The would-be Governor was cheered by pedestrians, and his button was more in demand to-day than ever.

EVANS'S FORTUNE SHRINKS.

$6,000,000 Estate of Famous Dentist Dwindles to $1,250,000.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—The estate of the late Dr. Thomas W. Evans, the Philadelphian who won fame and fortune as a society dentist in Paris, has dwindled from $6,000,000 to $1,250,000, according to an announcement published here to-day.

Dr. Evans left the bulk of the estate for the founding of a museum in this city. The shrinkage in the estate's value is due to the failure to realize upon much of the foreign realty, and litigation has also been a drain. Notwithstanding the shrinkage, the museum Trustees will not be compelled to alter the character of the building to be erected. The new institution will be allied with the University of Pennsylvania.

GETS $10,000 IF HE'S GOOD.

Will of Young Reid's Grandfather Provides for Five-Year Test.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Lucien Reid of La Crosse, Wis., must be good for the next five years if he wants to inherit $10,000 left him by his grandfather, Horace A. Taylor of Washington. The will was offered for probate to-day, and specifies that the money shall not go to young Reid until he is 25 years old. Reid is now 20.

The young man's college education will be paid for out of the Taylor estate, but whether he gets $10,000 at the completion of his four-year course is dependent upon his "character and habits."

His grandmother, Mrs. Harriet Dunnell Taylor, widow of the testator, and S. J. Bradford of Hudson, Wis., are named as executors, and are appointed under the terms of the will to judge whether the young man is eligible to the legacy.

DALY BOSTON'S FIRE HEAD.

Ex-Harvard Football Captain and Army Man Now Commissioner.

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—After having turned down one of Mayor Fitzgerald's nominees for Fire Commissioner the Civil Service Commission has approved of Charles Dudley Daly, the former Harvard football captain and army officer, appointed by the Mayor almost a month ago. Mr. Daly will take charge of the Fire Department at once, it is expected.

Mr. Daly is the youngest Fire Commissioner Boston ever has had. The Fire Commissioner's position was made vacant by the resignation of Samuel D. Parker when Mayor Fitzgerald took office.

CAN'T BAR LEPER'S CHILDREN

They Must Be Admitted to Public Schools Under Safeguards.

LANSING, Mich., Sept. 16.—That the four daughters of John Jensen, a leper isolated at Calumet, Mich., cannot be excluded from the public schools is the conclusion of Attorney General Kuhn.

In his opinion he states that thorough examination has revealed no trace of the disease in the daughters, and that they will not be a menace in the schools if they are disinfected, removed from their father and mother, and kept away from them during the school term, and if a monthly or bimonthly examination continues to show that they are free from the malady.

ROOSEVELT MAKES A MERRY SPEECH

Never Looks for Trouble, He Says, but When It Comes He Reaches for the Other Fellow.

HE'S HAVING A GOOD TIME

He Believes, He Says, People Can Govern Themselves, but He Also Believes It's His Duty to Govern Them Right.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt was the guest of honor at a dinner given by the Press Club last night, and, in an address more free from restraint than any he has made for some time, he spoke, both seriously and humorously, of his past work, took a shy at the bosses, paid a tribute to the newspaper men with whom he has had dealings, criticised the editors of several newspapers, without mentioning names, and seemed to be enjoying himself.

After the dinner the Colonel sat through a motion picture entertainment showing scenes of hunting wild animals in Africa. Among the guests at the table with him were Congressman William Sulzer, who is seeking the nomination for Governor on the Democratic ticket; Acting Mayor Mitchel, Sir Charles Treloar, once Lord Mayor of London; John A. Hennessy, John A. Sleicher, Public Service Commissioner Willcox, Douglas Robinson, and his sons Theodore Douglas Robinson, and Commissioner of Records Andrews.

Col. Roosevelt spoke of the courteous treatment he had received while in London, and wondered if that treatment would have been the same if he had made his famous Guild Hall speech first. In drinking a health to Mayor Gaynor, which followed the drinking of one to the President of the United States, Col. Roosevelt referred to Mr. Mitchel as one of the men who are helping to solve a most difficult problem of democratic government. Referring to the time he was Police Commissioner, the Colonel said New York City became virtuous for the first time in its history, and that a sigh of relief went up when he went back to Oyster Bay. His speech was punctuated every few minutes with applause and laughter, and he set everybody in a roar when he said in referring to the discussion of what should be done with the country's ex-Presidents:

"Nobody need bother about what they will do with this ex-President. He will do for himself."

The Colonel said he didn't believe there ever was a person that had a better time than himself, either when he was President or since, and he was going to continue having a good time. When he arrived from Europe, he said, he had no intention whatever of taking any part in public life, but he had got into the fight about the State Convention, "simply because I couldn't keep out of it," he explained, amid cheers, "and having got in, I am going to see it through."

Governing the People Right.

That brought him to the subject of William Barnes, Jr., about whom there was a song on the evening's programme, and of the Albany boss he said that Mr. Barnes believes that the people cannot govern themselves, and that therefore "it is his duty, and incidentally his interest, to govern them wrong. My belief is that the people can govern themselves, and that it is my duty to govern them right."

When the Colonel went on to say that he had always avoided trouble the laughter was too loud for him to continue for a minute.

"I have always done my best to avoid trouble," he continued when he could make himself heard. "I know the way of the man who seeks trouble with me once or twice, but if he presses me the third time he will have a scrap. And if he presses me enough he does not make me feel sorrowful, but he makes me want to reach him on the point of the jew."

Circumstances, he said, might interfere to prevent him having that pleasure, but if the opportunity came, he said, he would reach him.

Mr. Mitchel made a short speech, in which he said that for him to add to the humor of the occasion was, "in the words of a New York doctor, 'like carrying coals to Newcastle or epithets to Oyster Bay.'"

In introducing Mr. Roosevelt President Hennessy referred to the fact that Joseph Pulitzer, the proprietor of The New York World, and his sons were members of the club.

"And we know that there is a disagreement between The World and our distinguished and intellectual friend," went on Mr. Hennessy.

"There is," said Mr. Roosevelt, vigorously shaking his head.

Mr. Hennessy also referred to William R. Hearst, and said that while there may be no disagreement between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hearst, the latter was using the cable to give him advice.

His Two Cardinal Features.

"The two cardinal features of the policy for which I stand, said Col. Roosevelt, are, in the first place, that we have no room for the crook in public life, and in the second place, that the People are entitled to govern themselves. It is their duty to see that they govern themselves well.

"I trust that whatever I have done in public life warrants me in saying that I have never hesitated to protest against the popular judgment when I thought the judgment was wrong. I shall always stand for what I deem to be right, even if it is not popular, but I shall also stand for the rights of the people to decide for themselves whether my contention is or is not just. I do not believe in the boss, and I do believe in the leader, because the leader tries to lead, and the boss tries to drive.

"Democracy means popular government. It is the duty of every man in the first place to see that the people do control themselves, and in the next place that they exercise proper self-control. I hold that man to be a traitor to true Democracy who hesitates to stand against the people when they go wrong. I hold him a traitor to the people who hesitates to antagonize the people when the immutable laws of righteousness demands that he shall antagonize them.

The Molders of Opinion.

"The man holding public office has a position of peculiar importance, but it is not quite so important as the position of the man who, more than any other, makes up the mind of the public about public officials. [Applause.] In the right sense of the word the newspaper man, the man connected with the public press, including the magazines that deal with public questions, is more emphatically the public servant, than is the office holder, legislative or executive, himself. [Applause.]

The newspaperman who fearlessly says what is true, and would scorn to say what is false, stands on a somewhat higher eminence than any other man in this community; he renders a greater service than any other man in this community.

The newspaperman who shields corruption, and the newspaperman who defames honesty, stands on a lower level of infamy than the corrupt public official himself.

"I want to thank you most cordially and say how much it has meant to me to come here, and to realize that in spite of the almost unanimous verdict of the editorial column I still have friends who realize that according to the light that is in me I am fighting and shall continue to fight, come weal or woe, for the principles of right and of decency and of clean and straight living in American life."

THE COLONEL TAKES CHARGE.

Running His Own Campaign Now—Has Lost Richmond Delegates.

Col. Roosevelt stepped in yesterday and took personal charge of his own campaign for his election as temporary Chairman of the Republican State Convention. Incidentally, he added Representative Herbert Parsons to the number of his lieutenants. Col. Roosevelt let it be known to his followers yesterday that no offense was meant when he asked Mr. Parsons to add his skill as a tactician and a strategist to the undaunted courage and bubbling optimism of Lloyd C. Griscom, his successor as President of the New York County Republican Committee, who thus far has had sole charge of the Roosevelt forces.

It was nearly 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon when the Colonel emerged from his office in The Outlook establishment and, mopping his brow, said with a good deal of emphasis:

"By George, this has been a busy day."

"Hast it been a satisfactory one?" Col. Roosevelt was asked by one inquisitive reporter.

"I have nothing to say; I shall say nothing whatever on any subject," Col. Roosevelt replied.

This was after a score or more visitors from all parts of the State, most of them bent on political errands, had seen the Colonel singly or in groups. Some of them came to assure the Colonel of their unswerving loyalty to tell him how glad they were that he was back on the job. But some of them came to tell the Colonel a different story.

Cromwell Is Against Him.

Among the latter was Borough President Cromwell of Richmond. John Timlin, Jr., the nominal Republican leader in Richmond, held Mr. Cromwell's proxy at the meeting of the Republican State Committee some weeks ago when Col. Roosevelt was defeated and Vice President Sherman was selected to deliver the keynote speech at the Republican State Convention. Mr. Timlin voted against the selection of Mr. Roosevelt and for the Vice President, but Col. Roosevelt's friends have since stated that this was done under a misapprehension, and that when the proper time came the organization in Richmond would be for the Colonel and his policies.

When Mr. Cromwell called on Col. Roosevelt yesterday it was apparent that it cost him a great deal to impart to the Colonel the message he had to convey. The Colonel would say nothing about it himself, but Mr. Cromwell frankly admitted that he and his delegation of eight would be against Col. Roosevelt at Saratoga.

"I have reached this conclusion after thinking the matter over most carefully," said Mr. Cromwell, "and I hear nothing but commendation from my people in Richmond."

"Does this mean that you will be against direct nominations, too?" Mr. Cromwell was asked.

"Well," he replied, "I am for some form of direct primaries, but it must be a very mild form. I am an anti-Hughes man anyhow. You can put that down."

Betts is for "Harmony."

State Committeeman Charles H. Betts, whose name recently has been dragged so unpleasantly into the evidence presented at the legislative graft investigation, was one of the earliest callers at The Outlook office. He voted for Col. Roosevelt at the meeting of the State Committee after certain requests he had made to State Chairman Woodruff had not been met. Since then he has been fluctuating between the Roosevelt camp and the headquarters of the Old Guard. In his talk with Col. Roosevelt yesterday he did not make it very clear where he stood, and in the Roosevelt camp there is a distinct feeling that he may desert to the enemy provided he is able to make the right kind of a deal. Mr. Betts told his friends that he was for "harmony," though he did not say whether the harmony was to have Roosevelt or the Old Guard on top.

Col. Roosevelt learned for the first time yesterday that many Republican politicians who had received favors at his hands and on whose support he had counted are really on the fence. Ex-Congressman Lucius N. Littauer of Gloversville, who once was a very warm friend of Col. Roosevelt, has not made up his mind yet whether to be for or against him in the coming fight.

"I know little about the situation," said Mr. Littauer after a talk with the Colonel. "I have been away for two months, and all I know is that since I left for Europe we have got into a bad mix. I am returning to my home now to learn what my people want and try to bring about some kind of harmony."

Good News from Brooklyn.

From Brooklyn Col. Roosevelt got glad news. Controller Prendergast, Naval Officer Kracke, Postmaster Voorhies, Mr. Griscom, Representative Parsons, and Senator J. Mayhew Wainwright of Westchester saw the Colonel together and had a long conference with him, at which a good deal was done in the way of making plans of war. Controller Prendergast told the Colonel that, despite appearances, he might rely upon it that he would have more of the delegates from Kings than would Republican State Chairman Woodruff, though Kings is his political bailiwick.

Among the other callers were Senator Harvey D. Hinman of Binghamton, author of the Direct Nominations bill and leader of the Hughes forces in the Senate at the last session of the Legislature. Mr. Hinman was sounded as to his willingness to accept a place on the State ticket. Representative Hamilton Fish of Dutchess, leader of the insurgents in the House, was another caller. So was Senator George H. Cobb of Jefferson, who told the Colonel the delegates from his district would be with him through thick and thin; Attorney General O'Malley, who said he had just dropped in to pay his repects; Postmaster James H. Callanan of Schenectady, Henry L. Stimson, and Representative William S. Bennet.

Postmaster Callanan is a Roosevelt appointee, whose district comes within the Congressional district dominated by William Barnes, Jr., the Republican boss of Albany. Mr. Callanan would not discuss his talk with Col. Roosevelt.

Barnes Assaults Again.

Mr. Barnes presided at Republican State Headquarters yesterday in the absence of State Chairman Woodruff. One of the first things he did was to hand a statement containing this:

> No amount of political manoeuvring, use of patronage, or personal abuse can in the slightest degree obscure the one issue, which must be fought out to a finish at Saratoga. There will be determined the future of the Republican Party in the State of New York for some years to come. That party must determine in its platform whether it will be recognized as the conserving force which has been its history, or whether it will follow the radical policies of Mr. Roosevelt and lose the strategic position which it has held in the State of New York for many years as the party of sanity and the protector of industry, upon which the world of business and labor must depend.
> If it does not hold to its time-honored and successful principles, but seeks for new gods to worship, its mistake will be taken advantage of by its adversary. No radical candidate has ever carried the State of New York. Progress in political life is essential to any party, but the State leadership which relies for its strength upon inciting the mob can never, even if it tries, stem the tide which it has created.

When Col. Roosevelt was told of what Mr. Barnes had said he dictated this reply:

> I am indeed blessed in my enemies. I am very genuinely grateful to Mr. Barnes for having unconsciously made the issue so clear between what he is pleased to call Roosevelitism on the one side and on the other side the alliance of the boss with that element of big business which seeks to control politics in connection with business.

Col. Roosevelt will start for Syracuse at 7:45 o'clock this morning. He is to speak at the State fair this afternoon and spent a part of his time yesterday dictating his speech.

COL. GRUBER DROPS A ROOSEVELT BOMB

But the County Committee Puts It Gently on the Table, with Some Haste.

CHEERS FOR TAFT LOUDEST

Fair Applause for the Colonel, Too, at Annual Meeting and Some Strong Anti-Machine Talks.

An anti-Roosevelt resolution dropped like a thunderbolt from a clear sky into the annual meeting of the Republican County Committee last night.

Officers had already been elected and the business of the meeting was almost finished when Col. Abraham Gruber, leader of the Seventeenth Assembly District, marched up the main aisle of Eldorado Hall at Fifty-second Street and Seventh Avenue, his eyes dancing with the joy of getting up some excitement. He handed a tiny slip of paper which looked harmless to Secretary Boyle.

"This is a resolution, and I ask that it be read," said Col. Gruber, bowing urbanely to Lloyd C. Griscom, who had just been re-elected President of the County Committee.

Mr. Griscom looked nervous. The meeting was just adopting rules to govern the committee for the ensuing year. After the rules had been adopted came the resolution—this:

> Resolved, That the Republican County Committee disapproves as unjust and dangerous to the liberties of the people the utterances of ex-President Roosevelt in respect to the Judges of the United States Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals.

Instantly there came hisses from every part of the hall. Col. Gruber stood smiling in the centre aisle enjoying the scene. As quickly as he could get to his feet Colin H. Woodward, Republican leader of the Twenty-third, moved that the resolution be laid on the table, and this was carried with a roar that shook the ceiling. Then before anything else could happen somebody moved that the meeting adjourn. It did quickly.

Col. Gruber said afterward that he meant no harm, and had not come to the meeting with the intention of introducing the resolution, but he had changed his mind after slurring references had been made to Vice President Sherman.

"I just wanted to show them that not every member of the County Committee is a Roosevelt man," said Col. Gruber.

The reference to Vice President Sherman was made by S. Clinton Crane, a young man from the Twenty-third. In nominating Mr. Woodward, his leader, for First Vice President of the Republican County Committee, he referred to "one Vice President who at a crisis in the country's history had served the Nation well and would be of great service to his party in this State before long," and compared him with another Vice President "whom the people were only too happy to forget until he aspired to become temporary Chairman of a Republican Convention."

The slighting allusion to Vice President Sherman did not make a hit with the committee. Many members began to stamp, and the speaker finished his nominating speech with the din of dissent ringing through the hall.

The meeting, however, afforded an opportunity to gauge the sentiment for Col. Roosevelt in the organization from which he must expect his main support at the Saratoga Convention. Every time his name was mentioned there was generous applause, though not by far such hearty acclaim as greeted the references made to President Taft. John Henry Hammond, former leader of the Twenty-ninth, without mentioning Col. Roosevelt's name in a speech he made, took emphatic exception to all that he has said in criticism of the courts and in favor of the "New Nationalism," and was applauded for it. Coupled with this undercurrent of disapproval of the more radical utterances of the Colonel, however, there was unqualified denunciation of the Old Guard and the present leadership in the State which caused the wildest applause. There seemed to be a studied effort to give generous approval to the Taft Administration.

Otto T. Bannard was made temporary Chairman of the meeting. He began by thanking them for the honor that had befallen him.

"Greater men than I are struggling over a similar much coveted position in a much larger gathering which will occur on the 27th of this month," said Mr. Bannard.

Mr. Hammond, in nominating Mr. Griscom, said:

"The Black Horse Cavalry, in whatever guise, must be routed; grafting must be stopped; the Old Guard must be beaten, for, unfortunately, the Old Guard is associated with the Black Horse Cavalry and its trail of scandal and corruption, and it has constantly been in opposition to the reforms for which the Republican Party stands. The success of the Old Guard in September will mean defeat at the polls in November."

President Griscom, in response to his election, thanked the members of the committee for their support.

"I have felt it my duty to uphold the hands of that great man—that great occupant of the White House," said he. "I believe we should continue to help William H. Taft in the great work he is doing in carrying out the pledges made by our party."

The officers elected were: Lloyd C. Griscom, President; Collin H. Woodward, First Vice President; Joseph Levenson, Second Vice President; Ogden L. Mills, Treasurer; John Boyle, Jr., Secretary, and Edward Montgomery, Sergeant at Arms.

Mr. Griscom said in reply to a question that Col. Roosevelt would favor the most generous indorsement of the Taft Administration.

WHITE TO GREET ROOSEVELT.

Politicians Pouring Into Syracuse to Hear Speech at State Fair.

SYRACUSE, Sept. 16.—Political leaders and politicians from all parts of the State are gathering in Syracuse to hear the address by Col. Theodore Roosevelt at the State Fair to-morrow afternoon. Belief is current that the Colonel's speech will be his most important utterance since his return from Africa.

The State Fair Commission has provident. Lieut. Gov. Horace White, as President of the commission, will receive the Colonel. The latter will be accompanied by Douglas Robinson, his cousin. After the address the Colonel will watch the automobile races.

Chairman Woodruff of the Republican State Committee will hear Col. Roosevelt's address and it is expected that the two will meet. They have not met since the State Committee selected Vice President Sherman as temporary Chairman of the Saratoga Convention. To-night a dinner to Chairman Woodruff was given at the Hotel Onondaga by members of the State Fair Commission and prominent horse show exhibitors.

Speaker James W. Wadsworth, Jr., in an interview here to-day, said there was no doubt that the Saratoga convention would ratify the selection of Sherman as temporary chairman.

Thirty thousand persons attended the State Fair to-day. The exposition closes to-morrow with Roosevelt Day and the commissioners are preparing to handle a crowd of at least 50,000 persons. Extra precautions will be taken to safeguard the ex-President.

A HEARST COLONEL CALLS

And Thinks Later That Roosevelt May Welcome Hearst's Aid.

A visit of Col. John Temple Graves, one of William R. Hearst's editors, to Col. Roosevelt at The Outlook office yesterday recalled the recent invitation cabled by Mr. Hearst from Paris to Col. Roosevelt to return to New York and fight against the bosses, and promise in that case that Hearst would be with him. Mr. Roosevelt's reply was that he was coming back and that he would welcome aid from any quarter.

The Colonels had a long conversation yesterday, but it was noticed that Col. Graves was not ushered into the private sanctum of Col. Roosevelt, but received in the big room.

Those who saw Mr. Graves leave the building declare that he made tracks for a cable office. Later, when asked if Col. Roosevelt would welcome the aid of Mr. Hearst in his fight on the bosses, he replied:

"I guess that is about right."

Col. Roosevelt entered a blanket refusal to discuss his talks with any of his visitors.

TAFT'S ATTITUDE ON 1912.

Would Be Gratified by Renomination if Country and Party Approve.

BEVERLY, Mass., Sept. 16.—The publication of a story in certain newspapers yesterday afternoon and this morning purporting to come from Beverly and announcing that President Taft had decided to step aside as a Presidential candidate in 1912 to make way for Col. Theodore Roosevelt brought many inquiries to the Summer capital to-day. For a time an official denial was considered, but it was decided not to dignify the story, which is reported to be without any foundation whatever, with a statement.

It can be stated that there has been no change in President Taft's attitude toward a second term since he told a number of friends a few months ago that he would accept a second nomination if his party desired to tender it to him, and if that portion of the American people represented by his party seemed to want him.

The President, it is said, is not considering his chances for a second term one way or the other at this time. From the first he has said that he would devote himself to carrying out as nearly as possible the pledges of that platform on which he was elected for a four-year term. Mr. Taft, it is pointed out, does not know how to play politics, and he has been quoted as saying that he would not do so if he could. The fact that he has often in his speeches referred to the fact that he has only the remainder of his present term to serve means, it is stated here, that Mr. Taft does not feel that he can nominate himself and that he will not make a political bid for the nomination.

If, at the end of his term, his party feels he has been true to his trust and has carried out its pledges in so far as he possibly could, it no doubt would be very gratifying to the President to have his Administration indorsed. That, he feels, is for the country and his party to decide, not himself.

TAFT AT WORK ON SPEECH.

Will Discuss River and Harbor Appropriations at Cincinnati.

Special to The New York Times.

BEVERLY, Mass., Sept. 16.—There was political quiet to-day at Beverly. During the long, sunny afternoon President Taft worked on the speech he is to deliver at Cincinnati next week. His only engagements for the afternoon were with Senator Lodge and Claude Grahame-White, the aviator. Secretary Norton went away early to join his family on Long Island for the week end, and will join the President at New Haven on Monday.

The Cincinnati speech will be an enlargement of the ideas which the President expressed in a memorandum at the time he signed the last river and harbor appropriation law. As it will be delivered on the occasion of the completion of a dam for the improvement of the Ohio River, the President thought it a fitting time to press before the public the necessity for more methodical and economical procedure in legislation for waterways.

The President did not feel warranted in vetoing the last River and Harbor bill because of legislative conditions prevailing at that time, but he is now more determined than ever that such wasteful appropriations as were carried by that measure shall not be authorized again during his term if he can prevent it.

As soon as he completes this speech he intends to give attention to his address before the League of Republican Clubs in New York. He has not fully determined how extended an address he will make, but is considering some topics that would be likely to be of public interest.

The plans for his trip covering the next two weeks have been completed. The President is looking forward to a pleasant stay in Cincinnati, where he will occupy the residence of Charles P. Taft. Besides receiving Ohio politicians and personal friends, he hopes for time to play a few games of golf.

He expects that his week in Washington will be a busy one. Much public business awaits his attention there.

TWO VOTES ONLY FOR BENNET

Indorsement of His Gubernatorial Boom by County Leaders Fails.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Republican County Committee held prior to the annual meeting, last night tabled a resolution presented by Senator Alexander Brough, leader of the Nineteenth Assembly District, indorsing the candidacy of Representative William S. Bennet for the Gubernatorial nomination. Only two votes, those of Senator Brough and Col. Abraham Gruber, were recorded in favor of it. It was explained afterward that several members of the committee declared that no discourtesy to Mr. Bennet was intended, and that they liked him very much, but had some very live candidates in their own districts.

Alderman B. W. B. Brown, leader of the Twenty-seventh, reminded the other members that Henry L. Stimson was a resident of his district; C. K. Lexow of the Sixteenth said he would present the name of President William R. Willcox of the Public Service Commission to the Saratoga Convention; William Chilvers of the Twenty-ninth said that with Senator Root, Joseph Choate, and Otto T. Bannard dwelling in his district he couldn't very well, at this time, indorse the candidacy of an outsider.

DWIGHT WINS IN TOMPKINS.

Will Have Majority of County Delegates to Congressional Convention.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Congressman John W. Dwight, Republican whip in the National House of Representatives, apparently won a decisive victory to-day in the primaries in Tompkins County.

Late returns indicate that he will have 105 out of the 135 delegates from this county to the Congressional District Convention.

DRUGGIST HELD FOR MISTAKE

Baby Died and Doctors Testify Prescription Was Wrongly Filled.

Charged with improperly compounding a prescription, Jacob Halper, a pharmacist, who has a store at 2,102 Amsterdam Avenue, was held by Magistrate Herrman in $500 bail for trial yesterday. The offense charged is a misdemeanor, as provided in Section 1,742 of the Penal laws.

The complaint is made by Miss Lina D. Lindsley, a trained nurse, and there are supporting affidavits by Dr. S. Dana Hubbard of 145 West 103d Street, who wrote the prescription, and Dr. Atkins of the Board of Health, who analyzed the drug that was prepared.

The prescription, it is said, specified powders made of mercury and chalk, and Dr. Atkins says he found bichloride of mercury and calcium carbonate.

The powders were for a 14-day-old child at 502 West 135th Street, who died on June 12. Her death occurred shortly after she had been given one of the powders by Miss Lindsley, but Coroner Physician O'Hanlon reported that an autopsy had revealed that the child died from colitis, a natural cause. On that account Halper never figured publicly in the case until Miss Lindsley applied for the warrant. He had nothing to say in court this morning.

OLD MAN A SUICIDE TO SAVE HIS PRIDE

Decorator Threatened with Arrest by Wife, Said He'd Die Rather Than Submit.

SHOTS WILD, JUMP TO STREET

Nine-Year-Old Son Saw Father Try to Send a Bullet Into His Head—Second Son Sees Him Fall.

John Trincke, a feeble old man, who had spent most of his life as a decorator of furniture, learned a few days ago that he was likely to be arrested on complaint of his wife, who frequently quarreled with him because he could get little or no work. Trincke declared that if the police came to arrest him he would not be taken alive. He bought a revolver with which to keep his word.

Last night a policeman went for the old man, and the decorator was true to his promise. Five times he pulled the trigger of his revolver, and, failing to reach a vital spot, sprang from the fourth-story window of his apartment, at 402 East Sixteenth Street, and plunged, dying, to the street below.

The old man's suicide was witnessed by his son John, who had been playing in the street not far from the stoop. It was John who first reached the dying man's side and who lifted his head as he passed away.

Joseph Trincke, another son, was in the Trincke apartment and saw his father trying to send a bullet into his brain. The child, who is only 10 years old, cowered in bed, too frightened to cry out.

John Trincke, his wife, and their two children lived for many years in the small apartment near the top floor of the East Sixteenth Street house. Trincke had many friends in the neighborhood. He was admired for his art. Those who knew him well say that at one time he was one of the most skilled decorators of furniture in the city.

The large dealers in antique furniture used to send their most valuable pieces to Trincke to be restored, and his pride in his work was well-known in the neighborhood.

But of late years the old man's eyesight was not good. His hand, too, had lost its cunning, and work began to fall away. Sometimes he had difficulty in getting the rent money together. Mrs. Trincke, who is twenty years younger than her husband, found fault with him, the neighbors say. They often quarreled. The two children, John and Joseph, often witnessed these quarrels. Their sympathies seemed to lie with their father.

On Monday last Mrs. Trincke went to the Yorkville Court and obtained a warrant for her husband's arrest on a charge of disorderly conduct. He was to have appeared before the Magistrate there on Tuesday. But Mr. Trincke did not appear.

"If they come to arrest me, they will never get me alive," said Trincke to Mrs. Marjory Renart, who has charge of an apartment building near his home. "I have some pride left. I have never been arrested, and never will be."

Trincke also told this to others in the house. Moreover, he showed some of the tenants a revolver he had bought.

Mrs. Trincke left the house when the warrant was issued, and did not return. Instead she went to a house in 143d Street, where she engaged lodgings. The two children stayed with their father, and he did the cooking and housework in the absence of the mother.

Last night Trincke and his son Joseph went to bed early. They slept together. John, the elder son, had a key and stayed outside playing. Along about 9:30 o'clock Policeman Simon Schaefer of the special court squad arrived at No. 402 with a warrant for Trincke. He was directed to the fourth floor, but instead of rapping at Trincke's door he called at an adjoining apartment and asked where Trincke lived.

Trincke heard the conversation in the hall. Apparently he surmised what was wanted. Little Joseph also guessed, and began to cry. His father told him to be a good boy. He was still trying to soothe the child when there came a rap on the door.

Trincke ran to his bureau, snatched out his revolver, and standing in the middle of the room, began to fire. But his hand must have trembled, for all the bullets went wild except one, and that merely plowed along the skin of his cheek. There were only five bullets in the revolver, and he fired them all.

The policeman thought at first that Trincke was trying to shoot him, but as no bullets came through the door he determined that he was wrong. Putting his shoulder against the door he broke into the room. Trincke was just scrambling through the front window. Schaefer grabbed the old man by the wrist as he reached the fire escape, but Trincke broke from his grasp, balanced himself an instant on the fire escape, then plunged head downward. He landed on the pavement and lay there quite still. An ambulance soon arrived and started with Trincke for Bellevue, but at the hospital it was found that he was dead.

Policeman Schaefer was much affected by the tragedy. He said that he blamed himself for not having gone for the old man in the daytime. Tears were in the policeman's eyes when he was accosted by little Joseph Trincke, who said:

"If it were not for you, officer, I would still have a father."

GAMBLERS RAIDED ON MITCHEL'S ORDER

the proprietor or his agents were and no arrests were made.

This raid drew the biggest crowd of all three. It was also by far the finest fitted up of any of the places that were raided last night.

The prisoners arrested last night will be arraigned in the West Side Court this morning.

MITCHEL STIRS UP BAKER.

Sends Him a List of Gambling Places That Are Running Openly.

Acting Mayor John Purroy Mitchel wrote to Police Commissioner Baker yesterday informing him that the police at present are "grossly derelict" in their enforcement of the laws against gambling and disorderly resorts. The Acting Mayor based his letter on the reports made to him by men in whom he has confidence, none of whom is identified with the Police Department. With the letter went a list of eleven gambling houses and fifty-five disorderly resorts entered by the special investigators, sent out from the office of the Commissioner of Accounts. Another list contained a much larger number of addresses of houses against which complaints have been received from citizens, in a number of instances the complaints being from mothers whose sons had lost their money in the gambling places complained of. It was said that at least one hundred additional houses of bad repute were also named in these complaints.

The sending of the letter to Commissioner Baker followed conferences in which the Police Commissioner and District Attorney Whitman took part. Mr. Baker was ordered to get evidence against the places referred to in the letter and to turn that evidence over to the District Attorney. Mr. Whitman stands ready to prosecute as fast as the evidence necessary to base an indictment is presented to him.

After the conference the officials were averse to going into details as to the questions they had discussed, although it was admitted that it was the gambling and disorderly house situation that was responsible for the conference.

"It is too bad that New York with its 11,000 policemen should be troubled with this question," remarked District Attorney Whitman.

In his letter to Commissioner Baker the Acting Mayor said:

"During the past few weeks a large number of complaints of the prevalence of gambling and open vice throughout the city have been received at the Mayor's office. Some of these complaints were forwarded to you for investigation and report. Particularly on the 16th day of August I sent you a letter through the Executive Secretary, in which were transmitted about 100 addresses at which, complaints alleged, open vice was practiced.

"The particular complaints, together with many others not transmitted to your office, have been investigated by Inspectors under my direct supervision, with the result that it is apparent to me that the police are grossly derelict in their failure to enforce the law in these respects. My examination shows not only that poolrooms are in open operation but that other forms of gambling abound throughout the city, and are practiced with apparent assurance of security on the part of the managers of the resorts.

"Flagrant vice and public solicitation have for some time been notorious. The evidence in my hands established to my satisfaction that this condition is general on the main thoroughfares of the city, and that conditions in certain hotels and supposed private houses are such as to indicate that little or no restraint has been attempted by the police. In some sections of the city open solicitation from doors and windows is general.

"In the letter of Aug. 16 I caused your attention to be specifically drawn to premises on West Thirty-second and Thirty-third Streets, concerning which many complaints have been received. Inspections made subsequent thereto established that the conditions had only been aggravated by the steps taken by the Police Department. Presumably in pursuance of orders uniformed officers are stationed on these streets. While these men walked up and down in the ostensible performance of their duties solicitation from doors and windows continued within their sight and hearing, and certain of the houses were entered by numerous men while the officer on post stood by, indifferent to what was patent to any person upon the street.

"I understand that according to the usual practice of the department, my letter of Aug. 16 was referred in the regular course to the Inspector of the district and the Captain of the precinct concerned. This being so, it is manifest that both the Inspector and the Captain had ample notice of the breaches of the law complained of.

"In the course of but a few days of examination my Inspectors easily gained access to eleven separate gambling houses or pool rooms, and witnessed and secured evidence of gambling therein. The reports show that in some of the places there were congregated as many as 200 men at one time.

"From the foregoing I am convinced that the conditions concerning which evidence has been brought to me, could not have existed or continued without the connivance of the police. I need not mince words with you. A situation of this kind presents unquestionable evidence of irregularity and flagrant violation of official responsibility.

"You will at once place on trial the responsible officers in the Thirty-second Street case, and in any other cases where you can prove notice, and you will further take such steps as in your judgment may be necessary to cope with the situation.

"While responsibility in the premises rests upon the Commissioner of Police, who is fully clothed with the means and power to correct the conditions, I suggest that the following additional means might be immediately and effectively employed.

"Section 973 of the Penal Law provides as follows:

> Any corporation or association, or the officers thereof, or any copartnership or individual who keeps a room, [illegible] tent, tenement, booth, building, float, or vessel, or any part thereof to be used for gambling or for any purpose or in any manner forbidden by this article, or for making any wagers or bets made to depend upon any lot, chance, casualty, unknown or contingent event, or on the future price of stocks, bonds, securities, commodities, or property of any description whatever, or for making any contract for or on account of any money, property, or thing in action, so bet or wagered, or being the owner or agent, knowingly lets or permits the same to be so used, is guilty of a misdemeanor. This section shall not be extended so as to prohibit or in any manner affect any insurance made in good faith for the security or indemnity of the party insured and which is not otherwise prohibited by law, nor to any contract on bottomry or respondentia.

"The courts have held in numerous cases that a notice to an owner of the character of the occupancy of his building constitutes knowledge to him thereafter of the maintenance of a nuisance therein. I suggest:

1. That you immediately serve a personal notice upon each owner or agent of the premises named in the accompanying schedule, marked Schedule A, of the character of the occupancy of his house.
2. That you at the same time transmit to the District Attorney a notice of the character of these premises and of your action in notification to the owners.
3. That you cause continued investigations and inspections to be made to determine whether the nuisance continues upon the premises, and that if you find a continuance you forthwith notify the District Attorney, and place in his hands the evidence thereof.
4. That you cause to be inspected the premises contained in the accompanying schedule, marked Schedule B, which have not been investigated by my Inspectors, and that you adopt the same method with respect to notice to all parties as above outlined.
5. That you cause to have immediately prepared a list of all known or suspected gambling houses or poolrooms within the City of New York, and that you transmit to each District Attorney of the counties lying within the city a separate list of the premises of this character located within his respective jurisdiction.

It was stated that the gambling places and disorderly resorts, the location of which were sent to Commissioner Baker yesterday, are scattered all over Manhattan and the Bronx, from the Battery almost to the northern limits of the adjoining borough. The complaints have been coming into the Acting Mayor's office for over a month, and on Aug. 16 100 of these complaints were sent to Mr. Baker for investigation.

"I acted as I have," said Mr. Mitchel yesterday afternoon, "because I did not intend to let the city get away from me while Mayor Gaynor is away. I believe and know, as does practically every well-informed person in the city, that the Police Inspectors and Captains, if they see fit to do it, can prevent the operation of gambling houses and keep vice in this city within decent bounds."

One of the reporters present when Mr. Mitchel gave out the copy of his letter told him that he had been informed by a man who is familiar with the gambling situation in New York that no less than 1,500 gambling houses are in operation in the city.

"That is possible," Mr. Mitchel answered.

ARREST CONEY HOTEL MEN.

One Woman Proprietor Also in Inspector Russell's Police Net.

Nine proprietors of Coney Island Hotels were arrested at midnight on warrants issued by Justice Dike in the Brooklyn County Court yesterday afternoon, charging them with keeping disorderly resorts. The warrants, which were obtained on evidence submitted to the Grand Jury by Assistant District Attorneys Elder and John F. Clark of Brooklyn, were handed over to Inspector Russell, who, with Lieut. Costigan and fifteen detectives of his staff, rounded up the proprietors. It was rumored that seventeen warrants had been returned altogether and that a second round of arrests would follow early this morning.

Only the first of those arrested denied that he was the proprietor of the hotel, alleging that he was merely in business as a souvenir vender. The arrested proprietors are Charles Kojan, Bank Hotel; Edward Kojan, the Surf Avenue Opera House; Harry O'Brien, Clarendon Hotel; James Morano, Village Hotel; Otto Ernstein, Casino Hotel; Amelie Endres, Arlington Hotel; Henry Connors, Imperial Music Hall; Thomas Gallagher, Exchange Hotel, and Margaret White, Belmont Hotel.

profits then accrued and payable to the said party of the first part out of the Chanler estate trust such part of the aforesaid sum of $20,000 as may remain due and unpaid, and upon the receipt thereof, receipts, acquittances, and other sufficient discharges for him and in his name to make, seal, and deliver; but should the yearly income, interest, rents, and profits payable to the said party of the first part out of the said Chanler estate trust fund not be sufficient to pay the said party of the second part the sum remaining due to her and unpaid, then the party of the first part doth hereby make, constitute, and appoint the party of the second part his true and lawful attorney, irrevocable, for him and in his name, place, and stead to collect at the periods aforesaid out of the income, interest, rents, and profits then accrued and payable to the said party of the first part by the New York Life Insurance and Trust Company of 52 Wall Street, New York City, aforesaid, such part of the sum hereinbefore provided for that may then remain due and unpaid, and upon the receipt thereof receipts, acquittances, and other sufficient discharges for him and in his name to make, seal, and deliver, but should the income, interest, rents, and profits payable to the said party of the first part by the New York Life Insurance and Trust Company of 52 Wall Street aforesaid be insufficient to pay to the said party of the second part the sums still remaining due to her and unpaid, the said party of the first part doth hereby make, constitute, and appoint the party of the second part his true and lawful attorney, irrevocable, for him and in his name, place, and stead to collect at the periods aforesaid out of the income, interest, rents, and profits then accrued and payable to the party of the first part by the Union Trust Company, 80 Broadway, New York City, aforesaid, any part of the sum hereinbefore provided for that may then still remain due and unpaid, and upon the receipt thereof receipts, acquittances, and other sufficient discharges for him and in his name to make, seal, and deliver.

Must Pay Cost of Transfer.

Lastly, this indenture witnesseth that the said party of the first part doth hereby covenant to pay any transfer or other duties or costs of recording, or other expenses whatsoever which may be due in respect of these presents, and further, that he, the said party of the first part, has a good title and valid right to convey the above property and that he will perform, execute, or do all such acts, deeds, and things as may be requisite or necessary and whenever called upon so to do for the carrying into effect of these presents, or further assuring the same in favor of the said party of the second part.

In witness whereof the parties hereto have hereunto set their hands and seals the day and year first above written.

ROBERT WINTHROP CHANLER.
NATALINA (called Lina) CAVALIERI.

Signed, sealed, and delivered by the above-named Robert Winthrop Chanler and Natalina, (otherwise Lina,) Cavalieri, in the presence of Hanson C. Coxe, C. O. Maughan, 54, Faubourg, St. Honore, Paris.

The document bears the certificate of the United States Consul General at Paris, as follows:

Republic of France, City of Paris.
United States Consulate General.

I, Hanson C. Coxe, Deputy Consul General of the United States of America, at Paris, Republic of France, duly commissioned and qualified, do certify that on this 31st day of May, 1910, before me personally appeared Robert Winthrop Chanler and Natalina, commonly called Lina, Cavalieri, to me personally known and known to me to be the individuals described in, and whose names are subscribed to, and who executed the foregoing instrument, and being by me informed of the contents of said instrument, they severally acknowledged to me that they executed the same freely and voluntarily for the uses and purposes therein mentioned.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and official seal, the day and year last above written.

HANSON C. COXE,
Deputy Consul General, United States of America, at Paris, France.

The agreement bears the Consular stamp, for which Chanler paid $2. The date of the acknowledgment is May 31, 1910. The document was filed at the Register's office at 12:30 o'clock yesterday, the recording fees being $6.75. The document is recorded under the head of conveyances, and under the head of miscellaneous papers.

Debts May Tie Up the Estate.

Edward E. Perkins, counsel for the estate of Robert W. Chanler, before going to Poughkeepsie said to a reporter yesterday afternoon:

"I have in my possession bills from creditors of Mr. Chanler amounting to at least $35,000. These bills, in my opinion, must be paid, if they are legitimate bills, before Cavalieri can get a penny from his estate. The trustees agree with me on that point and they will fight her claim. They will also fight any of the bills submitted by creditors which are excessive or unjustified.

"Chanler hopes, I believe, to find a way out of his difficulties, so that he can get the money he tried to pledge to his wife; but I don't believe she has a chance in the world for it for many years, because his income will be tied up in paying his debts until she will have long regarded the case as hopeless.

"The rest of the Chanler family have not cast off 'Bob,' but they have told him that in this affair he must go his own way. I have as yet taken no steps for either the settlement or the litigation of the cloud of claims against him. I am hoping that I have received them all and that there are no more. If his family intends to sue for the money he is alleged to owe them I have not heard of it. That might be a further preventive of the collection of the Cavalieri claim, but I doubt that any such claim will be filed."

Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler and Winthrop Chanler are the trustees of Robert Chanler's estate. Neither could be found in this city last night. The transfer of his property to Cavalieri contained a guarantee by Robert Chanler that he had a full title and the right to transfer the property. It had been previously asserted that this property was held for him by his trustees. The records of previous deeds and transfers to his property in this county will be searched by competent title searchers with a view to learning whether he had the right to transfer it without obtaining the consent of the trustees. It was asserted last night that the property specifically mentioned by Chanler in his transfer was held in the name of the trustees, but that they merely controlled his interest in the Delano estate.

FILED IN DUTCHESS COUNTY.

Special Messenger Sent with a Copy of Chanler-Cavalieri Agreement.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Sept. 16.—A special messenger from New York City arrived here this afternoon with a certified copy of the ante-nuptial agreement between Lina Cavalieri and Robert W. Chanler, which he filed in the Dutchess County Clerk's office. He was careful about getting it into the hands of County Clerk Ham before the office closed.

It was reported that Chanler was at his home in Red Hook. This was found to be untrue. His counsel, Edward Perkins, said this afternoon that Chanler was in New York City.

The news that the former Sheriff had given all his property to Cavalieri did not surprise his acquaintances here, for he has always been generous with those who had his confidence. For many years he has given away his income before he received it. He has an army of pensioners on his bounty whom he has rewarded for some service to him at different periods, and a number have had regular income from him for years. It is suggested here that an attempt may be made to appoint a Commissioner for his welfare.

WILSON TO RESIGN AS PRINCETON'S HEAD

Jersey's Democratic Candidate for Governor Announces He Will Retire on Oct. 20.

FOR A QUIET CAMPAIGN

Not to Make Many Speeches—He Also Doesn't Believe the Tariff Is a State Issue.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 16.—President Woodrow Wilson of Princeton University announced this afternoon that he would offer his resignation to the Board of Trustees of the university at their meeting on Oct. 20.

What the Trustees will do as a result is a matter of speculation. They value his services highly as President, and would regret to lose him, even in the event of his election to the Governorship. The board may hold the resignation in abeyance until after the election, about three weeks later than the meeting of the board.

In consequence of President Wilson's announcement suggestions have been made for a possible successor. Among those mentioned are Dean of the Graduate School Andrew F. West, who has been instrumental in obtaining large money gifts for Princeton, and around whom a great deal of Graduate School agitation centred last year; ex-Mayor G. B. McClellan of New York City and Princeton, a Princeton graduate and Stafford Little lecturer at the university; Henry Burchard Fine, Dean of the university and second in authority among the Faculty to President Wilson; President John Finley of the City College of New York, and also a graduate, and President Harry Garfield of Williams College, son of President James A. Garfield.

Scores of telegrams found their way to the desk of President Wilson following his nomination for Governor. Many came from Georgia, his old home, and from other sections of the South. A telegram of congratulation which pleased Mr. Wilson very much came from his strongest opponent for the Governorship—Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., former Mayor of Trenton and a defeated candidate for Governor. Another was from Norman E. Mack, Chairman of the National Democratic Committee.

President Wilson will not make a great many speeches.

"The field to be covered," he said, "is not very large unless I should go into the tariff, but I believe that National issues, like the tariff, will not be injected into the campaign. When running for Governor of New Jersey one should run for Governor."

President Wilson will leave his campaign work largely to the Democratic State Committee, and active work will begin soon after the Republican Convention next Tuesday.

FOWLER TURNED DOWN.

Insurgent Congressman Gets Only 70 to Runyon's 140 in Convention.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Sept. 16.—By a vote of 140 to 70 Charles N. Fowler, Congressman from the Fifth District, was defeated for a renomination this afternoon by Judge William N. Runyon at the convention held in the Plainfield Theatre, which could hardly hold the crowd.

Mr. Fowler was squarely defeated on a platform which included the best ideas of President Taft and some of the Congressman's own. Mr. Fowler's absence from the convention caused comment from his constituents of Warren and Morris Counties, who left the convention disgusted with the attitude of the few Fowler men of Union Couny.

It is believed that with the nomination of Woodrow Wilson for Governor the Republicans have a big fight before them in the entire State.

STOKES SURE OF VICTORY.

Leads the Jersey Senatorship Primary Race by 5,000 Votes, He Says.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 16.—Ex-Gov. E. C. Stokes said to-day that his advices from all sections of the State gave him a lead of 5,000 to 7,000 in the United States Senatorship primary of last Tuesday. Mr. Stokes is confident that these figures will not be changed materially by the official returns. He says he has led in the voting in seventeen of the twenty-one counties, and declares he feels confident that the choice expressed in the primary will be respected by the Republicans in the Legislature next Winter.

Mr. Stokes's opponents in the primary were ex-Gov. Franklin Murphy and Congressman Charles N. Fowler.

The result of the Republican primaries in Hudson County is unknown because the returns from 120 districts had not been sent to the County Clerk, John Crosby, late this afternoon. It appears certain, however, that Ralph Young, Progressive Republican, has been nominated for County Supervisor. Philip W. Grace, Progressive Republican, is sure that he leads in the vote for the choice for State Senator.

PROF. LIBBEY FOR CONGRESS.

Fourth District Democrats to Nominate Princeton University Man.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 16.—Since the Mercer County Democrats could not succeed in their efforts to prevent the nomination of Woodrow Wilson as the standard bearer of their party, they have gone to Princeton University for a candidate themselves. They will name Prof. Libbey of the university for Congress in this the Fourth District to make the race against Congressman Ira W. Wood.

The Democratic Congressional Convention has been called, but to-day the Mercer County Democratic Committee met and agreed that it would be good politics to name Prof. Libbey, who is a Colonel in the National Guard and a crack gunshot, and as their votes will outnumber those of the other two counties in this district, it is likely that Prof. Libbey will be nominated.

DEFEAT COACHMAN WARREN.

Payne Whitney's Employe Fails for Place as Republican Delegate.

Special to The New York Times.

MANHASSET, L. I., Sept. 16.—William A. Warren, Payne Whitney's coachman, who went into politics last year and captured a School Trusteeship, was so encouraged by his success that he became a candidate to represent one of the Republican factions in this election district as delegate to the Nassau County Convention, which meets next month. James L. Dowsey, who lives here, and who is campaigning for the Republican District Attorney nomination of Nassau County, put forward Warren.

The meeting of the Republicans of this district, which includes Manhasset and Lakeville, including the estates of several wealthy men, took place to-night at Hamilton Hall. Warren had at his disposal automobiles and carriages in plenty. They were used to bring voters from their homes in and around Lakeville to Hamilton's Hall.

In spite of the carriages and automobiles, and in spite of the backing of Dowsey, the fight went against the coachman, and George L. Gehring was elected.

AFTER WAINWRIGHT'S PLACE.

F. L. Young Wants the Nomination for State Senator from Westchester.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Frank L. Young, at present representing the Ossining district in the Assembly, to-day announced himself as a candidate for the Republican nomination for State Senator to succeed Senator J. Mayhew Wainwright. This announcement is taken to means that Senator Wainwright and William L. Ward have broken for good, and that Wainwright is not to be renominated.

Ward is one of the Old Guard, while Wainwright, never any too tractable, and at present one of the committee stirring up the traction scandal, has come to be classed as standing with Griscom and Roosevelt. Young is looked upon as a strict party man.

CALLS PARTY PROGRESSIVE.

Indiana Campaign to be Along That Line, Republican Chairman Says.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 16.—That the Republican campaign in Indiana this year will be along straightout progressive lines was the statement of Chairman Lee after a meeting of the Republican State Central Committee here to-day. He said, however, that it would not be of the "rampant, sizzling insurgent type."

"Returns from primaries and elections held recently," said Mr. Lee, "show that the Republican Party is progressive. In Maine the Republican leaders refused to let the party be progressive, and defeat resulted. The campaign in Indiana will be along progressive lines."

FOR UNIFORM PRIMARY LAW.

Dix Suggests Conference of Governors to Devise Plan.

BALLSTON SPA, N. Y., Sept. 16.—A Congress of Governors of the various States to outline a primary law for general use throughout the country was the plan outlined by John A. Dix, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, at a conference here this afternon with 200 Democratic leaders of Saratoga County.

Mr. Dix also advocated a State law that would prevent the use of funds by corporations to corrupt legislators. He said the time had come to put citizenship above partisanship to accomplish reforms.

TUTTLE NOT A CANDIDATE.

Declines to be Boomed for Governor of Massachusetts.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—A delegation representing many of the railwaymen's unions in Massachusetts called to-day on Lucius Tuttle, who has just retired from the Presidency of the Boston & Maine, and asked him to permit the use of his name as a candidate for Governor. He said he would seriously consider the matter.

Later in the day Mr. Tuttle decided that he would not permit the use of his name in connection with political office.

HINDS'S VICTORY CONCEDED.

Maine Delegation Will Comprise Two Democrats and Two Republicans.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 16.—William H. Pennell, the Democratic Congressional candidate in the First District, conceded to-day the election of Asher C. Hinds, the parliamentarian of the National House.

The Maine delegation will be evenly divided politically. The First and Fourth Districts will be represented by Republicans, and the Second and Third by Democrats.

Shallenberger Gives Up.

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 16.—As the recount of the vote for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Nebraska shows Gov. Shallenberger 200 votes behind Mayor Dahlman of Omaha, the Governor said to-day that he had decided to give up the contest despite the fact that he believed legal proceedings would still give him the nomination. He said the time for the contest was too short, and any further delay would only aid the Republicans. The recount shows a total gain of 103 for Shallenberger.

For Prohibition in Utah.

PROVO, Utah, Sept. 16.—The Democratic platform adopted at the State Convention here last night demands a prohibition law, direct primary elections, the election of United States Senators by popular vote, the initiative and referendum, the recall, and a tariff commission. The conservation plank advocates co-operation between State and National Governments and the widest use of public lands for settlement and mining.

Seymour Would Be Senator.

NORWALK, Conn., Sept. 16.—John S. Seymour of this town, who presided over the recent Democratic State Convention, announced to-day his candidacy for United States Senator. The next General Assembly will elect a successor to Senator Morgan G. Bulkeley. Mr. Seymour proposes a joint debate with Senator Bulkeley during the campaign on tariff and other issues. Mr. Seymour, who is a member of the firm of Seymour, Seymour & McGrath of New York, was Patent Commissioner under President Cleveland.

Delegates from Sullivan Uninstructed.

LIBERTY, N. Y., Sept. 16.—The Republican convention of Sullivan County elected six uninstructed delegates to the coming Republican State Convention to-day. No effort to pledge the delegates was made, but resolutions indorsing the administrations of President Taft and Gov. Hughes were adopted, as were others commending Representative Thomas W. Bradley and State Senator John B. Rose.

Newark Republicans Rename Wiley.

At a convention held in Newark last night Major William H. Wiley, at present the representative of the eighth New Jersey District in Congress, was renominated, having defeated George H. Austen, the Progressive Republican, in Tuesday's primaries. At the Democratic convention of the same district which was held last night in South Orange, the nomination for Congress was given to Walker I. McCoy, of South Orange.

BOUTELL WILL RUN AS AN INDEPENDENT

Has No Faith in Direct Primaries and Says Liars Misled Voters.

FOSS WAS RENOMINATED

His Plurality About 500—Balloting in Chicago Marked by Bribery and Various Frauds.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Congressman Henry Sherman Boutell, who was defeated by nearly 1,000 votes in yesterday's primaries by F. H. Gansbergen, who proclaims himself a progressive Republican, will run independently. To-morrow Mr. Boutell will leave here for Washington, and it is believed for Beverly also.

"I shall run independently and beat my rivals on the simple principles of responsible representative government," said Mr. Boutell to-day. "I place no reliance in direct primaries. In my district less than one-third of the Republican voters went to the polls. Pure democracy always has been a failure. The initiative and referendum, direct vote for Senators—these are vagaries. The idea of 100,000,000 people trying to legislate direct on subjects that individually they do not understand!

"The only thing that might make me hesitate to run is that I am a party man. I am willing to accede to the wishes of my party when they are honestly expressed. Yesterday they were not honestly expressed. The voters were misled by the statements of hired professional liars."

The Congressman said he had received telegrams from 113 constituents asking him to stay in the race.

Gansbergen's vote in the primary was 3,584, while that of Boutell was 2,598. Arthur West, the third candidate, received 1,134 votes.

George Edmund Foss, standpatter, won the Republican nomination in the Tenth District by about 500 votes after a hard contest with George P. Englehard and Frederick C. Delang, insurgents. Foss is a brother of Eugene N. Foss, who was sent to Congress as a Democrat in the recent special election in Massachusetts.

Speaker Cannon's plurality in the Eighteenth District is about 6,000. He was opposed by Henry B. Downs, an insurgent, of his own city.

In the Second District J. R. Mann, Chairman of the House Committee on Inter-State and Foreign Commerce, received more votes than his two insurgent opponents combined.

In the Eleventh District the plurality of Col. Ira C. Copley, insurgent, over George W. Conn, who classed himself as a progressive conservative, is 468 votes, according to the latest figures.

John C. McKenzie secured the Republican nomination in the Thirteenth District after a spirited contest with Reuben R. Tiffany. McKenzie made his campaign as a progressive, while Tiffany exhibited slightly more radical views and called himself an insurgent.

Out of thirty-two Democrats in the last Legislature who voted for William Lorimer for Senator twenty-two were renominated. Lee O'Neil Browne, who was recently acquitted of a charge of bribery, has a large majority for renomination in Lasalle County.

Ballot box stuffing, vote buying and selling at from 25 cents to $1, repeating, voting of "dead men" and on the names of others all figured in the frauds that marked the primaries in Chicago, despite extraordinary precautions by the Election Board.

"MIDDLING DRY" AND MILK.

Soldiers Three Stole the Latter to Quench the Former's Thirst.

For stealing a bottle of milk to use in diluting a bottle of whisky bearing the brand "Middling Dry," John Skagg, John Davies, and Clyde Brown, soldiers attached to the United States Coast Artillery at Fort Totten, were arraigned before Magistrate Fitch in the Flushing Court yesterday. The milk was taken from the porch of Frank Crosky's hotel at Whitestone. The men, who were on leave, managed to get enough money together to buy a bottle of "Middling Dry," which, undiluted, is said to produce feelings akin to a cross between a visit to the Mardi Gras at Coney Island and a charge up San Juan Hill.

Skagg, Brown, and Davies were experienced with "Middling Dry" and were willing to make soothing concessions to its fire. Thus it happened that Patrolman Fitzmorris saw one of their number approach the hotel porch and grab the bottle of milk and run.

Standing on the Magistrate's bench was hardened old "Middling Dry" leering contemptuously at the meek milk bottle by its side.

"What have you to say to this charge?" asked the Magistrate.

"Begging your pardon, Colonel," said Private Skagg, clicking his heels together and coming to "attention" with a military salute; "but this wuz a disprit case. Old 'Middlin' Dry' is known from China to Maine, an', take my word fur it, Colonel, he's worse than he looks. Give me a few bottles of 'Middlin' Dry' and a company of Uncle Sam's sojers an' I'll conquer China an' spread civilizashun an' things over half the world. But this is a peaceful country, Colonel, an' out of pity for the innocent natives 'round here we got the milk to take the edge off old 'Middlin' Dry' before we started to imbibe."

"Remarkable," soliloquized the Magistrate, "It appears the real offender is old 'Middlin' Dry,' so I'll reduce this charge from petty larceny to disorderly conduct and fine you each $3."

After a series of wigwagging by the prisoners, comrades in the back of the room came forward and paid the fines.

EXPENSES BEAT POPULATION.

Increase in Cost of Running City Has Been Disproportionate, Table Shows.

The Bureau of Municipal Research prepared yesterday a comparative table of the increase of municipal expenditures with the increase of population to show the public what the action of the Board of Estimate, in limiting the city expenditures next year to this year's figures, $163,130,270, means.

The table showed that the Police, Street Cleaning and Tax Department expenditures have most nearly kept pace with the increase of population and that the Police Department percentage is the only one below the population increase percentage. This is the table:

	P. C.
Increase in city's population	38.68
Total budget	79.69
Property values	52.28
Health Department	160.32
Law Department	110.98
Charities Department	101.63
Finance Department	99.56
Education Department	95.82
Park Department (all)	83.60
Brooklyn and Queens	109.29
The Bronx	89.30
Manhattan and Richmond	71.45
Fire Department	68.48
Correction Department	66.67
Street Cleaning Department	49.69
Tax and Assessment Department	47.59
Police Department	33.89

The resolution to keep the budget for next year down to that of this was introduced before the Board of Estimate yesterday by Controller Prendergast. In explaining his action the Controller said the budget estimates of city departments for next year submitted thus far do not indicate the policy of economy laid down by the board.

Acting Mayor Mitchel agreed with the Controller, but said he did not believe failure to increase the budget was economy.

After a long argument on the application of the City Island Monorail Railroad Company for a three months' extension of time to complete the installation of the new motive power one was granted. Borough President Miller of the Bronx opposed the application, declaring the railroad a "joke," while City Islanders present declared if the company did not start business soon they would build a trolley road of their own.

BALLINGER TO SEEK DECISION BY CABINET

Will Demand Vindication or Condemnation by Taft and His Advisers.

REPORT TOO LONG DELAYED

Committee's Failure to Act Makes His Position Untenable—If Colleagues Are Adverse, He Will Resign.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Whether Richard A. Ballinger's resignation as Secretary of the Interior will follow immediately upon the meeting of the Cabinet on Sept. 26, to attend which he is now en route from Seattle, or whether he will retain his place indefinitely—at least until after the delivery to Congress of the report of the committee which investigated his stewardship of the public domain—depends now upon the attitude of his Cabinet associates.

Mr. Ballinger is coming to Washington, his friends here insist, wholly unconscious of any act on his part, either of commission or of omission, for which he should be condemned, and has determined to force his chief and his official colleagues to be in effect his judges. If they concur in the view attributed to Mr. Taft that the accused Secretary should be sustained as an innocent and persecuted man, he will retain his position; if they fail so to back him up, he will resign forthwith. That this in substance is Mr. Ballinger's present attitude was learned here to-day upon authority hardly to be questioned.

At the first meeting of the Cabinet after the Summer recess, Secretary of War Dickinson, the Democratic member, will not have returned from the Philippines and will therefore be saved the embarrassment of participation in a matter that is regarded as largely a problem of Republican policy. The meeting is expected to last three days, and the President expects to clear up a number of important matters; but it will surprise nobody here if the Ballinger case occupies a large part of the time.

Rumors have been constant and decidedly definite here during the past few days that Mr. Ballinger's resignation would be one of the first results of the Cabinet meeting; but his friends, including his associates in the Interior Department, have refused to believe that he would retire under fire, and have pointed to his oft-repeated declaration to the contrary and to the recent statement attributed to him that he would resign only at the specific request of the President. Some of these, however, admitted that they and the Secretary were alive to the fact that the turmoil and uncertainty into which the protracted controversy has plunged the department must be abated soon unless this important branch of the public service is to become hopelessly demoralized.

Nobody here doubts that a majority—all but one of the Republican members—of the Ballinger-Pinchot Investigating Committee will sustain Secretary Ballinger in their report to Congress. The views of that majority, which consists of Senators Nelson, Sutherland, Root, and Flint, and Representatives McCall, Olmsted, and Denby, to that effect are well known. But Secretary Ballinger and his partisans here are greatly disappointed at the absence of Senators Root and Flint from the Minneapolis meeting, which left the pro-Ballinger portion of the committee in the minority and permitted the Democrats and the insurgent Republican member, Representative Madison, to put forth reports condemning him, which for many weeks will stand before the country as the only findings of the investigating committee, whereas he had relied upon the majority for a vindication.

It is this failure of the committee to take final action, it is said, which has determined Secretary Ballinger's course. It was said here to-day by a close friend of the Secretary that had the majority of the committee been ready to report at the Minneapolis meeting he would then have tendered his resignation to the President, and urged its acceptance on the ground that the dissensions to which he had been a party were detrimental to the public interest. When the committee failed at Minneapolis to take action as a whole, and when there was no quorum at the subsequent meeting in Chicago, it became apparent that no decision could be expected for several months.

This situation is said to have convinced Mr. Ballinger that his position, in spite of the continued support of the President, has become untenable. Unable, as he sees it, to resign as either vindicated or condemned by the committee, he has decided, it is said, to demand of his superior and his Cabinet associates either vindication or condemnation.

Several days ago it was announced that Secretary Ballinger would arrive here on Sept. 24. He left his home in Seattle yesterday, however, and will reach Washington several days in advance of the Cabinet meeting. His purpose in thus expediting his return is believed to be to counsel with his immediate subordinates, and to gain their assistance in preparing for his demand on the Cabinet for a decision.

SPOKANE, Wash., Sept. 16.—Secretary Ballinger at a luncheon given to him by the Chamber of Commerce to-day said:

"I don't care what anybody says about me so long as I am conscious of doing my duty, not only as a private citizen but as a public officer. The man who pursues the course that seems to him to meet the obligations of his place in life has no need to fear about the future.

"Every man I know in this Administration is laboring first to learn the needs of the Nation, then to meet these needs within the limits of the law and the Constitution. We have not reached the day when the fundamental doctrines of this Republic can be forgotten or overlooked."

JUDGE SCORES POLICEMAN.

Crooks Must Be Driven from Force, Says Rosalsky After Trying a Case.

William Humphreys and James Hallahan were before Judge Rosalsky in General Sessions yesterday on indictments charging them with assault, robbery and grand larceny. District Attorney Whitman appeared personally and recommended that a plea of guilty to a charge of assault be accepted from Hallahan and that Humphreys be discharged.

"There is no evidence that robbery has been committed, or that Humphreys was guilty of assault," said Mr. Whitman.

"The police in this case have presented perjured testimony," said Judge Rosalsky. "I have learned from the District Attorney that Humphreys's brother received a card from a policeman saying that he would drop the case against Humphreys if he would get $100 for doing so. It is plain enough that there has been an attempt made to extort money from a man who is not guilty. That a member of the New York Police force should do such a thing is more than I can understand. A man who has sworn to uphold the law must do so in every case and I mean to have the court minutes sent to the Police Commissioner with the name of the policeman. The crooks must be driven from the force. There are too many honorable men in the department to have such a man as this one among them."

The Court then ordered the minutes sent to the Police Commissioner and granted Mr. Whitman's motion. Hallahan will be sentenced to-morrow.

On June 25, Arthur Wehrman, of 19 East 104th Street got into a fight with the two men at 116th Street and Third Avenue and they were arrested charged with robbing and assaulting him.

STUDY ROTHBARTH'S BOOKS.

His Checks Fail to Show Wall Street Speculation in Recent Years.

Adolph Rothbarth, the hop dealer, who has confessed to obtaining loans from the Mercantile National Bank, the Liberty National Bank, and the National Park Bank, is still in the Tombs. Ex-Judge A. J. Dittenhoeffer, who has assumed the position of legal adviser to Rothbarth, was a caller at the District Attorney's office last night. He said there would be no effort to provide bail for Rothbarth before next week. It is doubtful if he will be ever bailed, as the possibility of a legal defense on trial being offered is not considered.

Others who conferred with Assistant District Attorney Manley, who is handing the case, were President Willis G. Nash and Cashier Emil Klein of the Mercantile National Bank.

Mr. Manley spent most of the day in going over the books and accounts of the self-confessed swindler. A large number of checks had been employed in the course of business and did not reveal stock speculations in recent years.

The case will be submitted to the Grand Jury either on Tuesday or Monday.

DAIRYMEN ARE HELD.

Officials of Sheffield Farms-Slawson-Decker Co. Must Stand Trial.

In the case against the Sheffield Farms-Slawson-Decker Company for selling short-weight butter rolls in Brooklyn, Magistrate Tighe, in the Adams Street Court, held yesterday President Loton Horton and Vice President Benjamin B. Halsey for Special Sessions. Horton and Halsey were arrested on June 8, and following their examination were paroled pending the Magistrate's decision. Their parole was continued yesterday until their trials come up.

Magistrate Tighe said he did not like to hold officials for acts of subordinates, but he wanted to test the legality of the plea that the advertised weight was only an estimate, and did not mean that the packages contained exactly two pounds.

The arrest of the officials followed an investigation by Lee J. Mills, one of Commissioner Driscoll's men, who visited four of the company's stores on April 27 and in each bought a 2-pound package of butter. He found the aggregate short weight amounted to 12⅝ ounces.

VINDICATED, POWERS SAYS.

His Majority for Republican Congressional Nomination Is 11,280.

BARBOURVILLE, Ky., Sept. 16.—Complete returns from yesterday's Eleventh District Congressional primary show that Caleb Powers defeated Representative D. C. Edwards for the Republican nomination by 11,280 votes.

Powers issued a statement to-day in which he declared that the majority was a vindication of his past political career.

DIES OF PELLAGRA.

North Carolina Editor and Legislator Was Unconscious Five Days.

SALISBURY, N. C., Sept. 16.—Stricken two weeks ago with an acute case of pellagra, John M. Julian, editor of the Salisbury Evening Post and a leader in State politics, died at his home in this city to-day. He had been unconscious since Sunday, and despite skillful attention he grew gradually worse.

He was a member of the North Carolina Legislature and was Secretary and Treasurer of the Bill Nye Memorial Association in this State. He was 36 years old and leaves a widow and three children.

BOGUS $10 BILL AT LARGE.

It Is Drawn on the Home National Bank of Staunton, Texas.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—There is a new counterfeit ten-dollar National bank note at large, but it is not likely to deceive an ordinarily careful handler of money. The Treasury Department issued a note of warning to-day.

It is a poorly executed photo-etched production, printed on two bits of paper, with a few pieces of silk thread distributed in it. It is drawn on the Home National Bank of Staunton, Texas, series of 1902-1908, check letter D.

The note, a sample of which was sent to the Secret Service here by Cashier R. G. Erwin of the First National Bank of Ballinger, Texas, is supposed to be the work of the same counterfeiters who recently produced a five-dollar Carlsbad (N. M.) National Bank note.

Boulevard Board Gives Fort Loving Cup

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Sept. 16.—To show its appreciation of the interest Gov. J. Franklin Fort has taken in the project in his administration, the Ocean Boulevard Commission, which advocates an ocean driveway along the Jersey coast from Atlantic Highlands to Cape May, this afternoon gave the Governor a handsome silver loving cup. The presentation was made by Mayor T. Frank Appleby of Asbury Park, at a luncheon at the Hotel Bristol here.

THREATENED STOCK BROKER.

Anderson, a Carpenter, Arrested on Leopold Zimmermann's Complaint.

Leopold Zimmermann, head of the Stock Exchange firm of Zimmermann & Forshay of 11 Wall Street, caused the arrest yesterday of Andrew Anderson, a carpenter, who gave his address as 275 West 177th Street, on the charge of having sent threatening letters to him demanding money for work done on Mr. Zimmermann's house at Sea Cliff, L. I. In the Yorkville Court Anderson was held until to-day for examination.

Mr. Zimmermann received at his office yesterday the third of a series of letters demanding the payment of $92. In this letter he was told to send the money to a shop at 166½ East Thirty-third Street by 3 o'clock or take the consequences. Mr. Zimmermann turned the letter over to the Wall Street Branch of the Detective Bureau, and Lieut. Foley arrested Anderson at the Thirty-third Street address.

Some time ago Mr. Zimmermann, Lieut. Foley said, interceded for Anderson when he got into trouble in Sea Cliff for carrying a revolver, and he was discharged. He did carpentering work at the banker's home during the Summer, but Mr. Zimmermann said yesterday he was paid for his work long ago.

Hats direct from the Paris milliners whose names are famous all over the world.
Hats from Loeser workrooms which—with aid of Paris inspiration—seem quite as charming as any of the imported creations.
There is almost infinite variety. Each Hat is a distinct artistic achievement. And the wearableness of these new styles is a matter of constant comment.
We should like to have you see these Hats while the showing is at its very best and before the French Hats are sold. We should also like you to take note of the prices. Second Floor, Elm Place.

New Outer Wear for Girls.
NOT ONLY DOES THE YOUNG GIRL, who is growing very critical concerning what she wears, find quiet and semi-private bays for examination of the new fashions at Loeser's, but she also finds much of special interest in the clothes themselves.

ALL PARTIES SHARED IN TRACTION GRAFT

Vreeland Says He Supposes Every One Who Ran for Office Got Some of the Funds.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO MANAGERS

More Personal Payments Left to G. Tracy Rogers—Admits Railway Association Was Organized for Legislation.

It was the turn of H. H. Vreeland, former President of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, to explain yesterday the disbursement of traction money among Albany politicians during the period that ex-State Senator Goodsell was Chairman of the Senate's Railroad Committee and ex-Assemblyman Bedell had a similar position in the lower house. He classified himself as a Prohibitionist politically, and said that he had given liberally to all political parties, including his own. Pressed for figures he said the Republicans led with contributions amounting to $25,000 in 1902, and the Democrats came second with $17,000 or $18,000.

Mr. Vreeland's testimony, following that of Senator Goodsell and Assemblyman Bedell, both of whom received money, and A. S. Hackley, the dummy clerk, through whom much of it was passed, kept a well-filled gallery in the Aldermanic Chamber of the City Hall, where the legislative investigating committee is sitting, on edge with interest and expectation.

The former traction chief did not testify entirely in a willing manner, and once he had a tilt with ex-Judge Linn M. Bruce, chief counsel for the committee, during which he said that he had long ago given the Public Service Commission data enough on which to have brought out all the information now before the investigators had the commission cared to go into it.

The gifts to legislators, Mr. Vreeland indicated, were made through the medium of stock transactions, and the money involved was raised by special assessments levied against members of the Street Railway Association. The smaller members of this association, it had previously been developed, had finally rebelled against the assessments, and had turned Mr. Vreeland out of office along with the administration of which he was a part.

Ex-Senator Malby Drawn In.

A. S. Hackley, the dummy clerk of the brokerage firm of Ellingwood & Cunningham, who on Thursday failed to recognize his own signature on many checks and letters, added a name to the list of legislators implicated in the firm's transactions yesterday. He said State Senator George R. Malby, now Congressman Malby, representing St. Lawrence County, of which he is the reigning boss, shared in one of the special legislative accounts. His interest in it, the former clerk said, was $500, and this sum went to him in cash. In the same pool Speaker Nixon, now dead, got $2,000, and Senator Goodsell got a like amount.

The appearance of Mr. Vreeland in the committee room occasioned some surprise. It had been announced that he was among those the committee was seeking, but did not expect to find. Shortly after Lawyer Bruce had expressed his regrets at his inability to locate Mr. Vreeland, he came down the centre aisle, smiling blandly. Mr. Bruce stopped the proceedings, and after catching his breath returned Mr. Vreeland's greeting, the latter then taking a seat beside ex-District Attorney Jerome, law partner of Isidor J. Kresel, of counsel for the committee.

Mr. Bruce hastened to close the testimony of Mr. Hackley in order to gain Mr. Vreeland's view of things while he was available.

"You know G. Tracy Rogers, do you not?" asked Mr. Bruce after Mr. Vreeland had explained that he had served on the Executive Committee of the Street Railway Association as a representative of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, of which he was President.

Organized for Legislation.

Mr. Vreeland said he met Rogers when the latter was President of the association in 1896, and met Henry A. Robinson, the Secretary, and Vice President of the Metropolitan in the same period.

Q.—What was the object of the Street Railway Association's organization? A.—Primarily to deal with questions of development, and secondarily to handle legislation.

Q.—What did it have to do in handling legislation? A.—All street railroad properties in New York were keenly interested in securing uniform legislation. There were many bills that had become laws with disastrous effects on some properties. We made an effort to secure uniform legislation throughout the State.

Q.—Did the association in its effort to get this needed legislation, participate in politics? A.—So far as H. H. Vreeland was concerned, he did not. And the association as such did not.

Q.—What was the purpose of the special assessment fund? A.—To raise money for the President's special fund. The President never said what this fund was to be used for.

Q.—Don't you know what the money was used for? A.—No. I do not. Nothing farther than political contributions.

Q.—Then the association was participating in politics to the extent of making contributions? A.—Yes, the President thought it was a good thing to make contributions.

Q.—As a member of the Executive Committe did you ever consider it part of your duties to look into the association's finances? A.—I did not.

Q.—Did you ever talk to Rogers about it? A.—I don't recall that I ever did.

Q.—Didn't he ever say what party ought to get the most in order to produce the best results? A.—No, we turned the whole matter over to him, and we knew as little about it as we could. He never asked the Executive Committee to help him in his work.

Q.—But the Executive Committee was charged in the by-laws with responsibility for the work of the association. Was this regular routine work? A.—I should say it was regular routine work of all corporations for a number of years. The Metropolitan made contributions every year after 1893, when I became connected with it.

Mr. Bruce made an effort to get Mr. Vreeland to recall some of the sums the Metropolitan paid and the purposes for which it contributed them. He was not successful. Finally he turned to the scope covered in the disbursements.

Paid Every Candidate.

Q.—Did you pay to every party that had a column on the ballot? A.—Yes, practically. From my experience I should say it was to everybody who ran for office.

Q.—We will take up the Prohibition Party—did you contribute to that? A.—We might have. I am a prohibitionist. I might have contributed personally.

Q.—Well, I don't care what you did personally. We are interested in the Metropolitan. What did it contribute? A.—It is largely a matter of thinking. I don't recollect.

Mr. Bruce mentioned several contributions which have appeared in the books of Ellingwood & Cunningham. The witness could not recall them, and did not think the books of the Metropolitan would show what contributions it had made. He had no idea where the books could be found or what officer ought to be asked to hunt for them, or what method was employed in passing the money to the legislators.

Q.—Well, how long do you recall that the contributions were made? A.—I only recall one that I had to do with. The Metropolitan Securities Company made it in 1903.

Q.—To whom was it made? A.—To the Republican and Democratic Parties. The Republican State Committee got $25,000—$20,000 or $25,000—and the Democratic State Committee got $17,000 or $18,000.

Q.—Why the distinction? A.—I presume it was what was asked for.

Q.—Was it based in any way on their legislative representation? A.—No, I should say not.

Q.—Was it the custom of the parties to request these contributions? A.—I don't know about a custom. It was what was done at that time. The Chairman of the State Committee made the request.

Q.—Did he make it to you personally? A.—No, but to some one, for I was asked to send the money along.

Q.—Did you send the money? A.—I did.

The witness would not become specific as to the exact date. He said it was in October, 1903, as he recollected, but he might be mistaken. The Metropolitan Securities Company books, he said, would show it, and they were before the Public Service Commission.

Hits Service Commission.

Q.—The evidence was given before them was it? A.—No, they didn't want anybody that had the evidence. They didn't call for anybody that knew anything.

Q.—Well, we want to know. Who should I subpoena in order to get the book? A.—Nobody I can tell you.

Q.—Was it a ledger or a cash book? A.—I can't tell. I didn't keep the book.

Q.—Who told you to send money to the Democrats? A.—It was the same thing at the same time, the same parties who told me to send to the Republicans told me to send to Democrats.

Q.—Did you make any contributions to County Committees or to Tammany Hall? A.—I have no distinctions in my mind between—I am a railroad man, not a politician.

Mr. Vreeland recalled in a general way that many other contributions were made, but did not want to be specific about them. When pressed to state whether he thought the contributions were made in such a way as to keep them out of the books he said that there were many ways they could be made without the books showing it.

"How, for instance?" asked Mr. Bruce.

"By dealing in stocks or carrying dummy accounts," Mr. Vreeland replied.

That led to an effort to get the witness to tell of some dummy account or some brokerage house transactions carried on by the Metropolitan that he might recall. His memory had become non-operative on all specific instances.

Q.—Do you know where the Metropolitan books are for that period? A.—Some are at 621 Broadway, I suppose.

Q.—And others? A.—According to the history of the Public Service Commission there were books destroyed.

Q.—Did the Metropolitan ever carry a lobby account entitled "Construction Account?" A.—I can't remember.

Q.—You were President of the company, weren't you? A.—I was.

Q.—Do you have no knowledge by design? A.—No. I merely didn't keep the books.

Q.—Well, take this $25,000 contribution. How was it withdrawn?? A.—I don't know. We had a number of bank accounts.

Just before Mr. Vreeland left the stand he grew warm in his denials that he had destroyed evidence, declaring that in the regular course of business he had destroyed check books ten years old and more. He said no man living could make him believe he had drawn a check to Ellingwood & Cunningham without producing the check, and he was confident Mr. Bruce could not do so. He said he was sure all the checks he drew "that could have gone into that account" were drawn to G. Tracy Rogers.

A. S. Hackley testified that the $500 paid to Senator George R. Malby had been given to him under instructions from G. Tracy Rogers. About the same time Senator Goodsell got $2,000. An account labeled "A. S. Hackley, Special," he said, might have been that of a Dr. Benedict, who had a sanitarium in the Catskills, and was now a general practitioner in Newburg or some near-by town.

He abandoned this explanation when confronted with the ledger showing that all withdrawals were made at the behest of G. Tracy Rogers, and then said that all the money he withdrew he had turned over to Rogers, or Rogers had withdrawn it in his name.

The investigation will be resumed next Wednesday at 10:30 A. M.

William R. Wilcox, Chairman of the Public Service Commission of the First District, when asked last night concerning Mr. Vreeland's testimony that seemed critical of the commission said:

"At the time the commission was investigating the traction situation in this city, at which time many irregularities were brought to light, District Attorney Jerome requested that the commission should refrain from calling Mr. Vreeland as a witness, inasmuch as he might plead that by testifying before the commission he had been given immunity from any prosecution that might follow. It will be remembered that the District Attorney was about this time bringing these matters to the attention of the Grand Jury. What hints, therefore, Mr. Vreeland made, I cannot imagine, although I understood at the time that he was angered because he was not called by the commission previous to the Grand Jury investigation."

NEARLY DROWNED IN BEER.

Workmen at Brewery Rescued with Difficulty When Vat Collapses.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Sept. 16.—A vat at a brewery here collapsed yesterday while workmen were repairing its foundation. The vat contained 18,000 gallons of beer, which poured through the streets. The workmen were caught in the rush and were rescued with difficulty from drowning.

Veterans Want New Statuary Hall Rule

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 16.—The Union Veterans' Legion, in their closing session here to-day, adopted a long resolution regretting that the law passed in 1864, creating Statuary Hall in Washington, left it wholly to the discretion of the several States what statues representing them should be put in the hall. The resolution also objects to Lee's statue there.

LADY COOK TESTIFIES AS AMBULANCE WAITS

Reporter Suing Her for $30,000 Had One Ready in Anticipation of Her Feigning a Fit.

BLACKMAIL, SHE CRIES

Denies She Employed Silver to Write Her Biography, and Tells of Many Cash Gifts.

While Lady Cook, suffragist and authoress, once Tennessee Claflin, was testifying yesterday in the offices of her lawyers, Coudert Brothers, 2 Rector Street, an ambulance waited below. Isaac Weill, lawyer for Harry C. Silver, a reporter who is suing her for $30,000 for breach of contract to write her biography, explained that he had been informed that Lady Cook was going to feign a fit to avoid examination, and he planned to have her rushed to a hospital and put her under observation.

"You didn't come here to do what you did in the Wallace case?" he asked at the outset of the examination, referring to a previous hearing at which Lady Cook was suddenly stricken.

"No, no, no!" exclaimed the witness with great heat.

Lady Cook clashed bitterly with Attorney Weill throughout the hearing, and John P. Murray, her counsel, cautioned her to be more direct in her answers. When an article illustrated by a picture of Sir Francis Cook was shown to her the witness cried:

"That's my darling husband! While he was alive he protected me from blackmailers!"

Lady Cook explained that she had given Silver various sums which he alleged were payments on account of his verbal contract to write her biography, because she had no children and was fond of making other people, especially newspaper writers, happy by trips to Europe with plenty of spending money. She asserted she had done no more for Silver than for hundreds of others. She mentioned the names of several women now active in newspaper work in this city as beneficiaries of her bounty, and declared that her friends had called her "dotty" for this habit.

Lady Cook pounded on the table and gave long, rambling replies when asked about her alleged differences with Sir Francis Cook, her alleged statement that she was under the guidance of the spirit of Demosthenes, her foundation of a magnetic infirmary at Chicago, the principal asset of which was her alleged power of magnetic healing, and her part in the Tilton-Beecher trial.

"I'm not up here as a murderer or a thief," she cried. "I don't have to answer all these questions." She denied she had said she was going to go back to Doughty House, her English seat, and stay there "until her soul became as white as snow."

Lady Cook denied she had ever commissioned Silver to write her biography, and was substantiated by Mrs. Ella Wells, daughter of Mrs. Dennis O'Halloran, her adopted sister. She became furious when questioned about her petition to have the body of her husband exhumed in Australia, where he had died, and about whose death there were circulated rumors that he had been poisoned. She cried "Blackmail!" at these questions.

HER NAME NOW IS VAN HEUSEN

Changed from Price by Permission of Justice Bijur.

Supreme Court Justice Bijur signed an order yesterday permitting Elizabeth Proctor Price, a young woman about to make her début in society, to assume the name of Elizabeth Proctor Van Heusen. Her stepfather is Charles Manning Van Heusen of 58 Central Park West.

Mrs. Ada P. Van Heusen, the girl's mother, made affidavit that her daughter was born at 611 Fifth Avenue in 1893. Her father was Walter William Price, who has since died. Mrs. Price married Charles M. Van Heusen in 1896, and since that time her daughter has borne her stepfather's name. She is now about to enter society and wishes to use her stepfather's name socially, and if she marries desires to be married under that name.

One of the other objects of the change is that Mrs. Van Heusen is about to create a trust fund for her three children, two of them a son and a daughter, the issue of her marriage to her second husband. The young woman made affidavit that the change of name would substantially promote her interests and please her stepfather. The stepfather made an affidavit certifying his approval.

OPERATION FOR LA FOLLETTE.

Secretary Frear Says Wisconsin Senator May Go Under the Knife.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 16.—Senator Robert M. La Follette is suffering with an ailment that may require an operation, according to James A. Frear, Secretary of State of Wisconsin, who is in Minneapolis to-day. The Senator will go to Rochester to consult with Dr. Mayo there. Mr. Frear says that Senator La Follette returned home, after Congress adjourned, a sick man, and that he consulted physicians about his condition. He was told that rest was all he needed, and he obtained as much as he could until he was plunged into the campaign.

It is reported authoritatively that the Senator either will speak against Tawney or will issue a public statement urging the nomination of Anderson.

The fact that Frear, Morris, Ekern, and other leading Wisconsin progressives have entered the Tawney fight is taken as positive evidence that La Follette is ready to support Anderson, as it is argued that none of them would have entered the fight without the sanction of the Senator.

TRAIN KILLS FLEEING LUNATIC

John G. Brambly Had Kept Concealed in the Woods for Two Days.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Sept. 16.—After wandering away from the Middletown State Hospital for the Insane, where he was a patient, John G. Brambly, a former resident of Delhi, N. Y., spent two days hiding in the woods near this city, and when driven out by hunger was struck and killed by a fast express train on the Erie Railroad. Brambly escaped from the State Hospital on Wednesday.

Last night the engineer of Erie train 2 saw a man walking on the track, who paid no attention to the blowing of the whistle. The man's skull and both legs were fractured and he received internal injuries, from which he died shortly after.

Papers found in his pockets established his identity.

CHOLERA DEATH TOLL IN RUSSIA 100,000

Spreading Now Through Asiatic Russia and Threatening Regions Near Manchurian Border.

LAST WEEK'S DEATHS 3,557

Weekly Totals of Deaths and Cases Still Reported Falling Off—Five Deaths and Nine Cases in Italy.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 16.—The cholera epidemic which, originating in Southern Russia, has claimed already upward of 100,000 victims, is stretching its way across Asiatic Russia, and to-day was officially declared to threaten the Province of Amur, in Southeast Siberia, and separated by the Amur River from Manchuria.

The reports now in possession of the Sanitary Bureau show a total for the season of 182,327 cases, with 83,613 deaths. These include the early returns for the week ended Sept. 10 and the revised figures for the preceding week. Complete reports for the week of Sept. 4 to Sept. 10, inclusive, are lacking, but the totals for the seven days at hand are 7,559 cases, with 3,557 deaths. The totals for the preceding week are 18,330 cases, with 6,187 deaths.

The returns by provinces for the last week reported show deaths as follows: Saratov, 503; Samara, 383; Orenburg, 206; Simbirsk, 189; Yekaterinoslav, 188; Don Cossacks, 175; Tambov, 148; Daghestan, 235; Voronezh, 121; Kursk, 115; Erivan, 110; Kherson, 104; Kiev, [illegible]; Semipalatinsk, 8; Tomsk, 4; Akmolinsk, 31; St. Petersburg, 50.

Yesterday there were 47 new cases and 19 deaths in the City of St. Petersburg. This brings the total in the capital up to 3,750 cases, with 1,310 deaths.

The totals in the aggregate show a falling off of cases and deaths.

ROME, Sept. 16.—During the past twenty-four hours in Apulia, in Southeastern Italy, there were five deaths from cholera and nine new cases of the disease.

KAISER HONORS DIAZ.

Congratulates Him on Mexican Centennial—Sends Him a Decoration.

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—The Kaiser to-day sent a telegram to President Diaz expressing the warmest congratulations of himself and the German people upon the celebration of the centennial of Mexican independence. He also expressed the hope that the monument to Alexander von Humboldt, the scientist and traveler, presented by him and unveiled in Mexico City Thursday, might prove a token of friendship and mutual esteem between Germany and Mexico.

As an expression of his personal regard the Kaiser has conferred upon President Diaz the Chain of the Grand Cross of the Order of the Red Eagle. His Majesty also cabled his congratulations to the Mexican Executive on the occasion of his eightieth birthday.

President Diaz in a message to the Kaiser expressing the thanks of the Nation, the Government, and himself, told his Majesty that the Humboldt monument had been erected on one of the finest squares in the capital city of Mexico.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 16.—Mexico crowned the celebration of her centennial to-day with the dedication of a monument to the independence of the Republic. There was a grand parade from the National Palace to the site of the monument in the beautiful Pazzo Reforma, midway between this city and Chepultepec where the ceremonies were held. Ten thousand soldiers, marines and rurales, and representatives of other powers were in line. The feature of the program was an address by President Diaz.

The monument is an imposing granite shaft rising to a height of 140 feet. It is topped with a figure symbolic of liberty, and the base is surrounded by bronze figures presenting the various phases of the national life.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 16.—The Mexican Legation gave a reception today in celebration of the centenary of the independence of Mexico.

CRIPPEN VICTIM POISONED.

State's Expert Chemist Sure Drug Caused Death—Case Adjourned.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Dr. William Henry Willcox, Scientific Analyst to the Home Office, who discovered a deadly drug in the body found in the home of Dr. Hawley H. Crippen, took the stand when the trial of the doctor and his typist, Ethel Clare Leneve, for the murder of Crippen's wife was continued to-day, and swore unqualifiedly that death was due to poison.

The physician described the nature of the medium used, and said that from a quarter to half a grain would prove fatal. He had found two-sevenths of a grain after a lapse of from four to eight months, and judged that more than half a grain had been administered. He found no other cause of death, and expressed the opinion that the victim survived the dose an hour or more.

Before Dr. Willcox was called the Crown introduced medical testimony to corroborate that given on Wednesday by Prof. Augustus J. Pepper, the pathologist of the University of London, who swore that the body had been dismembered by one familiar with the science of anatomy.

The gruesome exhibits and the unpleasant character of the testimony at the last session did not deter the curious from struggling to get into the Bow Street Police Court to-day, and the section apportioned to the public was again crowded. The spectators included the usual array of fashionably dressed women, and these thoughtfully removed their hats, that those seated behind them might not miss a move of the trembling girl in the dock or of her companion in duress, whose jaunty air only adds to the morbid interest in the case.

Dr. Willcox, whose evidence was severely technical, was in the witness box for four hours. Solicitor Arthur Newton, who is conducting the case for the defense, closely cross-examined the witness, but elicited nothing in the way of throwing fresh light upon the mystery.

Inspector Walter Dew of Scotland Yard then took the stand. Solicitor Newton asked him a few questions on behalf of Miss Leneve with the object of showing that she had repeatedly said that she believed whatever Crippen told her. "She did not mention Crippen to me," the detective replied.

The case was then adjourned until Sept. 21.

SHERRILL RETURNING HOME.

American Minister to Argentina Sails from Buenos Ayres with His Family.

BUENOS AYRES, Argentina, Sept. 16.—Charles H. Sherrill, the American Minister to Argentina, and family embarked to-day on board the steamer Asturias bound for the United States. The Vice-President, the Mayor, the members of the Cabinet and the diplomatic corps took their leave of Mr. Sherrill in the Plaza where a large crowd had gathered. President-elect Pena sent a bouquet of flowers to Mrs. Sherrill.

The newspapers to-day publish editorials in which the diplomat is complimented in high terms.

SHIP'S OFFICER DROWNED.

Notes of Foreign Affairs.

SEOUL, Korea, Sept. 16.—Gen. Akashi of the Japanese Army stated to-day that quiet prevailed throughout Korea. He said that the inventors of the stories that disturbances had been frequent and that several Koreans had committed suicide in protest again Japanese domination would soon be compelled to prove their assertions in a court of law.

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—The committee charged with the selection of a design for the statue of Goethe to be erected in Lincoln Park, Chicago, has postponed the matter of reaching a decision until to-morrow.

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Sept. 16.—The Senate today approved the concession granted to a syndicate of British capitalists for the construction of a railroad from the Yacuma River to Santa Cruz. The new line is expected to open to exploitation natural resources of considerable value.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Sept. 16.—The arrival today of President Figueroa Alcorta of Argentina and his party to take part in the celebration of Chile's centennial of independence was the occasion of a splendid demonstration of welcome, in which Government officials and thousands of the public shared. The guests were accompanied to the residence which they will occupy during their stay by an imposing escort, and in every way possible the friendly relations between Argentina and Chile were emphasized.

ADMITS SMUGGLING TO SAVE HIS WIFE

M. L. Morgenthau Takes Entire Responsibility for Family's Attempt to Evade Duty.

FEDERAL GRAND JURY TO ACT

Candy Manufacturer Liable to Two Years in Jail and $5,000 Fine—$10,000 Jewels and Clothes Lost.

Charged with smuggling, M. L. Morgenthau of 38 West Seventy-third Street, a candy manufacturer who, with his wife and two daughters, returned from abroad Thursday night in the Cunard liner Mauretania, was arrested yesterday. He was taken before United States Commissioner Gilchrist in the Federal Building and held in $5,000 bail to await the action of the Federal Grand Jury.

Morgenthau's arrest came at the close of the hearing before Deputy Surveyor George J. Smyth, when, to save his wife, he took full responsibility for the affair and, the Customs officials said, confessed he brought in $9,300 in excess of what he declared. Under the statutes Morgenthau is liable to two years' imprisonment, a fine of $5,000, or both, in addition he will lose his undeclared jewelry and wearing apparel.

Accompanied by his wife, his daughters, a niece, several friends, and William Wickham Smith, his lawyer, Morgenthau appeared at the Custom House shortly after noon. The examination was short, as Morgenthau explained that the blame was his. As he said he had made the declaration the Customs officials decided not to proceed against his wife, though a pearl necklace and a rope of pearls were found on her person when she was searched on the Mauretania.

After the examination Deputy Surveyor Smyth said Morgenthau had assumed all responsibility. Opportunity was given him on the pier by Deputy Surveyor Norwood to revise the declaration, but he refused, maintaining that the $600 declared covered all the family purchased abroad.

At the close of the hearing, Morgenthau, in custody of Norwood and Inspector J. W. Dolan, was taken to the Federal Building, where he was formally arrested by United States Marshal Henkel. The complaint by Norwood charges that the candy manufacturer attempted to bring into the country jewelry and wearing apparel in violation of the law. Counsel for Morgenthau waived examination. Bond was furnished and Morgenthau released.

Mrs. Morgenthau was much agitated. Tears were in her eyes when her husband told the Customs men he alone was to blame. The case attracted a crowd to the Custom House, and when Mrs. Morgenthau and her daughters attempted to leave the Surveyor's office the corridor was crowded. They retired into the room, and after a consultation with her husband a taxicab was summoned. It drew up in front of the Custom House and the women ran to it. As the cameras clicked Mrs. Morgenthau and her daughters attempted to hide their faces.

All the Morgenthau baggage, nineteen pieces, has been seized and is now at the Public Stores, where an appraisal of their contents is being made. Customs officials were unable to give exact valuations, but said that dutiable articles in the trunks with the jewelry may bring the total up to $10,000.

The jewelry consists of the rope of pearls and the pearl necklace found on Mrs. Morgenthau, and the two gold watches and a pearl necklace on Mr. Morgenthau. The contents of the trunks will be appraised and the articles of foreign purchase held pending the result of the case.

MARTIN NOT A SMUGGLER.

His Baggage Will Be Admitted as Soon as Appraiser's Work Is Done.

John B. Martin, a Fifth Avenue restaurateur, who with his wife arrived here on Sept. 6 on the steamship Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, was absolved from criminal intent to smuggle in not declaring some of his belongings upon his arrival. This decision was reached yesterday after a hearing before Deputy Surveyor George Smyth at the Custom House. Martin explained that his wife could not be present as she was ill as a result of their trouble with the Customs.

Martin's goods will be released as soon as the Appraisers finish their work and the duty is paid. Smyth thought there was about $2,000 worth of undeclared articles.

The Paris hats and gowns of Mrs. Elizabeth P. Chapman, which were held up Thursday on her arrival on the Adriatic, were ordered released yesterday by Surveyor Henry. It was found that none of them was dutiable.

JAMES J. HILL IS 72.

He Celebrates His Birthday by Working Harder—Isn't Thinking of Quitting.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 16.—James J. Hill was 72 years old to-day. He celebrated the event by reaching his office if anything a bit earlier than usual.

"I am feeling in good health," he remarked to reporters who called on him.

"Some four years ago, at the State Capitol, you said that the time had come when shortly you would drop the burden; that you wished to have a little time left to read some books," he was reminded.

"I said it then," he replied, briskly, "but the burden is not all mine; some of it is others."

"There are very few of the men left who were here when you first came to St. Paul?"

"Few, indeed," he remarked. "Only William Dean and myself are left of those who were young men then."

Mr. Hill sometimes does not reach the office until after 10 o'clock, alighting from his carriage at the Third Street entrance. Practically everybody else uses the elevator, but seldom Mr. Hill. He walks up and down the steps to consult with the various officials in charge of the different departments.

"Yes, this is Mr. Hill's birthday," commented one of the officials. "That means he will work harder than usual."

Socialists to Meet in Carnegie Hall.

A Socialist campaign meeting to discuss "The Socialist Point of View" will be held at Carnegie Hall on Saturday evening, Oct. 15. The speakers will include Charles Edward Russell, the Socialist candidate for Governor; Morris Hillquit, Socialist candidate for Associate Judge of the Court of Appeals, and Alexander Irvine, former pastor of the Church of the Ascension. The purpose of the meeting is to explain the Socialist platform. The cost of living, wages, strikes, and many other subjects of Socialist agitation will be gone into.

SHE WORE MEN'S CLOTHES.

On Walking Tour with Husband, Mrs. Greve Explains—Police Let Couple Go.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 16.—Mrs. Elsie Greve, recently of New York but formerly of Berlin, was arrested in crowded Fifth Avenue this forenoon while walking by the side of her husband, F. P. Greve of New York, dressed in men's clothes and puffing a cigarette. Both Mrs. Greve and her husband were taken, protesting, to the central police station and locked up as suspicious persons.

Both Greve and his wife asserted that they were subjects of Germany, had done no wrong, and intended no wrong. If they were not released speedily they would appeal to the German Ambassador at Washington to-morrow morning, they said. Whether this threat was considered or not is not known, but this evening it was announced at Police Headquarters that Mrs. Greve and her husband had been allowed to leave the police station and go on their way, and that Supt. of Police McQuaide issued a letter to the pair setting forth that Mrs. Greve and her husband were all right and that the woman was wearing men's clothes only because she could walk better and keep up with her husband, who was walking out his vacation.

MISSING NEW YORKER DEAD.

Man Found Drowned in Maine Seems to be George Slivek, Stenographer.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 16.—A body found by a fisherman on the rocks at the southerly side of Richmond's Island today is believed to be that of George Slivek, a stenographer of New York, who has been missing since Sept. 1. Slivek was 27 years old. He was in Portland with his father and his brother, Abram Slivek, an attorney of 231 Broadway, New York.

After he disappeared his father and brother returned home, and later received a letter from the missing man, postmarked Portland, which said that he was going to Eastport and would drown himself. Circulars containing descriptions of him and offering a reward were sent out. The body found to-day tallies with the description published.

STEEL STOCK TAX STANDS.

Sales Here Not Exempt, Though Books Are Kept in New Jersey.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 16.—The United States Steel Corporation cannot avoid responsibility for the payment of the stock transfer tax on sales of its stock because its books are kept outside the State, the clerical work of transferring the stock on the books being done in New Jersey.

Attorney General O'Malley holds this view in an opinion delivered to Controller Williams. The steel company mantained that because its stock transfer agent issued the new certificates in New Jersey the transfers were not subject to the tax. But the Attorney General held that when the sale is made in New York the real transfer takes place in this State and that the transfer agent in New Jersey is therefore bound to see that the tax is paid before he issues the new certificates.

This ruling will probably bring millions to the State in taxes, because it applies to all corporations whose stocks are dealt in to any extent in New York and affects outside corporations, like the Steel Corporation, especially.

When Controller Williams began to look into the stock transfer stamp frauds in New York he asked the Attorney General whether the money out of which the State was being defrauded could be collected and whether corporations like the United States Steel Corporation could be compelled to see that the tax was paid on its stock sales.

Epworth League to Celebrate.

The second general conference of the Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal Church is planning to celebrate the twenty-first birthday of the league with a dinner at Wanamaker's, Nov. 11. Bishop William A. Quayle, LL. D., President of the Board of Control of the Epworth League, will speak. Preceding the dinner there will be a conference for workers at the rooms of the Board of Foreign Missions, 150 Fifth Avenue.

TELEPHONE ORDER DEPARTMENT OF PARK & TILFORD'S NEW FIFTH AVENUE STORE

"So Much of Our Business is Done Over the Telephone,"

says Mr. Frank Tilford, President of Park & Tilford, "that we gave special attention to the telephone equipment in our new Fifth Avenue store. To meet our requirements we installed a three-position telephone switchboard, connected by 30 lines to the Central Office of the Telephone Company. To this switchboard are connected 45 extension telephones, located at various points throughout our store and offices. 15 telephone tie lines to our 7 branch stores and to our stables and warehouses, make this switchboard the center of our telephone business. In order to facilitate delivery of goods, orders taken over the telephone are transmitted over the private tie lines to the store nearest the customer. The New York Telephone Company handled this entire installation to our complete satisfaction."

Progressive merchants realize the importance of catering to telephone trade. No concern is too small to pay special attention to its telephone trade—no concern is too large to be benefited by proper telephone facilities.

Mathewson was the rock against which the Pirate craft went to smash at the Polo Grounds yesterday. Pitching with all his craft and cunning, shooting the pill in tantalizing jumps and hops perilously near the outer lines of the platter, Matty made the backs of the Pittsburg batsmen break in futile efforts to tan the leather. The score was 3 to 1.

For eight innings Big Six was complete master of the situation, two scratchy singles being the sum of Pittsburg's hitting prowess. In the ninth inning the Pirates made a bold attempt to rally, and tossed a large scare into the Giant ranks. Tommy Leach whizzed a triple past Becker, and Wagner's Texas Leaguer sent him in with the enemy's only count. It was the world champions' last jollification of the year here, and the trimming Matty handed out was all the more palatable for that reason. Red Murray again flattened the ball against the right-field fence for a home run, threatening all speed records on the trip around.

If somebody had offered an automobile for the leading kicker of the league he'd have to slip one to Manager McGraw, and another to Capt. Larry Doyle. Everything was going along peacefully for Umpire Hank O'Day until Doyle was called out on strikes in the third inning. Doyle's way of expressing his objection was to throw a bat high into the air, and see if it could fall without hitting somebody on the head. Throwing the bat by Doyle was the signal for McGraw to start. He got the signal all right. Down the plate he puffed, very torrid under the neckband.

You know how little Willie Jones acted when his mother made him wash his face and go to school last week. Willie kicked and fumed and bellowed. Well, that was McGraw, only he was even more childish than little Willie. He also did a juggling act, tossing his cap, Larry Doyle's cap, a bat, Meyer's mitt and his mask into the air. He placed his teeth close up to O'Day's teeth and had a rapid teeth-to-teeth talk with the umpire about presuming, yes, daring, to call Doyle out. If O'Day had set fire to an orphan asylum, he wouldn't have received a worse call than McGraw gave him. Doyle was ejected from the field and McGraw was benched. Well, sit back in your seat again, for with McGraw and Doyle sent back to the kindergarten perhaps now we can have a little baseball.

The Giants squeezed one run over in the second inning. Bridwell doubled to left and went to third on Leifield's wild pitch. Devlin fanned. Becker popped a foul to Hyatt and, after catching the ball, he lapsed into unconsciousness and Bridwell scored. After Brid reached the bench, Hyatt threw the ball to Gibson and it missed him by 10 feet. In the seventh inning Jack Murray nipped off a delicious crash between right and center fields for an excursion. Leifield retired after that inning and Ferry, the Jersey Skeeter got a chance to make his début as a Pirate. He walked Devore, and Joshua stole second. Fletcher beat out a bunt, Miller threw Snodgrass out at first and Devore scored.

When Pittsburg went to digs in the ninth, its chances against Matty looked as valuable as that straw hat that you tossed into the ash can, Thursday. T. Leach raised the champions hopes by bruising one through Becker for three sacks. Becker didn't make any special effort to get after the ball, either, after he heard it pass. Campbell was thrown out at first and the Flying Dutchman prevented the whitewash by hoisting a rocket to short center. Four or five Giants went after it but nobody got it. Leach scored.

To-day Roger Bresnahan's Disappointments are with us. Two games for one price. Monday they will double head again.

Covaleski Toys with Superbas.

Cincinnati wound up its series in Brooklyn yesterday by introducing Covaleski, who made a great record in the Southern League. He continued his good work, striking out twelve batters and beating Brooklyn 7 to 3. A wild throw by Stark with the bases full in the fourth inning, which permitted three men to score, gave Cincinnati a big lead. The score:

Cubs Win in First Inning.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Sept. 16.—Chicago won to-day's game, 4 to 3. The visitors knocked Moore off the rubber in the first inning, when they scored four runs on four hits, a base on balls, and a sacrifice fly. Brennan, who took Moore's place, kept the hits of his opponents scattered and struck out eight of them. Score:

Jersey City Bats Parkins Out of Box and Beats Newark, 3 to 2.

Jersey City won first blood in the renewal of the intercity series with Newark in Jersey City yesterday, the Skeeters stinging their old-time rivals by a 3 to 2 score. The Ryanites gained a lead in the first inning, when they drove Parkins to cover with four hits and three tallies, Cleary finishing in the box and holding the locals safe. Frill pitched steadily for the victors. The score:

Chicago's Crack Colored Team Here.

The Leland Giants of Chicago, one of the noted colored teams of the country which has never been seen in New York, will play a double-header at Olympic Field, 136th Street and Fifth Avenue, on Sunday. In the opening game the Chicagoans will meet the Stamfords, and in the second contest they will oppose Jack Warner's All-Star Manhattans. The Giants contend that they have won 101 out of 104 games. Rube Foster will pitch both games for the Giants. Adrian and Warner will be the battery for the All-Stars.

Double-Header at McNulty Field.

Another big double-header has been arranged for McNulty Field, 149th Street and Eighth Avenue, on Sunday. In the opening game the Inter-Seals will play the Elizabeth A. A., not J. L. McVicker's team, and the winner will tackle Manager Durkin's fast McNulty Brothers' combination. Archer and Wolf will be on the firing line for the McNultys and Seanion will do the catching. For the Inter-Seals Jekle and Marshall will do the pitching and Lyons will be behind the bat. The Jerseymen will depend upon Ortlich and Rickard in the box, with Bruger on the receiving end.

TIGERS GET TWO HITS OFF PITCHER COOMBS

The Athletics Pound Willett and Stroud Hard and Shut Out Champions, 10 to 0.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 16.—Coombs held Detroit to two hits this afternoon, one of these being a bunt, while the Athletics pounded Willett and Stroud at will, scoring 10 runs. Despite the Athletics' four errors, Detroit never had a chance to score, only one man reaching second. Cobb batted for Willett in the eighth and struck out. The score:

Colored Teams Will Make Fur Fly.

What promises to be one of the biggest baseball treats of the season for the fans at semi-professional games has been prepared for patrons of Meyerrose Park, Ridgewood, L. I., to-morrow. The Cuban Stars will play the Royal Giants in the first engagement, while the winner will oppose the Philadelphia Giants in the second attraction. These are the three foremost colored clubs in the country. The Royals and the Phillies are going to make a hard fight to defeat the Cubans, who are making a wonderful record. Pedroso, Buckner, and McClellan will be on the firing line. Shonts, catcher for the Quakers, attracted much attention last Sunday by his wonderful whip. Play will be called at 1:45 and 3:45 P. M.

Unusual Card for Bronx Oval Fans.

The long-awaited double-header at Bronx Oval, 163d Street and the Southern Boulevard, between the Bronx Athletics and Ridgewoods will be played on Sunday. These games are of the series for the semi-professional championship of Greater New York, and the series now stands in favor of the Bronxonians, two games to none. Oakley Woods, a Bronx boy, and Peterson will be in the box for the Athletics, with Hohman behind the bat. Lindemann and Farmer will be the battery for Ridgewood.

Leland Giants in Double-Header.

Rube Foster's Leland Giants, a strong colored aggregation, will make their first appearance in this city to-morrow in a double-header against the Stamford team and the Manhattans at Olympic Field, 136th Street and Fifth Avenue. The Giants claim to have won thirty-five straight games up to the time they left Chicago last week. The line-up: Duncan, lf; Hill, cf; Johnson, ss; Lloyd, 2b½ Booker, 1b; Payne, rf; Pryor, 3b; Potway, c; Foster, p.

Interstate Naval Regatta.

An inter-State race for Naval Militia will be rowed on the Hudson River at Ninety-seventh Street Saturday, Sept. 24. Crews from the various Naval Militia organizations of the Atlantic and lake States will compete. The races, which will be held under the auspices of the First Naval Battalion, will consist of four events—a two-mile ten-oared cutter race, a one-mile cutter race for junior crews, a one-mile six-oared whaleboat race, and a canoe paddling event over a course one and one-half miles in length. Entries have been received from New York, New Jersey, Maryland, South Carolina, and Ohio. The North Atlantic fleet will be present, and it is possible that several of the sixteen vessels will enter twelve-oared cutter crews in a two-mile race, which the battalion is trying to arrange. A valuable trophy has been offered for this event.

Polo at Cedarhurst To-day.

A special polo match has been arranged for this afternoon at Cedarhurst, L. I., between the Ranelagh team of England and the Long Island team. The Ranelagh team will be made up of the Grenfell brothers, Lord Rocksavage, and F. A. Gill. The Long Island team will include Rene La Montagne, Jr., J. E. Cowdin, Malcolm Stevenson, and Devereux Milburn. Play will begin at 4 o'clock.

YALE SQUAD NUMBERS 45.

Childs and Robinson Report to Coaches at Lakeville, Conn.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEVILLE, Conn., Sept. 16.—The Yale football squad was increased to forty-five to-day by the addition of half a dozen new arrivals. Childs and Robinson were the most notable newcomers. Childs played tackle part of last year's Harvard game, and Robinson was picked for half back for the big games before he was crippled. Childs will not remain at Lakeville because of scholarship trouble. Savage, end rush and the team's best kicker, has not reported for the same reason. Kilpatrick and Corey will not report till the squad returns to New Haven.

Morning and afternoon signal practice, accompanied by drill in the rudiments, was ordered, and the cool weather made long work possible. The 'Varsity line-up: Centre, Morris; guards, Fuller and Paul; tackles, Childs and Tomlinson; quarter back, Howe; half backs, Daly and Field, and full back, Baker.

Philbin, who was tried at end on the 'Varsity yesterday, went back to half back on the second eleven, and Walter Camp, Jr., played full back on the second eleven. Scrimmaging will not be tried till next week.

Princeton Answers Football Call.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 16.—The Princeton football squad began practice on University Field this afternoon. Forty candidates answered the call of Head Coach Roper and Coaches Waller and Harlan. The practice consisted of kicking goals from angles, running down under punts, and "quick starting." No signals have been run, but this will soon be part of the practice.

Capt. Eddie Hart is working on a condition of last year, and so far has not been with the squad. The only other "P" men of last year's team are Sparks, half back, who got into the Yale game, and McCormick, guard. Blumenthal, centre on last year's freshmen team; Dunlap, an end; Pendleton and Brown, half backs; Winants, tackle or guard; Wilson and Ellsworth, tackles; Clark, centre; McLean, tackle; Bissell, guard; Ballou, quarter, and Sawyer, half back, are some of the most promising candidates for the team. Wilson played on a former Lafayette team and was not eligible last year. Ballou was also barred because he played on Penn State.

Cornell Practices Signals.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 16.—The Cornell 'Varsity football team was put through stiff signal practice on Percy Field to-day. Although the weather was warm, the coaches sent the candidates along at a fast clip. Barney O'Rourke arrived to-day to help in the coaching. Two teams were lined up and taught the fundamental principles of football, in running down the field under a kick-off, and in receiving the ball and returning it with interference. Capt. Simpson dashed through the scrubs for a touchdown after receiving the kick-off. Champaign, tackle, and Bates, half back, both of Ithaca, worked splendidly. Although the practice is several weeks in advance of the usual workout, nearly fifty candidates are on hand.

Coach Wheaton Joins Navy Squad.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 16.—Those having charge of football at the Naval Academy were delighted this afternoon by the presence of Wheaton, one of Yale's principal backs last season, who will be field coach for the academy team this year. Wheaton was not due to arrive in Annapolis until the latter part of next week, but showed his interest in his task by arriving to-day and being present on the field in football clothes this afternoon. Only the candidates from the new fourth class were out this afternoon, but the full squad will report on Thursday of next week, and real work begin at once. The other coaches out were Head Coach Berrien and Howard, and Capt. Clay of this season's team was also on hand.

MOTOR BOAT CARNIVAL.

Entries for Two-Day Meet on the Hudson Coming in Fast.

Entries for the National motor boat carnival to be held on the Hudson River, Sept. 21 to 24, under the auspices of the Motor Boat Club of America, are piling up fast. The Najme, houseboat of the Motor Boat Club of America, will be anchored off 158th Street, North River, and the races will start and finish at that point.

The long-distance events to Poughkeepsie and return for speed boats and the race to Peekskill and return for cruisers, will contain all the boats that have achieved success in previous races of this character as well as several new boats whose performances are not so well known.

The challenging boats in the various championship classes are as follows: Hurry, entered by Charles Francis and M. M. Whitaker, for the International Trophy; Tartar, Ralph E. Slavin's speedy sixty-footer, for the National Trophy; James Simpson's racer Peter Pan III., for the Inter-State Trophy; Wanderlust, owned by E. J. Steiner, for the Motor Yacht Trophy, and Eronel, Samuel Cochrane's sturdy Bermuda race winner, for the Cabin Launch Trophy.

The Skimmer, a hydroplane, owned by Dr. J. H. Branth, will be shown in competition for the first time, in the international championship event. Her inventor says she has a speed that has never been reached by any boat. She was originally intended as a defender of the Harmsworth Cup, but there was some delay in her construction.

W. T. Reed of Atlantic City is sending a speedy racer, the Vanish, to try for the long-distance honors. Among other cracks, the fast Western boats Cero II. and Hoosier Boy and the Buffalo speedster La Truda, are expected to show their paces for the first time in the East. Entries close Sept. 19, and communications may be addressed to the Secretary of the Race Committee, 29 West Thirty-ninth Street, New York City.

Suffolk Fair Racing Results.

RIVERHEAD, L. I., Sept. 16.—The Suffolk County fair was brought to a close this afternoon. It was one of the most successful that has ever been held here. Not only were the exhibits good and all the attractions first class, but the weather was perfect, and big crowds turned out every day. The track events to-day resulted as follows:

FOWNES AND WOOD LEFT FOR GOLF FINAL

Evans and Tuckerman Beaten Chiefly Because of Their Poor Putting.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Sept. 16.—The mid-West will meet the Western edge of the East for the amateur golf championship of the country at the Country Club to-morrow for the winners in the semi-final round to-day were Warren K. Wood of the Homewood Club, Chicago, and William C. Fownes, Jr., of the Oakmont Country Club, Pittsburg. The losers, both of whom went down on the home green, were Walter R. Tuckerman of the Stockbridge (Mass.,) Golf Club, and Charles Evans, Jr., of the Edgewater Golf Club of Chicago. Wood won from Tuckerman by 2 up and Fownes from Evans by 1 up.

The much neglected putter settled the matches to-day, proving a more doughty weapon than the far famed mid-iron or the wooden-headed driver. Wood ran down half a dozen puts of more than ten feet on the greens, while Fownes's stability in that important department and Evans's failure won the other match. Both the winners used the putting cleek, ignoring the mallet putter, which has been tabooed by the British Association.

"Chick" Evans will never forget the sixteenth hole at the Country Club, over the smooth green of which he lost his chance for the championship. Until the Autumn sun began to set behind the chestnut trees this afternoon, golfing at Brookline for young Evans, son of an Evanston (Ill.) minister, had been one joyous whirl around the 3 1-3 miles course, with the knowledge always that he was a hot favorite for the final honors.

The sixteen hole is called "the Clyde," because it is close to the entrance of the grounds, which formerly were known as Clyde Park. It is only 125 yards from the tee to the near edge of the green and even ordinary players make it in three strokes, despite a trio of deep traps that yawn in front of the smooth surface. With two holes stowed safely away in his bag, Evans mounted the tee, glanced at the flags in the hole and, pulling out a mashie, tossed his ball deftly on the edge of the green. It looked like an easy 3, and when Fownes, a minute later, fell short and was dangerously near the edge of one of the traps, half the crowd started back for the clubhouse, satisfied that Evans had victory well within his grasp.

But Fownes is a fighter. Four and six years ago he put the veteran Travis out in thirty-seven-hole-matches. So the situation on the sixteenth green to-day, or what was at that time the thirty-fourth hole in the match, did not bother him a bit. He pitched his ball from the edge of the trap eighteen feet past the hole. Then Evans putted with perfect confidence that the match was his with a half for the hole, but the ball ran over. Fownes holed out his put, and Evans missed his by a hair and lost the hole. The break was astonishing and disturbed the youngster, and when on the next hole Fownes laid his second dead to the pin and holed out 360 yards in 3, Evans became anxious for the first time since his arrival in the East. They both made fine drives for the home hole across the polo field and each was on the green on the second shot, but again Evans was too strong with his putter and the ball overran, while Fownes laid his third dead. Evans failed to run down a six foot putt and with tears in his eyes joined the hundreds that had ringed the hole in applauding the winner. It was a hard match for a youngster to lose, but it was a greater one for Fownes to win. For the first time after ten years, work he finds himself a finalist in the National event.

The morning play between Fownes and Evans was a duel of holes and not for scores. Neither played in previous form on individual holes and the cards were above the average. Evans had a lead of two holes at the fourth, but Fownes won back one of the holes immediately, and from that time until the end of the first eighteen holes they were never more than a hole apart, Fownes ending the morning play one hole to the good. Evans started out strong in the afternoon, winning back the holes from Fownes on the nineteenth green and taking the next two because of his opponent's poor approach work. Fownes would have been several holes down later in the game, but saved himself with his putter.

It looked all up with the Pittsburg golfer when he trapped his ball on the thirteenth hole and overran his second shot for the long fourteenth. Fownes was trapped again on the fifteenth and with Evans 2 up and 3 to play the two players stepped up to the sixteenth tee. Then came the Evans golfing Waterloo.

For twenty-four out of the thirty-six holes Tuckerman held Wood almost at his mercy, the morning round ending four holes to the good for the Stockbridge player. With this long lead, accomplished principally through better iron play, the two started the afternoon just ahead of Fownes and Evans. But Wood proved himself a grand uphill player and picked up two of the holes at the very start wholly by his putting. Both played good golf for the next three holes. For the sixth Wood laid his second shot dead to the hole and pulled down the lead to 1 up. He squared the match on the eighth, or what was then the twenty-sixth. The next two were halved in fair figures. Then Tuckerman pulled away by laying an approach and both had chances to win the twelfth, but failed on the green. Wood again made it even on the thirteenth by holing a 20-foot put. The next three were halved. Tuckerman's defeat was practically accomplished on the seventeenth hole when he pulled his tee shot into a trap, while on the home green Wood clinched the contest by holing another long put for a 3. Wood made the course in the afternoon in 73, the best score since Herreshoff's fine work on Wednesday.

Mrs. Kennett Beaten in Golf.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Another surprise to-day was added to the games that have occurred this week in the Women's Western Golf Association championship tournament at the Skokie Club. Mrs. Harvey L. Pound of the Skokie Club defeated Mrs. Luther Kennett of the Evanston Golf Club, gold medalist of the tournament, and the Southern California champion, 4 up and 2 to play in the semi-final round. The victory brings Mrs. Pound in the final to-morrow against Mrs. Thurston Harris of Westward Ho, who defeated Mrs. Edmund T. Perkins of Glen View.

Champions Will Compete To-day.

The management of the New York Press Club contends that never in the history of sport has such a galaxy of stars been entered for an athletic meeting in New York, and such an authority as James E. Sullivan, President of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union, says that outside of the last Olympic games in London, no competitions were ever featured with as classy an entry as has been received for the carnival at American League Park this afternoon. Scarcely a champion worth telling about will be missing from the lists, and experts figure that the hot competition will almost surely result in a wholesale smashing of records.

WOODROW WILSON.

By the nomination of President WOODROW WILSON of Princeton, and by the adoption of a platform which bears the impress of his style and principles, the Democracy of New Jersey has given to a great citizen a great opportunity for service. If elected, Gov. WILSON will be not only the Chief Executive of New Jersey; he will be a leader among many able Governors, Democratic and Republican, in a series of harmonious reforms for which the inspiration must come from within the States.

The States are raking their fires and sweeping their hearths. They are putting their houses in order. They are proving their independence and self-sustaining powers. And they are shaming the slanderer who has walked up and down this land proclaiming their weakness and his all-sufficient powers to rescue them from perdition.

THE PRESIDENT'S STATE OF MIND.

That President TAFT should be annoyed by the performances of Mr. ROOSEVELT is natural. That he should be, or need be, discouraged is by no means so obvious. We hope that the despondent mood in which he is reported to have said that he did not care for a renomination in 1912, and that, from the way things are drifting, perhaps no Republican can be elected in that year "save possibly one," was a transitory one.

The President ought to see that time works with him, against Mr. ROOSEVELT. Two years in advance of the convention Mr. ROOSEVELT has begun a vociferous and obstreperous campaign for the nomination. At this moment he occupies the whole stage. It is not possible for any man, not even for Mr. ROOSEVELT, to hold the whole attention of all the people for two years. He has begun too early and his pitch is too high. There is, too, fortunately, a first-rate chance that he will vastly diminish his present popularity. For one thing, the people may tire of him. There are signs of that already. But if he goes on as he has begun they will certainly withdraw their confidence from him and his doctrines. His attack upon the Supreme Court and his propounding of theories that do violence to American principles and American institutions have alarmed great numbers of his countrymen, they have prompted still greater numbers to a sober examination of the man and his doctrines. When the people begin to think soberly about Mr. THEODORE ROOSEVELT, the menace of his activities will diminish. Two years may accomplish much in that direction.

Mr. TAFT has passed through the most trying period of his Administration—the first year. His fame and his fortune are now in his own hands. His worst mistake was that about the tariff. That he has done his best to correct, and for that correction he has the approval of the country. If by his future acts and policies he continues to merit that approval, he will have no need to trouble himself about "indorsements" in Republican State platforms. They will come spontaneously and with enthusiasm. If he will but exhibit himself to the country as a self-sustained, well-poised Executive, and if he will give evidence of a strong individuality, if he will with the best judgment and the highest wisdom at his command determine what he ought to do and must do without regard to Mr. ROOSEVELT or the group of Mr. ROOSEVELT'S friends who have shown such hostility to him, he will find that the country will do him ample justice, will approve and applaud.

The best service that intelligent and sober-minded Republicans can do for their party and for the country at this juncture is to stand up against the pretensions and the inordinate ambitions of THEODORE ROOSEVELT. It will be their best service, for the plain reason that he is a reckless and dangerous man. If, however, all the Republicans big and little are to prostrate themselves in the dust, their teeth chattering and their limbs quaking before the behemoth of Oyster Bay, there is solid ground for confidence and encouragement in the very evident disposition of the Democratic Party to make itself once more worthy of the people's confidence. There could be no better evidence of this than the nomination of WOODROW WILSON for Governor by the Democrats of New Jersey. It shows that a change has come over the Democratic Party, that a change has come over our politics. Nominations of such men as President WILSON have been urged and pleaded for in the past, but the urgings and the pleadings have been looked upon as counsels of perfection. In New Jersey the ideal has come to realization. The same spirit prevails among the Democracy of Connecticut, where Mr. BALDWIN'S nomination, an act of political wisdom worthy of the highest praise, has everywhere been recognized as a most encouraging proof of the new Democratic spirit. That spirit prevailed in Maine, where Mr. PLAISTED, a candidate of the Wilson and Baldwin type, was elected by a majority that astonished even his supporters. We hope Mr. TAFT, however much he may be annoyed, will not be discouraged. But even if he falters, the country, in view of the present temper of the Democracy, need not yield to despondency.

A RECKLESS SQUANDERER.

Taking their cue from GIFFORD PINCHOT, who has all along taught this doctrine, the Democrats of Wisconsin have embodied in their platform the following charge against the National Republican Party:

> We charge that the Republican Party has been a reckless squanderer of our natural resources. Of our public domain, once the greatest heritage of our people, the Republican Party has from the year 1862 down to the present time granted to corporations 181,419,568 acres, and to foreign capitalists and noblemen a total of 17,172,000 acres, equal in size in the aggregate to ten average States of the Union; from all of which the people of the United States have derived no profit or compensation whatever.

But this is really an attack upon the principle of Federal control of natural resources. Mr. PINCHOT has zealously sought to prove the substance of the Wisconsin platform's charges. The present fight against Secretary BALLINGER is an effort to prove it. Why, then, Mr. PINCHOT'S continued faith in the Federal machine? Why Mr. ROOSEVELT'S? At St. Paul Mr. ROOSEVELT said:

> They [the greedy corporate interests] advocate at this time State control simply because they believe it to be the least effective. In the great fight of the people to drive the special interests from the dominion of our Government the Nation is stronger and its jurisdiction is more effective than that of any State. The most effective weapon against these great corporations, most of which are financed and owned on the Atlantic Coast, will be Federal laws and the Federal Executive.

Although often employed for this very purpose, it has never proved an effective weapon. Over sixty years ago, in his message to Congress of Dec. 2, 1848, President FILLMORE recommended a method of selling the public lands "under such restrictions as to quantity and time as will insure the best price and guard most effectually against combinations of capitalists to obtain monopolies." After long trial the policy of leasing mineral lands, according to President POLK in his message of Dec. 2, 1845, had proved "radically defective." Reservation from sale had been tried by both these Presidents, and, as far back as Feb. 23, 1822, a conservation law was passed "to provide for the preservation of the timber of the United States in Florida." Since then the Government has operated under several conservation acts, always struggling against monopolists, always beaten. Just now, while the States are making their own patterns in the passage and enforcement of adequate Public Service Commissions laws, guarding their forests, and conserving their water powers, we are asked to renew our faith in the cumbrous and distant Government at Washington.

BANKING CONTRADICTIONS.

It was thought yesterday that today's bank statement would reflect a loss of some six million dollars of reserve money. There is nothing unusual about that at this time of the year. Also, it is in accord with experience that the interior banks should be making their customary professions of holding unusual reserves, and being prepared to move the crops with their own money. This year similar statements are being made daily from Washington. Day by day we are being supplied with statements made under the recent call for reports of banking conditions, and we are told that the reserves are ample.

As a rule this is true, there being just enough exceptions to prove the rule, and in about the places where exceptions would be expected. Yet it is being proved once more that it is our custom to attach too much importance to reserves and too little to other banking conditions. The hoarding of reserves may be as objectionable as a moderate deficiency, and is characteristic of conditions when banks feel that their loans are in rather full amount, and are immobile in quality. This is especially not true of banking conditions here this year, but is true in some portions of the country, as is proved by the relations of our banks with their depositing banks as disclosed by the recent reports. The local situation is exceptionally liquid. At this central point there is only $603,000,000 due other banks, against $672,481,000 last year. And there is due our local banks $72,083,000 from other banks, against $59,925,000 due last year at this time. In other words, at the same time that the country reserves are said to be so satisfactory they are drawing down their deposits here and are rediscounting in this market to an exceptional amount.

The same thing is noted in other central reserve cities. In the words of a representative Chicago banker:

> Country banks are asking for loans far in excess of anything they should be entitled to. Relatively speaking, their reserves are larger than our own. They seem to have fears of what the future has in store and there is no foundation for them. Nothing significant will come of this condition, but to the reserve agent banks it is an annoying one.

Under other conditions the fact of the rediscounts, now so remarkable, would not be occasion for comment. But a certain degree of reproach attaches to rediscounts on the credit of the bank asking the accommodation. It is, of course, well known to all that there is no National discount market in the United States. Nor is there any possibility of there being one until it is possible to institute the custom of banking acceptances. Accepted paper passes on the credit of the accepting banker, and not on the credit of the holder of the paper asking for a rediscount. Our National banks cannot accept commercial paper, and therefore when a National bank asks for a rediscount it lessens its own credit in some degree. The rediscounts now so common ought to be considered in connection with the reserve statements now being made. The reserves are ample, but the condition of the loan account is not so good, except locally.

As usual, New York is carrying a good portion of the country, and that very portion of the country is boasting of its strength and criticising New York. It is not the fault of New York, certainly, nor yet even of the rest of the country. It is the fault of the banking system of which we used to be so proud. Reserves are owned in one centre and deposited in another, and are the basis of loans in both places. And there being no National discount or rediscount market loans are based on stock exchange securities and promissory notes of local borrowers, instead of on accepted bills of exchange of unquestioned value. The result is that observation is fixed on the security market instead of on the discount market; and that rediscounts are not such a natural means of relief to a banking situation as they are elsewhere, and ought to be here.

THE NEW FOOTBALL.

The American intercollegiate game of football, the experts declare, will this Fall see the greatest change in its history. It will be made safe to the players, inspiring to the spectators. Hopeful of this assurance, the Board of Education of this city announces that it will permit the new game to be tried in the high schools, while many colleges that were about to follow the example of some by abolishing it have held their ban in abeyance.

Everywhere football is put on probation. Among established sports it has lost its old place of security. It must "make good." If plans maturing during the Summer are ripe for the promised visit to this country of the Cambridge Rugby championship teams, it must stand the test of comparison with the reputedly swifter British game. It will suffer by this comparison if, according to WALTER CAMP'S expressed ideal, American football is still a "game for fat boys."

MR. M'ADOO'S OFFER.

Mr. MCADOO is always welcome as a purveyor to the insatiable desire of New Yorkers to travel up and down their city and out of it and into it. His "Hudson tubes" are of very great use and value to the people of New York. He was applauded when he proposed to build a subway from the Grand Central Station through Forty-second Street and Sixth Avenue to a connection with his Hudson River system. His present proposal to the Public Service Commission, that he will be glad to operate a subway from Thirty-fourth Street through Broadway to Union Square and thence southerly to the Hudson terminal through University Place, Wooster and Church Streets, is likewise welcome. We want more subways, and it is a good sign that offers of this kind are made.

But we must dissent from some of Mr. MCADOO'S definitions. He assures the Public Service Commission of his company's belief that the plan he now proposes "offers the best and promptest solution of the present rapid transit need for the west side"; and he again speaks of it as a "long desired and much needed west side rapid transit line." Anybody can see that Mr. MCADOO'S plan leaves the west side rapid transit problem altogether unsolved. To the upper west side this new line would offer no service at all. At Forty-second Street it turns to the east, not to the west. Any subway that approaches a solution of the west side problem must pass the new Pennsylvania terminal. Mr. MCADOO'S line does nothing of the kind. It would let its passengers off at Broadway and Sixth Avenue, a thousand feet from the Pennsylvania terminal, a distance which they would have the privilege of traversing on foot through the underground "passage" which he would have the city construct.

The solution of the west side problem is extraordinarily simple, yet for some mysterious reason both the Interborough people and the Public Service Commission shun and dodge it as though it were the first cousin to the plague. There is nothing better than the so-called "H" plan, there is nothing so good. A line extending from Forty-second Street down Seventh Avenue, and thence on the west side to the Battery, and an east side line from Forty-second Street north, would, with the present Subway, supply a great public need. Yet the Interborough and the Commission seem to be willing to talk about any other lines rather than these, and nobody appears to pay any attention to the obvious need of a subway to the Pennsylvania terminal.

We have no doubt that Mr. MCADOO'S company would be entirely willing to operate a subway from Thirty-fourth Street through Broadway, and thence to the Hudson terminal. This line runs through great business areas of the city. Anybody might take a contract to operate such a subway with the absolute certainty of large earnings. But the principle has been laid down by the Commission that intending contractors must take the lean with the fat. This route is all fat, an idea which may possibly occur to the Commission in their dealings with Mr. MCADOO.

There is another aspect of this offer which will hardly escape public attention. The subway Mr. MCADOO wants the city to build with its money and permit him to operate would take passengers out of New York City. If Jersey City and Newark and other New Jersey communities should propose to build such a subway with their money, the offer would receive consideration. But will the City of New York issue its bonds to provide facilities for travel to New Jersey when the crying need of its people is for rapid transit routes running north and east, not west? We do not see how Mr. MCADOO'S proposed route would add materially to assessable valuations in New York City. Such additions would inevitably accrue from subways carrying passengers to the Bronx or to Queens. However, if this evidence of Mr. MCADOO'S willingness to make further ventures in providing rapid transit facilities in New York shall prompt the Interborough Company to the exhibition of a more liberal spirit in its dealings with the Public Service Commission, and shall serve to elicit better offers from that company, it will not have been made in vain.

ABOUT BARBED WIRE FENCES.

The Government is building a barbed wire fence a thousand miles long between the United States and Mexico. There is just as much need of a three-thousand-mile fence across the continent along our Northern border. These fences are the outward and visible expression of the obstacles to trade embodied in the spirit of the best tariff ever enacted, which is already in process of amendment. As in the case of prohibition, the majority of the electorate is in favor of the law, and there is unanimity against its enforcement. There is so little real public opinion in support of the law that few are ashamed to smuggle and many boast of it.

Barbed wire and prison cells alone can compel obedience to a statute which has no sanction in public opinion. It is unpopular exactly in proportion to the difficulty in evading its enforcement, and gives to those willing to evade the law an unfair advantage against those who prefer to respect it. The barbs in the fence are harmless compared with the barbs in the statute, but many will see the point better in the case of the fence than when they are concealed in the language of the laws and party platforms.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

It Was Not a Very Good Joke. It may reveal an undeveloped sense of humor for us to say so, but we do think that the members of the WHITNEY-RAINEY hunting expedition didn't have much or very good reason for laughing at the Danes for accepting as true what was told them at Godhaven as to who commanded the yacht Beothic and its mission in those waters.

A good many of us rather expect to be believed when we make what seems to be a civil answer to a civil question, and we would be more inclined to resent incredulity than to be surprised and amused at the assumption by Danes or anybody else that when we said a thing it was true. False statements, when their falsity is obvious or of easy and reasonable deduction, are often funny, and quite innocently funny, but the officers on the Hans Egede, in spite of their terrible experience with Dr. COOK, showed no very ridiculous naïveté when, hearing in response to their hail that Mr. BRADLEY commanded the Beothic and was on his way to Etah to get what Dr. COOK left there, they took the news at its face value and repeated it in Copenhagen.

Is it the contention that the Danes, having been deceived by one American traveler, should conclude that all American travelers are accurately characterized by a short and ugly word? If they did so their reputation for good sense as well as for courtesy would suffer, we think, more than it will because they allowed themselves to be deluded twice by representatives of the same nation.

So, in our opinion, the members of the WHITNEY-RAINEY expedition made a mistake in being the first to laugh at the joke they played on the Captain of the Hans Egede and, through him, on the inhabitants of the Danish capital. They should have waited to see whether or not other people were going to laugh at their jest, and, if nobody did, they might then have realized that the thing for themselves to do was not to laugh at all, but instead to apologize for a mean trick that darkened and extended the stain Dr. COOK put on the word "American." As the case appears to us, the Danes have as little reason to be humiliated or confused by their second as by their first mistake, but if many more of our humorists lead them into making mistakes of the same kind, the Danes may learn to show a skepticism which Americans will not enjoy.

Cholera in Naples. According to present indications, the municipal authorities in Naples have for some days been concealing the existence of cholera in that city. The motives that lead to the taking of that course are comprehensible enough, since to acknowledge the presence in a big commercial town of a disease like cholera means an immediate and serious injury to many interests. The force of this argument has caused many cities besides Naples to adopt the policy of concealment, and the people of San Francisco, among others in this country, could tell of the same thing with respect to bubonic plague having been done here within years very recent. That the concealment policy is as foolish as it is criminal—that the suppression of news about epidemics adds enormously to the difficulty of suppressing the epidemics themselves and the ending of the losses they cause—is now generally recognized, however, and the city that hides its sick for a single day deliberately puts itself on the same moral and mental level as that occupied by the ignorant Neapolitans who are desperately resisting the efforts of their wiser fellow-townsmen to remove cholera patients from the tenements to hospitals where they can be isolated and cared for.

Naples is now, fortunately, a vastly cleaner place than it used to be, but even yet its sanitary reform is hardly more than well begun. It is, therefore, a city where the fight with cholera will be a hard one at best, and the United States is particularly interested in every detail of the campaign, because Naples is the port whence most of our Italian immigrants start for this country. We are fairly well guarded, however, by the length of the voyage through the Mediterranean and across the Atlantic, since that reduces almost to nothing the possibility that immigrants who arrive here well will be attacked by the disease later. That much simplifies the task of our quarantine officials, and as cholera is a disease of comparatively easy diagnosis and restriction, even though it is one extremely hard to cure, there is no reason for any feeling of panic here. There is reason, of course, for the exercise of great care, and that our competent health officials are doing. But they must not forget, as they are not likely to forget, that if a few cases of cholera do get here, all of us and the rest of the world must know it instantly.

A Decision Really Desirable. While Justice BISCHOFF was deciding as to the right of the city to compel cabs with taximeters to charge lower fares than those that may be exacted by cabs not thus equipped, it would have been well, or at least convenient, had he included an obiter dictum as to the proper pronunciation of the name of that interesting, though dubiously accurate, device.

For it is a source of grief to a few New Yorkers that most of their fellow-townsmen insist on accenting the third, instead of the second, syllable of the word—a mistake which would be easier to understand if it were also made in the case of the many much commoner words of the same kind, like "thermometer" and "barometer," to mention only two of them. The error is now so thoroughly established, however, that it could not be corrected even by the solemn pronouncement of a Supreme Court Justice.

In language, though not in morals, whatever is, is right, and it is no more absurd to accent the second syllable of "thermometer" and the third of "taximeter" than it is to indulge in any other of the thousands and thousands of eccentricities and inconsistencies with which the English language and spelling abound. The man who is content, for instance, to make a laborious difference between "deign" and "disdain" shouldn't object to any fault in popular speech. But he does, and the better he likes errors of the one sort the deeper is his horror at the other kind.

TRAVELERS' BAGGAGE.

Argues That No Amount Should Be Spared Exaction of Duties.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The indignation of the traveling public as to the present inquisitorial methods of examining baggage is natural enough. But a list of the names of the prominent and wealthy persons who have been caught in Mr. Loeb's net during the past year is more than a justification of his drastic methods.

There is a curious complacency on the part of the public at large toward smuggling. Although it is a rather mean and dirty kind of dishonesty (involving as it does deliberate perjury for the sake of retaining money which under the law belongs to the community) most of the persons found guilty are certainly not those who in ordinary circumstances would forswear themselves or steal. It is quite necessary, therefore, to put the many thousand honest people to this discomfort of drastic baggage examination in order to detect the occasional dishonest person.

While there is not the same sense of personal indignity involved, practically the same methods are pursued at the Custom House in connection with all importations. The correctness of every invoice must be sworn to by the importer. Then the invoice itself goes through a very severe investigation, and the goods are opened and overhauled in order to see whether or not the importer has perjured himself by omissions or undervaluation.

Yet, annoying as this system is, it is quite necessary, not only for the collection of what is due to the Government under the law, but for the protection of the honest importer against the unfair competition of the dishonest one.

It has been frequently pointed out that the amount collected for duties on passengers' baggage is trifling when compared with the expense involved in collecting it and the immense amount of irritation caused by the system. This is true enough, but it is easy to imagine what an enormous increase there would be in the amount of dutiable goods brought in in the form of baggage were it not for the careful examination.

Another point of view of the matter, however, is often overlooked. Most people say it is absurd that goods brought in by individuals and not for sale should be held as dutiable, and that at any rate the amount allowed each passenger, namely $100, is entirely inadequate. Such people do not stop to think of the injustice involved in compelling importers to pay high duties on every dollar's worth brought in by them for sale in this country, and yet permitting the well-to-do citizen (who would naturally be the customer of the importer) to bring in the same goods without any duty. Especially under our theory of protection of home interests is it only equitable and just that the American business man should not have this unfair discrimination against him in favor of just that class in the community that can best afford to contribute toward the revenue of the Government. In strict fairness no amount should be subject to free entry, but duty should be paid on all foreign purchases on which there is a tariff due under the law. IRVING PUTNAM.

Unequipped Short Transit Routes.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial in to-day's issue on "Travel in New York City" is the best exposition of the transit problem in New York City that I have read. It does seem strange that the Public Service Commission should so persistently endeavor to build additional north and south transit lines while, as you say, "It is odd that none of the transit reformers turn their attention to supplying short rides over existing routes on which not a wheel is turning."

Besides the Belmont tunnel, which opens up a field of vacant land close to the heart of Manhattan, and which seems as far from being utilized as when it was begun, we have the Queensboro Bridge, with the best part of its transit facilities still waiting for cars to be run over them.

The utilization of these avenues of transit is blocked by failure of the Public Service Commission and the Interborough officials to reach an agreement on the question of extending the Interborough lines.

The Public Service Commission seems bent on increasing the congestion in Manhattan and the Bronx rather than relieving this congestion by opening up the avenues of traffic already completed to the east, where the people can find cheaper rents and cheaper land, which, as you say, they can reach in half the time.

BRAVE SEAMAN COMMENDED.

Iowa Gunner's Mate Dived Several Times After Man Who Fell Overboard.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Emil Falk, a gunner's mate on the battleship Iowa, plunged overboard on Sept. 1 between the steel hull of the battleship and a lighter alongside from which she was coaling in the effort to save the life of a shipmate, James E. Stanley.

The Iowa was lying off Annapolis, Md., at the time, and Stanley, falling from the forecastle of the ship, was stunned by striking the lighter, and, slipping between the two vessels, was drowned. Falk dived several times to see if the body could have come up under the lighter. This act, Acting Secretary Nicholson declared, was fraught with the greatest danger, due not only to the risk of being crushed between the hulls, but also of being drowned underneath the lighter.

In acknowledgment of his bravery, Navy Department officials have commended the conduct of Falk in the highest terms. Falk enlisted at Buffalo and is a resident of Milltown, N. J., where his father, Joseph Falk, lives.

ADMIRAL BERRY RETIRED.

Entered Navy in July, 1865, and Saw Much Sea Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Rear Admiral Albert G. Berry, on duty at the Washington Navy Yard as a member of the Naval Examining and Retiring Boards, and Chaplain David H. Tricou, on duty at the Naval Home, Philadelphia, were placed on the retired list to-day on account of age.

Admiral Berry is from Tennessee and entered the navy in July, 1865. He has had nearly twenty-two years' service at sea and has been a Rear Admiral since June, 1909.

Chaplain Tricou is the senior Chaplain in the navy and has the rank of Captain. He is from Maine and began his naval career in February, 1872. He has had about twelve years' sea service, and has been stationed at Philadelphia since November, 1905.

KNOX NOT RESIGNING.

Secretary Says Reports to That Effect Are All Nonsense.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 16.—Secretary of State Philander C. Knox paid New Haven a brief visit to-day on his way from Maine, where he had been on a fishing trip, to his farm at Valley Forge, Penn. Accompanying him were Mrs. Knox, Judge Young of Pittsburg, and Charles Wilson, Mr. Knox's secretary.

Mr. Knox was disinclined to discuss public affairs, but when he was asked if it was true that he was going to resign his place in the Cabinet, he replied emphatically:

"That is all nonsense."

The Secretary added:

"I never grant an interview on public matters."

GROWTH OF SMALLER CITIES.

Wilkesbarre Has 67,105, or 15,384 More —Covington, Ky., Has 53,270.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—The population of Wilkesbarre, Penn., is 67,105, an increase of 15,384, or 29.7 per cent., as compared with 51,721 in 1900.

The population of Covington, Ky., is 53,270, an increase of 10,332, or 24.1 per cent., as compared with 42,938 in 1900. Kenton County, Ky., in which Covington is located, has a population of 70,355, as compared with 63,591 in 1900.

The population of Racine, Wis., is 38,002, an increase of 8,900, or 30.6 per cent. as compared with 29.102 in 1900.

The population of Waterloo, Ia., is 26,693, an increase of 14,113, or 112.2 per cent. as compared with 12,580 in 1900.

KLONDIKE MINES STILL RICH.

Production of $150,000,000 Leaves as Much Gold to be Taken Out.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—The Klondike placer mining district in Alaska has produced $150,000,000 worth of gold since 1898, and mining experts estimate that the amount yet to be mined will equal that already produced.

Consul Cole of Dawson reports that the gold output for 1910 will exceed that of 1909, when more than $3,500,000 worth was produced. Most of this gold, he states, was shipped to the United States. A small quantity went to the new Canadian mint.

Consul Cole reports that rich deposits of copper ore have been discovered in the southern part of the Klondike district.

CANNOT ARM BOY TROOPS.

War Department Decides It Has No Authority to Do So.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—The militia division of the War Department recently received an application for guns, uniforms, and other equipment for a company of boys. The department has decided that there is no authority of law for such an issue.

If the company were organized as a rifle club and affiliated with the National Rifle Association of America the necessary arms and equipment could be purchased through the Governor of the State out of the funds appropriated by Congress and allotted to each State for the equipment of its militia.

The Most Delightful Months.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to a recent letter in the columns of THE TIMES on the subject of Autumn vacations. I would like to add my word in favor of September and October, which are indeed the most delightful months of the year in the White Mountains. Vacationists who have deferred their holidays have many advantages over those who take the earlier seasons. One may cover twice as much country for the same money in the Autumn because of the low excursion rates which obtain both in this country and in Canada. The days are warm and sunny, delightfully clear, the nights cool and crisp. It is the best time for mountain climbing and golf and tennis, for motoring and driving. The trips by water, particularly that from Montreal to the Saguenay, are at their best. The turning foliage of maple and beech covers the hillsides with its gorgeous crimson and gold. All the resources of July and August are open to the vacationer of September and October, and he may have the delight of enjoying them at a minimum of expenditure and in far more exclusive society than when "everybody" is out of town. Dicta from Coney.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

So Coney Island is responsible for this silly dictum of "Hats off!" as applied to comfortable Summer straws on Sept. 15. There never was any common sense or climatic prompting in it, and the whole thing appears to simmer down to a dictate of hoodlumism.

Why not forget this Sept. 15 nonsense long enough to get at the monstrosity of the wearing of tan shoes with dark clothing, furs with chiffon regalia, and other Broadway barbarisms imported from Coney? INQUIRER.

Ignorant Officials.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I would like to know what would be the fate of a $50 per month railroad clerk who, if placed on the stand before the Inter-State Commerce Commission to give testimony relative to his business, would display the same amount of ignorance of it as has been given by Vice Presidents, Auditors, Traffic Managers, and other high-priced officials. ART MUSEUM COURSE FOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Special Instruction Arranged at the Metropolitan for Teachers and Their Pupils.

NEW PURCHASES ON VIEW

Many Rare Objects Obtained by the Curator of Decorative Arts While in Europe This Summer.

An arrangement has been made between the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Board of Education by which the children of the public schools may study the pictures and statuary there. According to Acting Director Edward Robinson yesterday, parties of public school teachers will pay regular monthly visits to the Museum this Winter. At the Museum they will be met by Mr. Robinson, Curator of Decorative Arts Valentiner, and other Curators. The teachers will then be taken from one gallery to another. The Curators will explain in detail the beauties and technical values of the paintings, sculptures, and relics which the Museum contains.

The teachers will then bring their pupils at regular intervals to the Museum and will take them from room to room, explaining what they themselves have been taught. The Curators will keep the teachers posted as to each new work of art or relic which the Museum acquires.

"I regard this as one of the most important educational activities which the Museum has ever undertaken," Mr. Robinson said yesterday. "It will give, if methodically carried out, an intelligent understanding of practically every art object in the city to each public school child in this city."

Many Art Objects Purchased.

When Curator Valentiner visited Europe this Summer he purchased for the museum many rare and beautiful things. While he was passing the shop of a dealer in antiques in Berlin one day his attention was attracted to a small hinged diptych, which had evidently been worn around the neck as an amulet. It was only one inch high and two inches wide. But it could be folded up exactly like a screen. The back of this minute screen-like amulet was worked in gold and blue enamel. On the inside of each of the three folds the scenes of the Passion of Christ are represented by raised figures.

Curator Valentiner from the workmanship was able to identify the amulet as belonging to sixteenth-century Spain. But what he couldn't understand was the peculiar iridescence of the background on which the raised figures were placed. Touching the background he found it to be composed of infinitessimally small feathers.

"What kind of a bird has feathers as small as these," the Curator wanted to know. The dealer couldn't tell him, so the Curator consulted friends in the Museum of Berlin. They decided the background had been made from humming birds' feathers imported to Spain from this country less than a hundred years after Columbus discovered it.

The museum intends to increase the size of its Mediaeval small decorative crafts' exhibit. Most of the art objects which have been acquired in the last month are of this class

One of the new art objects is a German bronze crucifix made about 1100 A. D. It is interesting because it shows that the conception of Christ as a triumphant celestial monarch was beginning to give place to the thought of His human sufferings in mediaeval art.

A twelfth century bronze candlestick is another recent acquisition. A winged sphinx, with the head of a woman, is supposed to hold the candle in its back. The art object shows the influence of supernatural beliefs which were constantly creeping into European art of that period.

A thirteenth century pyx, or reliquary box, has also been acquired. It is of gilt bronze enamel, and was made at Limoges. It has a bird's head lock, and a monogram of Christ. The coloring of the enamel, the prevailing tone of which is white, is very unusual, and Limoges reliquaries of this period are very rare.

Two Rare Diptyches.

Among the most valuable of the recent acquisitions are two French ivory diptyches. They were made late in the fourteenth century. They represent the crucifixion and other scenes of the Passion. Mediaeval travelers wore these diptyches around their necks like amulets, and said their prayers while kneeling before them.

Under a microscope in a glass case in the museum's Recent Acquisition Room yesterday was a German thimble, dated 1577. It is coated with translucent enamel on silver. The top is ornamented with two crests on a red background. One of these crests has the monogram of Christ and the other has V.M.N., representing the German words for "Forget-Me-Not." The coloring work is so beautiful and the inlay so perfect that the thimble is supposed by the museum authorities to have been given by a very wealthy mother to her daughter at the time of the latter's marriage.

The museum, last month, also acquired a carved armchair, which was made in the Tyrol at the end of the sixteenth century. It is of polished brown wood, and the back and sides are elaborately carved with coiled serpents having dragon heads, in the ancient Celtic or Scandinavian style.

MRS. EDDY WON'T TESTIFY.

Subpoena Withdrawn When Auto Tire, Supposedly Hers, Is Claimed by Another

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—An evening paper publishes this: "Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy will not appear in the municipal court next Tuesday. A few days ago a subpoena was issued to the police of Division 16 for her appearance in court to testify or identify a tire which was said to have been stolen from her automobile when in front of the Christian Science Church in the Back Bay. Fred E. King was arrested, charged with having received stolen property, consisting of five tires, the others the property of Wilson Ourish of Grove Hall.

"This afternoon it was stated by the police that the subpoena had been withdrawn because some person has come forward and claimed the tire as his and not Mrs. Eddy's."

Christian Scientists would add nothing to-night to this information. Alfred Tarlow says that to the best of his knowledge the auto in question belongs to Mrs. Eddy and is used by the household.

An Unseemly Squabble.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Theodore Roosevelt is the only living ex-President of the United States. James S. Sherman is Vice President. Both are dignified positions. The spectacle is presented to the American people of these two distinguished citizens engaged in an unseemly squabble for the Chairmanship of a convention. To a true American this condition is humiliating. No wonder there are rumblings of a political revolution. It is coming fast and sure. REPUBLICAN.

New York, Sept. 15, 1910.

Mothers Against Republicans.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The mothers of Maine defeated the Republicans, and will overthrow them from the Atlantic to the Pacific. When the stomach and purse of the family suffer look out for a great change, rebellion or revolution.

SORG'S TEAM BREAKS MILE TRACK RECORD

Four-in-Hand Race Attracts Society to the White Plains Horse Show.

COVERS MILE IN FAST TIME

Grant Drives Four to Victory in 3 Minutes 14½ Seconds—Losing Team Far Behind.

A new world's record for trotting four-in-hand teams was established yesterday at the White Plains Horse Show, when Paul A. Sorg's four covered a mile on the half-mile track, driven by William Grant, in 3:14½. The best previous time was 3:21, made by Mr. Sorg's team last year at Ogdensburg, while J. Campbell Thompson drove his four over the mile track at Syracuse in 3:49. The time made by Mr. Sorg's team was remarkable in that the track is only half a mile in circumference and was not in the best of condition. Expert trotting men declared the track to be 16 seconds slower than the average Grand Circuit courses.

The Westchester country Summer colony was out in force to witness the race, which was the feature of an interesting programme. The parking spaces surrounding the judging ring were well filled with automobiles and vehicles of every description, while the lawn in front of the grand stand presented a lively appearance. Among those present were:

Mr. and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Paul P. Cravath, De Witt C. Flanagan, Mrs. J. B. McKay, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Walsh, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Weatherbee, Hicksa Weatherbee, J. Campbell Thompson, Paul A. Sorg, William McHose, Miss H. D. Atterbury, Miss Ellen Rasmussen, Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Preece, Richard P. McGrann, Mrs. J. Carleton Semple, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McGibbon, R. Lawrence Smith, Miss Virginia Post Brown, H. R. Coles, Jr., Kingsley Swan, Miss Jeanne Reynal, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Davis, Mrs. H. G. Graham, Mrs. S. N. Hexter, Mrs. E. T. Kirkland, Clifford V. Brokaw, Jr., Mrs. J. J. Well, Mrs. Cornelia McLoughlin, Gen. Howard Carroll, G. Jason Waters, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Baudouine, Col. Robert W. Leonard, Andrew Miller, David Bonner, Francis M. Ware, Edward H. Carle, Howard H. Potter, Mrs. E. H. Bowen, and Miss Francis Foster.

The race for the four-in-hand cup, although producing a record-breaking performance, was a one-sided affair. J. Campbell Thompson withdrew his entry and drove for Emil Seelig, while William Grant handled the reins over the Sorg four. Mr. Thompson had the pole, but before a furlong had been covered the Sorg quartet was well in the lead. Traveling together without a skip or break, and admirably driven by Grant, the Sorg horses quickly opened up a big gap. Mr. Thompson met with early trouble, his near wheeler refusing to break into a trot, and the red coach dropped far in the rear.

Grant kept his team on a fast trot and drove them with excellent judgment. Urging the four to their greatest effort Grant brought them under the wire in 3:14½, fully one-eighth of a mile ahead of the Seelig entry. The teams were afterward driven on to the horse show ring track and judged on their condition.

In the saddle horse classes Godfrey Preece rode Myron H. Oppenheim's Fairy Queen to victory, and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McGibbon were placed first and second with Rosalind and Rupert. De Witt C. Flanagan, Paul A. Sorg, and J. Campbell Thompson led the exhibitors in the harness classes. The summary:

Harness Horses, over 15.1 hands.—Won by J. Campbell Thompson's b. g. His Majesty; E. H. Weatherbee's blk m. Greyson, second; J. Campbell Thompson's br. s. Himself, third.

WATSON HORSES WINNERS.

Take Thirty-three Blues at Syracuse—A. G. Vanderbilt Gets Twenty.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 16.—In bringing to a close the eleventh annual Horse Show in connection with the New York State fair, it was necessary for the judges to complete their work by moonlight, and both horses and owners shivered from the cold as they stood in the ring awaiting the final awards. There was a big programme, besides two or three classes remaining over from the previous day, and as both exhibitors and judges were anxious to get through on account of the automobile races to-morrow, the work was continued, even though nearly everybody had left the grounds. The electric lights were on in the stables and the rays of the moon were bright when one of the most important classes of the week, the champion heavy harness horses as pairs, were brought out by Alfred G. Vanderbilt and George Watson.

In this class there were eight as beautiful and valuable horses as ever went around the ring at the Syracuse show. Mr. Watson got the blue with Florham Count and Florham Chief, and Mr. Vanderbilt was second with Hamlet and Hertes.

The Syracuse show was eventful for George Watson of Florham Stud Farm. He captured thirty-three blue ribbons, the largest number taken away from any show this season by one exhibitor. The Oakland Farm's horses captured twenty blues. Both Mr. Watson and Mr. Vanderbilt showed some of the best horses ever seen in Syracuse. Four championship prizes were included in Mr. Watson's victory for the week.

THE BERKSHIRE HUNT BALL.

About 200 Dancers Throng Summer Home of Spencer P. Shotter.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Sept. 16.—The men and women of the Berkshire Hunt held their seventh annual ball to-night at Shadowbrook. It was a large ball, about 200 attending. The dancing began at 10 o'clock. The guests were only the members of the house parties now being entertained in the villas for the hunt races to-morrow at the Lee Park.

Shadowbrook is the country residence of Spencer P. Shotter of Savannah. It was formerly the home of Mr. and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes. It has a large ballroom, where to-night, in a setting of Autumn foliage, the members of the hunt and their guests were entertained.

Miss Isabel Shotter arranged the decorations, and they were branches of red, gold, and purple foliage lighted by electric globes. Palms and plants formed corners for those who sat out dances. Many trophies of the chase were used in the decorative effect of the side walls.

Many members of various hunts wore their pink coats. Mr. and Mrs. Giraud Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Morris, Miss Shotter, Miss Kate Carey, and Miss Cornelia R. Barnes received. These ladies were the patronesses of the ball. The Committee of Arrangements were Giraud Foster, Newbold Morris, and Frederick Schenck.

To Give a New Bisson Play Here.

"Les Plumes du Paon," a comedy by Alexander Bisson, author of "Madame X," is to be presented in America this season under the direction of the American Dramatic Guild and Frank Lea Short. The play will be given in six different cities, under the auspices of a social or charitable organization in each city, and will then be presented in New York. The English version will be called "Some Are Born Great."

"Decorating Clementine" at New Haven

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 16.—G. P. Huntley and Hattie Williams this evening appeared at the Grand Opera House here under the management of Charles Frohman in a three-act French comedy, "Decorating Clementine," by Armond de Caillaret and Robert de Flert. Mr. Frohman was present. The comedy deals with the efforts of a young authoress to secure the Legion of Honor from the Ministry by a flirtation entailing amusing complications. Doris Keane, Alice Putnam, Gail Kane, Grace Moore, Richie Long, Louis Massen, and Ernest Lawford are in the cast. The play will begin its metropolitan run on Monday night at the Lyceum Theatre.

MARTIN TO REMODEL THE CAFE DE L'OPERA

Resigns from Cafe He Ran with His Brother to Manage Place Ruined by Evening Dress Rule.

OLD FITTINGS TO BE KEPT

Kitchens Will Be in the Basement and a Costly Bar Will Be Installed—Taxicab Service a Feature.

Louis Martin, from whom, jointly with his brother, the Café Martin takes its name, became yesterday President and General Manager of the company owning the premises and assets of the ill-fated Café de l'Opera, which succumbed to popular disapproval after announcing an "evening dress only" rule and serving dishes cold because of their long journey from kitchen to dining room.

Mr. Martin's first announcement as General Manager of the remodeled café was that the kitchen will be in the basement where it always should have been, and that as a substitute for the dress-suit rule it has been arranged that patrons shall have the café's exclusive taxicab service at their command if they so desire.

Special taxicabs, it was announced, are being constructed. Mr. Martin was enthusiastic about his new venture. He has severed business relations with his brother, J. B. Martin, to devote himself exclusively to the café.

"My business," said Mr. Martin yesterday, "is to serve the public and not to dictate its clothes. That can safely be left to the people of New York to solve independently of any interference. The new policy will be as far removed from the old as possible. The backers will be different and their ideas will be different."

The work of making over the once famous lobster palace to get the food to the tables while hot is going forward under the direction of Architect Henry Pelton, who designed the café originally. The lavish interior furnishings will be left intact so far as possible, but on the ground floor a bar will be established. It will be 75 feet long on the roadway side, with two entrances. The furnishings will be entirely of Circassian walnut, for which logs are now being collected and matched. Pictures to go behind the bar will cost $50,000, an official of the company said. Besides the basement kitchens there will be supplementary kitchens on each floor and supplementary service bars.

"Rich's Corporation," of which Mr. Martin became President and General Manager yesterday, has for its other officers W. J. Rich, Vice President and Treasurer, and F. J. Meyers, Secretary. The café will reopen on election evening.

HIT HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW.

Magistrate Advises Prisoner to Move and Sets Him Free.

"It's all her fault, Judge. I married her daughter three months ago, and she comes to my apartment every night, calls me names, and tries to turn my wife against me. I did hit her with a broomstick to-night, but I was so mad I did not know what I was doing."

This is what Peter Mallach, 20 years old, of 634 East Fourteenth Street, said in the Yorkville Court yesterday morning. He had been arrested earlier in the evening by Patrolman Smith on the complaint of Mrs. Annie Hearn of 628 East Fourteenth Street.

The eighteen-year-old wife, Mary, wavered between filial devotion and love of her husband. She tried to say a good word for both husband and mother.

"I furnished a nice home for Mary," said Mallach. "And my mother-in-law won't let us alone."

Mrs. Hearn declared she was only looking out for her daughter's welfare.

"I'm the mother of fourteen, Judge," she said, "and I know what's best for my own child."

"I don't know about that," said Magistrate Corrigan. "Look here, Mallach, you had better move as far away from your wife's folks as you can. Get a flat in the Bronx and be boss of your own home."

"I wanted to live away from my mother-in-law," said Mallach, "but my wife insisted on living near her."

The Magistrate then talked to Mrs. Mallach for several minutes. She finally agreed to move at once, and her husband was discharged despite the protests of his mother-in-law.

Husband and wife left court arm in arm, and Mrs. Hearn trailed them.

TO AID MUSIC STUDENTS.

An International Organization Started to Establish a Fund.

At the recent Mozart and Wagner festivals held at Salzburg and Munich a group of American music lovers founded an International Fund for Opera Students, and yesterday announcement was made of the committee chosen to enroll contributing members. It is composed of Richard Arnold, 208 East Sixty-first Street, New York, Treasurer for America; Dr. Brettholz, Triest, Austria, Treasurer for Europe, and Adolf Muhlmann of Berlin-Charlottenburg, Germany.

It is the purpose of the organization to establish a subscription fund for the training of the voices of music students who lack the necessary means. Herr Muhlmann will have charge of the training, and has already begun teaching at his studio in Berlin-Charlottenburg.

It is said that a number of well-known opera and concert singers are interested in the movement.

HIT GIRL, SPED AWAY.

Two Men Get Wrong Number for Auto Which Ran Down Child.

Two men in a large auto did not stop last night when their motor knocked down ten-year-old Mary Staffa of 1,671 Third Avenue in front of her home. The girl's injuries were not serious.

John Hannah of 124 East Eighty-ninth Street and Thomas Morgan of 134 East Ninety-fourth Street saw the accident and tried to follow the escaping auto. They gave Policeman Garrahy of the East Eighty-eighth Street Station a number which they said they saw on the auto, but it could not be found at Headquarters.

"DIE SCHOENSTE FRAU" LIKED

Minkowski's New Operetta Produced in Berlin Clean and Melodious.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—"Die schönste Frau," a new operetta by the Russo-American composer Giacomo Minkowski of New York—the same who wrote "The Smugglers" for the Bostonians—was produced at the Theater des Westens to-night. The piece was cordially received, as it deserved to be for the sake of its refreshingly clean story and its melodious numbers. The critics, however, find the score a bit too ambitiously operatic to suit the taste of a public educated to the worship of Viennese waltz themes.

"Die schönste Frau" is a Continental spy who is known in England as the most beautiful woman in the country. The action takes place in London and on the Scottish moors, and is placed in the Beau Brummel period.

Rudolf Lothar, the librettist of d'Albert's "Tiefland," is responsible for the book, which is nebulous. Minkowski's orchestration was found particularly pleasing by the fashionable audience, which gave him an ovation at the final curtain.

SHUBERTS' THEATRE PLANS.

New Plays to be Seen Here as Soon as the Old Ones Go On the Road.

The Shuberts made a group of announcements yesterday about their theatres and attractions. The first was that Marie Cahill, in "Judy Forgot," a new musical play, will follow "The Summer Widowers" at the Broadway Theatre, opening on Oct. 3. "The Summer Widowers," with Lew Fields and Irene Franklin, will play Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, and other cities before Mr. Fields returns to New York to prepare for the opening of his new Winter Garden.

Fritzi Scheff, in "The Mikado," will appear at the Lyric Theatre for one week, beginning Oct. 3, following the engagement there of "Madame X.," and preceding the opening of "Madame Troubadour." Miss Scheff's company this year will include Digby Bell, Frank Rushworth, Herbert Watrous, George Arling, Arthur Cunningham, Kate Condon, and Grace Kennicut.

Rehearsals of Butler Davenport's new play, "Keeping Up Appearences," will begin at once with a cast including A. Hylton Allen, J. H. Benrimo, Zelda Sears, Stella Hammerstein, and Julia Wilke. Walter Hale is to be leading man with Bertha Kalich in Samuel Shipman's new drama, "A Woman of To-day," and Sam Bernard has invited the Mayor of Milwaukee to be present at the opening performance of his new musical comedy, "He Came from Milwaukee."

MORE SYNDICATE THEATRES.

New One in Seattle to Seat 2,000—To Build Others in Texas.

Announcement was made yesterday that Frohman, Klaw & Erlanger had closed a ground lease of a plot in Seattle, Wash., on which to erect a theatre having a seating capacity of 2,000. The plot is at Fourth and University Streets, in close proximity to Washington University.

This is the first move of Marc Klaw, who went West a week ago, to carry out the plan of Messrs. Frohman, Klaw & Erlanger toward acquiring theatres in the cities of the Northwest. After his return Mr. Klaw will make a trip through Texas for the same purpose. He will visit Dallas, Fort Worth, San Antonio, Houston, and Galveston, where, it is said, large property interests intend to erect theatres for the syndicate. Speaking of these plans, Mr. Erlanger said yesterday:

"Our purpose in obtaining these theatres is to enable us in the future to book tours without any embarrassment for the producing manager, as we have in the past fifteen years, and also to have theatres in which the contract with the producing manager will be fulfilled. We intend to continue the policy toward the producing manager which we have followed since the formation of the theatrical syndicate."

Lillian Russell in New Comedy.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 16.—Lillian Russell appeared here to-night in a new comedy called "In Search of a Sinner," under the management of Joseph Brooks. The piece is in three acts, and relates to a widow who became so tired of life with a husband designated a saint by his friends that she vows never to marry again until she finds an eligible sinner. Miss Russell's company includes Harry C. Browne, Lynn Pratt, Irving Cummings, Joseph Touhy, John G. Brammall, Olive Harper, Hattie Russell, Viola Leach, and Jessie Ralph.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

"The Little Damozel," by Monckton Hoffe, will be presented under the management of Henry W. Savage at the Comedy Theatre on Saturday, Sept. 24.

Announcement was made yesterday by Alfred E. Aarons and Louis F. Werba that their musical play, "The Deacon and the Lady," in which Harry Kelly is being starred, will come to the New York Theatre on Oct. 3 for a limited engagement.

David Belasco and his company which is to present "The Concert" will start for Pittsburg this morning for final rehearsals before the opening in that city next Monday night. After a week in Pittsburg and another in Baltimore "The Concert" will come to the Belasco Theatre for a run on Oct. 4.

The company supporting Adeline Genee in "The Bachelor Belles" will include Frank Lawlor, Amelia Stone, Lawrence Wheat, Grace Field, John Parks, Josie Sadler, Jack Raffael, Alice Hegeman, F. Stanton Heck, Blanche West, Florence Walton, and Mae Murray. A Russian dancer, M. Scherer, will assist Mlle. Genee in her ballets.

Adolph Phillips's first English musical comedy production, "Therese, Be Mine," was presented for the first time at the Court Theatre, Wheeling, West Va., last night.

Rehearsals of "The Scandal," Henri Bataille's drama, in which Kyrle Bellew is to star, began yesterday. Gladys Hanson will be Mr. Bellew's leading woman.

WOMAN AVIATOR HURT AT HEMPSTEAD

Mrs. Raische Attempts Flight in a High Wind and Wrecks Machine.

EIGHT HURT AT MILWAUKEE

Aeroplane Dashes Into a Crowd at the State Fair—New Speed Record in France.

Special to The New York Times.

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., Sept. 16.—Mrs. F. Raische of Mineola, L. I., was this morning the first woman to try a machine at this place, and she was the only person with nerve enough to attempt a flight in the twenty-five-mile gale that was blowing. Her daring resulted in a smashed machine and her narrow escape from injury. None of the men would attempt to fly with the wind blowing as it was.

Mrs. Raische entered the 'plane, the propeller was set whirling, and the biplane started across the grass. She made a few jumps, when the skids hit a rut, which broke the front control.

The machine crumbled and Mrs. Raische shot out on the ground, followed by the seat, which struck her in the back. She lay stunned for a few minutes, while the biplane stood helpless, its engine going at a terrific rate. As soon as she realized what had happened Mrs. Raische ran to the machine and stopped the motor. Then the biplane was carried into the shed.

PARR AS AIRSHIP INVESTOR.

Said to be Behind Concern Building Big Airship for Times-Post Race.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 16.—J. G. Goldenson, manager of the Cooley Aerial Navigation Company of New York City, to-day is the authority for stating that Richard Parr, the customs official who was awarded $100,000 by the United States Government for his services in exposing the sugar frauds, is the principal backer of the company, which is constructing the largest aeroplane in the world here. The extent of Mr. Parr's interest in the enterprise is not ascertained, but is said to be in excess of $50,000.

The airship, which will be christened "The Flower City," is being rapidly completed for the Chicago-New York race on Oct. 8, and if successful will be sent on a tour of the principal cities of the United States.

Mr. Parr and a number of other New York Customs officials who comprise the company are expected in Rochester next week to overlook the final touches to the machine. A force of fifteen men have been working on it since early Spring. Mr. Parr will, as the largest stockholder, be invited to christen the ship.

Glenn H. Curtiss to-day made arrangements for a stopping place here during the Chicago-New York race for himself and two other aviators—Eugene Ely and J. A. D. McCurdy.

The Cooley ship will be launched about Oct. 1, and will make its first flight to Chicago, carrying two passengers with its inventor, John A. Cooley. It is the only machine of its kind in the world and has 1,400 feet of soaring surface.

GRAHAME-WHITE GETS CHECK.

Receives Boston Globe's $10,000 Prize at Banquet Amid Ovation.

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—The aerial exploits of Claude Grahame-White, the British aviator, were applauded to-night at a banquet at the Algonquin Club tendered to the British and American participants in the recent Harvard-Boston aviation meet.

The feature of the evening was the presentation to Mr. Grahame-White by Gen. Charles H. Taylor, proprietor of The Boston Globe, of a check for $10,000, representing the prize offered by The Globe for the Boston Light trip of 33 miles. Gov. Eben S. Draper and Mayor John F. Fitzgerald were among those present as well as A. V. Roe, the English aviator, who wore the bandages necessitated by the wounds he received in his fall yesterday, when his triplane was wrecked.

AIRSHIP PLUNGES INTO CROWD.

Eight Hurt When Wright Aeroplane Falls on Grand Stand.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 16.—Five women and three men were injured to-day when a Wright aeroplane, driven by Arthur Hoxey, swerved from its course above the track and plunged into the crowd on a cement platform before the grand stand at the State Fair.

The aviator was uninjured and the machine but slightly damaged. A panic followed the accident. None of the injured will die.

NEW AEROPLANE RECORD.

Aubrun Flies 186.3 Miles in 3 Hours 33 Minutes 7 Seconds.

BORDEAUX, Sept. 16.—M. Aubrun, the French aviator, flying in a Blériot monoplane, to-day broke all speed records for 300 kilometers, (186.3 miles.) He accomplished that distance in 3 hours 33 minutes and 7 seconds.

At the end of the second hour he had flown 167 kilometers, (103.7 miles,) and at the end of the third hour 252 kilometers, (156.49 miles.) His average time was about 55½ miles an hour.

MOISSANT HERE SOON.

He and Weyman Coming from Paris to Take Part in Belmont Meet.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—Moissant and Weyman, the American aviators, will soon sail for the United States with their aeroplanes.

They are to participate, as members of the American team, in the events of the international aviation meet to be held at Belmont Park, L. I., next month.

Night Flight Without Lights.

GRAND VILLIERS, France, Sept. 16.—The dirigible balloon Clement-Bayard made a successful night flight without lights over the positions of the bivouacked armies which are participating in the French manoeuvres.

AMERICA STRONG IN CHINA.

Japanese Paper Says Tang Shao Yi Represents Our Influence There.

VICTORIA, B. C., Sept. 16.—The Kokumin Shimbun of Tokio, in the course of a long article on the change of policy at Peknig in recalling Tang Shao Yi, Minister of Communication, and making overtures to Yuan Shih Kai to return, says the appointment foretells the great future influence of America in China.

The paper, copies of which reached here to-day, says:

"It is out of the question to expect that the policy of Tang Shao Yi, who obtained his position as a representative of the Yuan party, will be favorable to the Japanese. Moreover, he is notorious as favoring Americans, and his appointment foretells the great development of American influence in China in the future. He represented China in America, and made many promises in America regarding Manchuria and railway questions. It will be interesting to watch the progress of these promises."

The Kokumin looks upon Tang Shao Yi as "one of the principal factors in diplomatic circles in the Far East" and regards him as the enemy of Japan and the friend of America.

NELIDOFF IS DYING.

Russian Ambassador in Paris Since 1903—He Is 74 Years Old.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—M. Alexander Ivanovitch de Nelidoff, the Russian Ambassador to France, is dying.

The diplomat was stricken with apoplexy while passing through Munich on Aug. 8. He was born in St. Petersburg in 1836, and at the age of nineteen years was appointed to a place in the Foreign Office. He has served his country as Ambassador successively at Constantinople, Rome, and at Paris, which last post he has held since 1903. He was President of the second Hague Peace Conference in 1907.

MINISTER KING WORSE.

American Envoy to Siam in Critical Condition After Operation.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 16.—Hamilton King, American Minister to Siam, is in a critical condition at the Johns Hopkins Hospital. He underwent an operation several weeks ago and was believed to be improving, but to-day there was a change for the worse.

Mrs. Mary Dean Archer.

Mrs. Mary Dean Archer, widow of O. H. P. Archer, died yesterday at her country home in Allendale, N. J., after three days' illness of a sudden attack of pneumonia. She was 85 years old. Her husband, who died eleven years ago, was the President of the Erie Railroad, and built several small railroads in the West. Mrs. Archer lived at 14 West Fifty-second Street when in New York. About twenty years ago she gave the town of Allendale a church in memory of her mother, Nellie Dean. Mrs. Archer leaves two daughters, Mrs. M. D. Abbott and Miss Nellie M. Archer, and a son, Dr. Harry M. Archer of the Aetna Life Insurance Company.

John E. Alden.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 16.—John E. Alden, one of the descendants of John Alden of Plymouth fame, died last night at his home in Newton, aged 75. He had been failing in health for some time. He was a prominent Unitarian and a member of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and the New England Historical and Genealogical Society.

COLE.—The Directors of the National Lead Company with profound sorrow record this appreciation of the loss the company and the community have sustained in the death of Lucius A. Cole, their President.

Those who were intimately associated with Mr. Cole will cherish with pleasure, though it be tinged with sadness, the remembrance of those fine qualities of heart and mind which distinguished him in his daily life.

In his personal relations he was kind and gentle, affectionate to those who were closely allied to him, and ever considerate of those who, through no fault of their own, had fallen behind in the race of life. His ear was attentive to all just pleas, and, while his decision were just, they were so tempered by his natural kindness that harshness was absent from them.

In the counsels of the company he was noted for his keen judgment, indomitable courage, and his habit of accurate thought, combined with prudence and fairness. It was by the exercise of these qualities day by day, and year by year, that he brought this company to the high plane it now occupies in the industrial community. This great business will remain an enduring monument to his untiring zeal and well-directed efforts, built up and perpetuated, with malice toward none and generous consideration for all.

To his family we offer our deepest sympathy and for them our hearts are full of sadness in their bereavement.

In this modern day, crowded with strife, full of turmoil, criticism and accusation, the contemplation of a career without a shadow, of a reputation without a blemish, and a life pure and noble, is an inspiration to Mr. Cole's associates and to those who come after, and much more than this, remains a cherished heritage to his widow and his sons and daughters, which can never be taken away, but which, as time rolls on, will reflect with increased brilliancy to the source whence it emanated.

ORPHANS' COUNSEL SEEK MISSING WILL

Uncle Stole It and Kidnapped Dying Grandfather, They Allege.

ORDERED TO PRODUCE IT

Affidavits in the Fight for the Estate of Aaron Barnett Read Like Scenes from a Bowery Melodrama.

Affidavits and moving papers which read like the scenes from a Bowery melodrama were filed with the Surrogate yesterday. After reading them, Surrogate John P. Cohalan signed two orders in a search for a missing will which is alleged to deal with millions.

The case was a contest over the estate of Aaron Barnett, who died July 4, after sensational scenes at 122 West Seventy-second Street. At that time much was made of the disappearance of a mysterious black bag, alleged to contain important papers. Affidavits submitted to Surrogate Cohalan were that one of these papers was the last will of Barnett.

Two little orphans, Marjorie and Alan Barnett of 2,312 North Park Avenue, Philadelphia, figured in the affidavits as victims of an uncle, Gustave G. Barnett, a cotton goods merchant of 50 Leonard Street. Samuel D. Levy, who with ex-Surrogate Charles Beckett, represents the orphans, charged that the uncle is under $3,000 bond on charges of perjury and extortion, besides with having made off with the will.

The kidnapping of Barnett as he lay dying by his son was told in the affidavit of Marie Goss, landlady of the house at 122 West Seventy-second Street. She said Barnett had confided to her that he had made a new will in which he cut off his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Rita Barnett, widow of his son Samuel, and her two children, because she did not know how to handle money.

Barnett, she said, told her that his son Gustave was no good, and often had brought him into trouble. Barnett's daughted, Mrs. Maurice Rosenthal, she added, was in California, trying to get a divorce. One day last February Gustave Barnett went to the house to see his father. It was his first visit in the two years Barnett was at her house, Mrs. Goss said. Father and son had a fight, in which the father belabored the son with his cane and the son struck his father. Each called the other names, so she swore.

In May Barnett went to her one day and said he had changed his will, and had left $100,000 each to Mrs. Rita Barnett and her children, Marjorie and Alan, and $30,000 to Wade, his confidential clerk, $1,000 for each year of service. She did not read the will, she said, but told him he should have left more than $100,000 to his grandchildren.

Barnett kept his money in Hoboken, Mrs. Goss said, because he had been taxed $30,000 on his personal property in this State. He had told her that he was many times a millionaire. Counsel for the children places the estate at not less than $3,000,000. Others believe it worth much more.

The elder Barnett became ill in June last, and nurses were in attendance constantly. On July 3, Mrs. Goss said, Gustave Barnett called at the house with a man who called himself Turner. They seized Barnett's private papers and put them in a black bag. She sent for a policeman, but he refused to interfere. The son was heartless, she said. When she suggested that some one get milk and eggs for his father, she said, Gustave exclaimed:

"Never mind him, his time has come."

She remonstrated when they essayed to move the old man, and declared that it would kill him, but they paid no attention to her and took him away. He died, she said, within twenty-four hours of his removal.

The orders, signed by Surrogate Cohalan on the application of Louis Lande, special guardian for the children, call on Gustive Barnett to produce the missing will or show why he should not, and also to show why a temporary administrator should not be appointed for the estate.

The records of Jefferson Market and Special Sessions Courts, Counselor Levy made affidavit, show that Gustave Barnett was arrested and held on the charge of extortion and perjury. Aaron Barnett signed his son's bail bond.

DOCTOR KILLS HIS RIVAL.

Rainey Quit Proprietary Medicine Manufacturer to Open Similar Business.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Louen V. Atkins, a proprietary medicine manufacturer, was shot and killed in his office in the Marine Building to-day by Dr. James M. Rainey. Rainey withdrew from the company of which Atkins was President two months ago, and started another firm with much the same name.

According to Joseph Ingram, attorney for Rainey, Rainey's mail frequently was delivered to Atkins. The men quarreled about this, it is said.

Dr. Rainey was arrested.

THE BERLITZ METHOD

The BERLITZ METHOD is an imitation of the natural process by which a child learns its mother tongue, advantage being taken of the reasoning power of the adult. From the very first lesson, the student hears only the language he is learning.

It is well known that a traveler in a foreign country learns to speak the foreign language fluently with little trouble, and in a comparatively short time, whilst the student at home struggles with grammar and translation exercises for years without obtaining the same results. Instruction by the BERLITZ METHOD is to the home student what a sojourn abroad is to the traveler. He hears and speaks only the language he wishes to learn, just as if he were in a foreign country. He has, moreover, the advantage that the language has been systematically graded for him.

The instruction is so arranged that the student is able from the first lesson to make a practical use of the knowledge he is acquiring.

UNIVERSITIES IN AMERICA AN EVOLUTION FROM THE ORIGINAL COLLEGE SYSTEM.

The Term "University" Conveys an Entirely Different Meaning to the Englishman or German from What Is Understood Here.

By BRANDER MATTHEWS,
Professor of Dramatic Literature, Columbia University.

IN every language that is still active on the lips of men, words are continually shifting their meanings in response to recurring needs. Change is a condition of vitality; and as the English language is now the mother-tongue of many millions scattered far from the little island where it was first spoken, the changes are perhaps more abundant and more rapid in it than in any other modern language.

Although the cohesion born of English literature may be relied upon to keep our speech one and indivisible, still divergent circumstances are continually bringing about differentiations of usage in the accepted significance of certain words in Great Britain and the United States. The educational systems of the two nations are strangely dissimilar, and therefore certain words convey different meanings on the opposite shores of the western ocean.

"Public school," for example, is to an Englishman a wholly different thing from what it is to the American; and a kindred differentiation is to be seen in the use of the words "college" and "university." At Oxford and Cambridge a university is composed of a group of colleges, and a college is generally thought of as a constituent element of a university.

At New Haven and Princeton a college is an institution of learning where a student remains for four years as an undergraduate, devoting himself to the liberal arts, whereby he is supposed to acquire breadth of outlook, and a university is the larger organization, which includes the college, but which is characterized more particularly by the allied professional, technical, and graduate schools.

Unfortunately there are in the United States many so-called colleges which are only high schools, and many so-called universities which are only colleges. Of late years those in charge of our colleges have seen that the American college has an honorable work of its own, quite distinct from the task of the university and quite as important; and there is evidence of a slackening of the tendency to expand the college into the university needlessly. The recent American differentiation of the sphere of the college from that of the university is slowly establishing itself.

There was really no true university here until after Dr. Eliot became President of Harvard, and perhaps not until after Dr. Gilman became President of Johns Hopkins. Only by degrees did we awake to the perception that the distinguishing characteristic of a university was to be found in its thorough training of graduate students, and that the function of the university was to give depth, while the function of the college was to give breadth. In other words, the work of the college must underlie that of the university and sustain it. And this special meaning of the word "university" is peculiar to the United States.

Indeed, it is a curious fact that the idea evoked by the word in the mind of an American is quite different from that evoked in the mind of an Englishman, just as the English idea is in its turn quite different from that evoked in the mind of a German. According to the German understanding of the word, Oxford has probably no right to entitle itself a university; and perhaps no illustration would make clearer the divergent points of view which are taken in different countries as to what a university is.

There are now in the United States a dozen or more universities which actually deserve to rank as universities; each of which attains to the standard set up in the report of a committee of the National Association of State Universities, which defined the American university "as an institute which should include (1) a college resting on a four-year high school course and offering two years of general or liberal work and two years of university work; (2) professional courses in law, medicine, and engineering, based upon the completion of two years' college work; (3) a graduate school properly equipped for research work."

This definition recognizes the historic fact that most American universities have been developed out of colleges. Here and there a college, favored by opportunity, established or took over a law school or a medical school, a school of applied science or a school of architecture, developing also in time a logical scheme of graduate studies in the same subjects which were taught in more elementary fashion in the four-year programme of the college itself and in other subjects fitted only for maturer students.

This accretion of allied professional schools and this evolution of a graduate school was often more or less accidental. Rarely was it deliberately planned; sometimes, indeed, it seems merely to have happened by force of circumstances. The expansion was different in different institutions in no two of them was it precisely parallel.

Because of this fortuitous evolution, it would be unreasonable to expect any uniformity of type. Harvard and Johns Hopkins are not organized or administered as are the University of Virginia or the University of Michigan. There may be an equal insistence upon standards and an equal desire to attain to the loftiest and largest ideals of public service; but as yet there is little agreement in administration and still less in organization. They may be united in knowing what ought to be done, but every one of them is seeking to do this in its own fashion. They are each of them facing questions which are akin but not alike, although there is insistent discussion of the fundamental principles underlying these problems.

Almost the only treatise which has yet appeared is Dr. Eliot's "University Administration," and the wide utility of this is diminished by the fact that its author confined his attention solely to the form of university organization with which he was familiar at Harvard.

If there has been only one treatise on the subject, it has been discussed in many Presidential reports, and in not a few articles by professors. Prof. Cattell of Columbia has made several very radical suggestions; Prof. Jastrow of Wisconsin and Prof. Creighton of Cornell have expressed their views at length. Here are a few questions which are still unsettled: Is the university President generally too much of an autocrat? Is it necessary even to have a President at all?

Should the duties now discharged by the President be divided between two officials, one of whom should be elected by the Faculty? If there is to be a President, what should be his relation to the Trustees on the one hand, and to the Faculty on the other? What should be the limitations of his authority? Should the Faculty have absolute control of all educational matters? Should the powers of the Trustees or overseers be confined solely to financial administration?

Should the Trustees or overseers be elected by the alumni? Should the Faculty have the exclusive right to nominate to all vacancies, calling their future colleagues without any consultation with either President or Trustees? Should the salaries of all full professors be exactly the same? Should the professors have the exclusive right to appoint the junior officers of instruction? Should the library be controlled by the Faculty? If the idea of a university as "the home of independent scholars" is sound, ought its complete control to be confided to those scholars?

Ought every department to be governed by a head professor, or is it feasible to have a democratic organization in which all the professors engaged in teaching a subject share in its administration? These are only a few of the questions at issue; and it is not too much to say that there is no agreement as to the final answer to any one of these.

Sooner or later all these questions will have to be faced by every American university, and each one of these institutions can profit by the experience of all the others. What they all need, therefore, is ample information as to each other's organization. As the organization of Columbia University is little understood, there may be advantage in explaining here just what it is, not because it is necessarily the best in all respects, but because it may have elements of efficiency likely to be useful to other institutions.

Columbia University is the name given to the body of schools which have grown up around Columbia College. First of all, there is Columbia College itself—the King's College of a century and a half ago. Then there is Barnard College, which supplies the corresponding four-year undergraduate course for women. In addition to these there are the Law School, the Medical School, (called the College of Physicians and Surgeons;) the School of Fine Arts, (which has charge of the students of architecture and of music;) the School of Mines, Engineering, and Chemistry, the College of Pharmacy, the School of Political Science, the School of Pure Science, and the School of Philosophy, (which also has charge of the graduate work in the ancient, modern, and Oriental languages and literatures.) Finally, there is Teachers College.

The appointment of every officer is either for a limited term or "during the pleasure of the Trustees." They are a self-perpetuating body, composed mainly of alumni, and now regularly electing certain members designated by the various alumni organizations. They have special Committees on Finance, on Education, on Buildings and Grounds, on Honors; and the membership of these committees changes annually, so that every Trustee may have opportunity to acquire more intimate acquaintance with the workings of the institution.

The formal minutes of the Trustees' meetings are regularly published in the Columbia University Quarterly, so that all who are interested can learn exactly what has been resolved upon.

The President is the connecting link between the Trustees and the several schools. He presides at the Faculty meetings of every school, and also at the monthly meetings of the University Council He also attends the meetings of the Trustees, not ex-officio but as a full member regularly elected. He does not preside at the meetings of the Trustees, who choose a Chairman of their own. Thus he sits with the Trustees as an equal, ready to explain and to advise; but their organization is independent of him if they should cease to be satisfied with him.

Walter Bagehot asserted that bank Directors ought not to be bankers, but men of affairs, capable of choosing the fittest man for the actual work of banking. So the Trustees of Columbia are not educational experts, but men of affairs, choosing the fittest man for President, allowing a large liberty to the several Faculties, and keeping themselves fully informed as to efficiency of the whole. So long as any school is accomplishing all that may reasonably be expected the Trustees refrain from all interference, and it is only when a Faculty seems to be not quite awake to all its opportunities that the initiative of the Trustees is necessary.

Such, in brief outline, is the organization of Columbia University. It may seem like an unwieldy conglomerate, illogically related, and its machinery may appear cumbersome, but it works without undue friction. The several parts are tied together by the omnipresence of the President and by the existence of the University Council, in which every Faculty is represented. There is, however, yet another bond of union between certain of the several schools. The professors who teach the same subject constitute a single department, whatever the schools they may be attached to. Perhaps I cannot better exemplify the value of this departmental organization than by a description of the department with which I am myself connected—that of English and Comparative Literature.

In Columbia College, in Barnard College, in Teachers College, and in the School of Philosophy (which has charge of the post-graduate work) there are altogether eighteen professors of the two allied subjects of English and Comparative Literature. We have control of the instruction in the three colleges, in the graduate school, in the Summer Session, and in the extension courses. We hold regular meetings and keep minutes. We have chosen an executive (called the secretary of the department) who has entire charge of the correspondence.

We have special committees on undergraduate students, on the candidates for the Master of Arts degree, and on the candidates for the Doctorate of Philosophy. We discuss all questions of policy in town meeting, and it is pleasant to record that our final decisions have always been unanimous. We canvass the best available candidates for all vacancies in the teaching staff, (in either of these subjects,) and it is pleasant also to record that the candidates we have recommended to the President have always been appointed by the Trustees.

We transmit to the President every Spring (when the university budget is being made up) a full statement of our present situation and of our future needs, and yet once again it is pleasant to record that the Trustees have always tried to grant our requests for expansion so far as the finances of the university would permit. No department could be more harmonious in its membership, freer to do its necessary work in its own fashion, better supported by the President and by the Trustees than is the department of English and Comparative Literature at Columbia.

Yet another bond of unity is due to the combination of kindred departments into divisions. The division of modern languages and literatures includes also the department of Germanic languages and literatures, (with seven professors,) and the department of romance languages and literatures, (with eight professors.) This division holds a public conference two or three times a year, attended by the thirty-odd professors, by all the subordinate instructors and by many of the graduate students.

As I set down here these aspects of the organization of one American university I cannot help noting its likeness to the British Constitution, a mass of law and tradition, of convention and of custom, with certain clumsinesses and inconsistencies. And, like the British Constitution, the organization of Columbia University is satisfactorily efficient.

NEW YORK—Manhattan.

What Are You Doing For Your Boy?

The public schools are now open, and as usual cannot accommodate the vast numbers of pupils who apply for entrance. The private schools are about to open, and now is the time that the question of schools is uppermost.

The question of private versus public schools should not be suggestive of any antagonism; both types are doing effective work. It should not be considered a mark of snobbishness to send a boy to a private school. There is just as much democracy among private school boys as among public school boys.

BURROUGHS SCHOOL

Lays emphasis on the training of the small boy.

After the morning session the rest of the day is devoted to manual training, gymnasium, outdoor games and recreation. There is just enough work and plenty of play to help parents solve that most difficult problem—what to do with a small boy in a big city like New York.

The older boys spend the afternoons in the gymnasium and swimming pool and in the preparation of the next day's lessons under the masters. These afternoon study hours give every boy the benefit of private tutoring at no extra charge. There is no extra charge of any sort. Stationery and school supplies are free; books are lent.

No cramming methods are allowed. The school gives its boys a sound education in the old-fashioned way.

IT STANDS FOR THOROUGHNESS IN ALL THINGS AND FOR A DEMOCRACY THAT IS THE INHERITANCE OF EVERY TRUE AMERICAN BOY.

The building is now open for inspection from 9 to 5 daily and visitors are cordially welcomed. The school secretary will make appointments for any parents who may wish to talk with the Headmaster. Telephone Bryant 2536.

"My Son Having Failed Completely in his preliminary examinations for college, entered your school and in one year he covered two regular school years of work as is done at most schools, and not only passed his examinations easily for college, but also with credit to himself and his school."

This extract of a letter from the mother of a recent student is one of a hundred or more, valued by Mr. Groff, showing the high grade of success he has had for thirteen years, following the idea that the individual, and not the class, is the unit.

Timid, nervous and backward boys are encouraged and taught how to study. Bright boys advanced rapidly and thoroughly. No cramming. Secret is to make an hour count for an hour under expert teachers and an up-to-date system. The definite policy is to gain the real interest of the boys in their work, thereby making petty restrictions unnecessary.

Mr. Groff's close personal attention devoted to the two schools. Headmasters of both schools now in their offices.

TRINITY SCHOOL
Mamaroneck-on-Sound, New York
A SCHOOL FOR DISCRIMINATING PARENTS.

Without a doubt the finest location for a school in the country; fronting on Long Island Sound. 19 acres. Mild climate the year round. Unlimited opportunities for outdoor life. All field and water sports, fishing, swimming, motor boating, horsemanship, in fact, all branches of field and water athletics are sanely encouraged. Careful faculty supervision eliminates the dangers of accident or over-exertion. A life of fresh air and sunshine the only means by which successful educational advantages may be obtained. Personal attention and individual instruction. A boy is taught how to study. He secures the personal attention of his instructor. The work is thorough. Careful preparation for West Point, Annapolis, and all of the leading colleges. The Headmaster is an educator and understands the care of boys. For years the highest degree of efficiency has been attained. Persistency and directness of purpose are first and most important lessons impressed upon the mind. We stimulate interest and hold attention. We strive to popularize study and make it agreeable to the mind.

We promise to do a certain work in half the time usually taken and with twice the results. Pupils will gain not only in knowledge, but in discrimination. Trinity stands for something definite in the upbuilding of boys to lives of usefulness and manly endeavor. A visit to Trinity will at once dispel any doubt as to its superiority. It has won for itself many flattering testimonials.

A school with the above characteristics is worthy of the serious consideration of parents. We want you to know Trinity and what we have in mind for your son.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Quiet and Irregular—Call Money Rates, 1½@2 Per Cent.

INTER-MET. PREF. FEATURE

Preliminary Estimates of Week's Currency Movements Show Heavy Cash Loss by Banks.

Offerings of stocks in the early part of yesterday's market session were heavy enough to carry prices considerably under the levels fixed at the close of business on Thursday night, when declines of from 1 to 2 points marked the direction of the day's business, but before noon supporting orders made their appearance and upon short covering by the traders the market rallied rather sharply, closing with numerous fractional advances. There was not the least evidence of outside interest in the day's dealings, which diminished as the market strengthened. The only feature presented was the movement in the Interborough-Metropolitan securities, particularly in the preferred, which responded readily to a generous distribution of bullish advices among the commission houses. Rather determined efforts were made by bearish traders to bring about further declines, and for the purpose there were set abroad numerous reports, including one to the effect that the Administration had determined to bring suit at once against the Steel Corporation, and another that heavy financing was to be undertaken by one of the large industrials. No basis in fact was found for the rumored suit against the Steel Corporation, while the explanation for the second story mentioned probably lies in the more or less tentative plan for the financing of advances made by the American Smelting and Refining Company to one of its subsidiaries, the American Smelters Securities Company, involving something like $10,000,000.

In th financial district there was rather animated discussion of the news published in this newspaper yesterday morning to the effect that President Taft was not desirous of a second term, and this was very naturally contrasted with the President's letter regarding patronage for the so-called insurgents. Changes and currents in the political situation are closely observed by the financial community from day to day, of course, but the conviction is growing, nevertheless, that within a short time the securities markets themselves will devote more attention to other factors in the general financial situation. Interest attached to the publication of the figures of the bank clearings of the week revealing a volume of exchanges for the first half of September below anything noted since 1903, the decrease for the current week amounting to 21.2 per cent., as compared with the same period a year ago, and 25.5 per cent. in comparison with 1906. On the commodities market wheat recovered a portion of its sharp loss of Thursday and corn was again heavy on favorable weather in practically all sections of the corn belt.

Preliminary estimates of the currency movements of the week indicated a loss in cash by the banks of from $5,000,000 to $7,000,000, and this in connection with the financing of one or two large transactions of the period seems to indicate some reduction to-day in the surplus item. No further word was forthcoming on the cotton bill of lading situation, but the deadlock has apparently invited inquiries for funds from the South in anticipation of its continuation. The Bank of Holland lowered by a full 1 per cent. the 5 per cent. discount rate maintained by it since April last.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Friday.

That the market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange had again become oversold was disclosed in the final dealings, when there was a scramble to get stocks by the room traders who earlier in the day had devoted themselves to depressing prices. Sales totaled 71,110 shares, with forty-two different stocks on the list.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—Another day of dullness and irregularity confronted local brokers. At one time Lehigh Valley got down below 78, but at the close it was bid up nearly a point. United States Steel was still inclined to sag, but the reassuring interview given out by J. G. Gary exerted a favorable influence. A quiet demand was in evidence for Tonopah Belmont.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Day of Sluggish Trading, with Narrow Price Changes in the Curb Market.

MOVEMENT IS IRREGULAR

Fractional Gains and Losses at Close—Intercontinental Rubber, After Selling Off, Closes Higher.

Curb stocks moved narrowly yesterday, and the close of the day's sluggish trading showed both gains and losses of small fractions. British Columbia Copper sold 300 from 5½ to 5¾. Chino, after selling down from 16½ to 16¼, closed even with the opening level. Giroux sold 2,500 from 6¾ down to 6½, closing at 6⅝. Kerr Lake gained ⅛ on the day's trading, closing at 6½ after transactions of 2,500. Nipissing sold only 300, closing 1-16 up at 11⅛. Ray Consolidated sold 1,500 from 18¼ down to 18. Intercontinental Rubber sold down from 29¼ at the opening to 28¾, but more than recovered its loss, closing after sales of 1,600 at 29⅝, the day's high level.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

CONDITION OF TRADE.

Commenting on general trade conditions, Dun's Review says:

Some increase in business, incident to the opening of the Fall activities, is noted at many of the leading trade centres, but as a whole the domestic commerce of the country is still retarded by the impairment of confidence as the result of the political uncertainties. As a rule buyers are disposed to limit purchases to immediate requirements. The current needs of the American people are large, accustomed as they are to a liberal scale of living, and these immediate requirements in the aggregate make an immense total. The record of bank clearings, however, compared with last year now shows a decrease outside as well as in New York, the percentage of loss being 8.5 outside of New York and 38.3 in New York. On the other hand railroad earnings in the first week of September increased 5.0 per cent.

There is a large movement of grain and cotton to distributing markets at declining prices, but the banks have thus far been able to finance this movement without strain. The action of the London bankers in refusing the American plan of validating cotton bills of lading, however, creates a situation that might easily become critical if some compromise is not soon arranged. It is notable that the London rate of discount remains unchanged.

The dry goods markets, although moving with fair activity in certain districts, particularly in the West, continue as a whole to be characterized by conservatism on the part of both buyers and sellers. While there has been a considerable resumption of operations by New England cotton mills, the output is limited to the current needs of the trade. Woolens and worsteds are dull, and shoes are being traded in very slowly, though stocks are apparently low. Retail business has been stimulated by the return of people from their Summer vacations and the beginning of Fall buying.

Bradstreet's says:

Trade and industrial reports are rather more irregular. The first rush of Fall buying is over in many cities, but Fall festivals and State fairs still attract visitors to markets, the result being a fair to good volume of Fall jobbing and retail trade. Western reports are still the most optimistic, and liberal marketing of cereal crops has made for more plentiful money supplies and an apparently easier position of Western banks. The cotton crop movement is expanding with beneficial effects upon trade and collections at many markets. Conservatism still governs, however; demand is largely for staple lines, and actual requirements still dominate.

Enlarged supplies of farm products, due to past heavy movement, have had an easing effect upon prices, and the leading cereals, live stock, meats, cotton, and dairy products are all lower on the week. Weather conditions have largely favored late maturing crops, and absence of frost damage has helped corn and cotton. The corn plant, owing to recent rains, is still green and needs a longer than usual time to thoroughly mature. About half the crop is, however, now out of danger from frost. Reports from leading industries are of rather less than normal expansion in activity.

Curtailment is still in evidence in the leading textile industries. The Eastern shoe trade is reported working to only about two-thirds of shoe machinery capacity. Wool is more active, but some of the demand evident is on foreign account, said to be buying by Europeans, who find lower prices here for imported wools than can be had abroad.

CHICAGO STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Local stocks did not show much life to-day. Swift's stock opened [illegible] week, with a decline of ⅛ on the first transaction and ⅝ within a few minutes after the opening. Illinois Brick was slightly higher at the opening. Booth Fisheries opened steady at 76. Shipbuilding was traded in to some extent. Can common was unchanged and the preferred was off slightly. People's Gas showed a break of ¾ and Sears declined ½.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Good-Sized Bond Sales.

All the large banking houses have been making sales of bonds in considerable amounts within the last week or ten days, one of these houses having sold within the last three days between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 of bonds. This movement represents more life than the bond market has shown in a long time, and it is giving fresh heart to those whose interests lie in the distribution of bonds to investors. It is the buying of bonds by institutions which has supplied the principal impetus to the bond market, and this buying has done a good deal to clear up a large amount of bonds which had been awaiting sale. Some bankers' observations led them to express the opinion yesterday that the floating supply of bonds had been pretty well cleared up, to which was added the statement that really high-grade bonds were by no means plentiful in the market. It remains true, however, that the general run of bonds are quoted these days at prices at which they yield a return which looks quite high compared with the rate of income at which these bonds have sold in the past.

Union Pacific Convertibles.

For the last two days Union Pacific convertible bonds have been quiet and firm after a decline of about 3 points, in the course of which very large blocks of the bonds came upon the market, sales of the bonds exceeding $500,000 on several days. Authoritative denial is now forthcoming of one of the reports advanced in explanation of the heavy selling. It had been said that the bonds which were being sold were coming from the Harriman estate which, for some undisclosed reason, was said to be disposing of them. The report was not generally accepted in banking circles, where credence was given to the statement, previously made, that the Harriman estate was retaining its holdings of Union Pacific, but it was accepted in some quarters as the only plausible suggestion regarding the source of such large blocks of bonds. Now it is said on good authority that the Harriman estate has sold none of these bonds, which still leaves the source of the recent heavy selling a mystery.

Adverse Texas Legislation.

In a letter to the citizens of Alice, Texas, B. F. Yoakum, head of the 'Frisco and of the St. Louis, Brownsville, & Mexico, has announced the decision of the latter road to abandon indefinitely its plans for an extension of its line, a distance of about twenty-five miles, to Alice. This extension was to have cost between $500,000 and $600,000, and was planned as part of a comprehensive scheme for the development of the 'Frisco system's lines in Texas, which would have involved the construction of more than 700 miles of line and the expenditure of about $28,000,000. The reason for the 'Frisco's abandonment of new construction in Texas is that the law recently enacted by the Texas Legislature, bearing on the floating debt of the International & Great Northern, one of the Gould lines which went into receivership two years ago, was so adverse to the interests of bondholders of Texan railroads that the bonds could not be disposed of to advantage to finance any new construction. The law, it is asserted, in effect, puts a floating debt ahead of the lien even of a first mortgage. Under its terms a bondholder could not be sure that he really had a first lien on the property of a railroad in that State.

News Long Delayed.

Last December the Frisco system was formally separated from the Rock Island lines, and in that month the two systems went each its own way, but news of this railroad divorce appears to have traveled very slowly. Apparently there are some representatives of the Rock Island who have not yet heard that the Frisco and the Rock Island have parted company. In a circular issued under date of Aug. 30, 1910, by the London agent of the Rock Island lines, there is a picture of a train under which is the description "A Rock Island-California Limited." It is a very fine-looking train, hauled by a very fine-looking engine, but what strikes one curiously is that the lettering along the side of the locomotive, which stands out distinctly in the picture, reads "F-r-i-s-c-o." And those who may want to cable to the Rock Island's London office are still being told to address their message to "Rock-Frisco."

Smelters Securities Bonds.

Tentative suggestions for an issue of $10,000,000 of bonds by the American Smelters Securities Company are being considered, it was learned yesterday, but any definite formulation of a plan to put out bonds will await the return of Daniel Guggenheim, who is now abroad. Should it be decided to put out bonds, the purpose of the issue will be to fund the company's floating indebtedness, which is principally in the shape of sums due to the American Smelting and Refining Company for moneys advanced to the Securities Company. This floating debt approximated $10,000,000 at the date of the last report. The debt is secured by the company's stock of metals and by other security, and the funding of it, through a bond issue, would free these assets of the company and strengthen its treasury position. The plan has been under tentative consideration for some time, but no definite decision to put it into effect has been reached.

Surety Pays Extra Dividend.

In addition to the regular dividend of 2 per cent. for the quarter, the National Surety Company has declared an extra dividend of 4 per cent. Both dividends are payable Oct. 1 to stockholders of record Sept. 20. It is stated that the company contemplates an increase in its capitalization.

COMMITTEE VISIT WABASH TERMINAL

With Receivers They Also Take a Trip Over Wheeling Line and Plan Actions.

WORKING FOR BONDHOLDERS

New Suits to be Begun by Samuel Untermyer and Demand Made on Inactive Wallace Committee.

The Wabash-Pittsburg Terminal first mortgage Bondholders' Committee of which James C. Chaplin is Chairman, returned yesterday from a trip of inspection over the Wabash Terminal and the Wheeling & Lake Erie. The committee was accompanied on the trip by Arthur M. Wickwire of Guggenheimer, Untermyer & Marshall, counsel for the committee; the receiver of the Wheeling & Lake Erie, and one of the receivers of the Wabash-Pittsburg Terminal Railway. A report of the observations made will shortly be issued in a circular to the bondholders. With the information the committee has gathered it is prepared to go ahead actively with the work of obtaining for the bondholders all their rights under their mortgage.

Several suits which were planned by Samuel Untermyer, who, besides being counsel for the Chaplin committee, has been made associate counsel of the Wabash-Pittsburg Terminal receivers, have been filed, and further suits are expected to be brought in the near future. At the outset of the committee's work the stand was taken that the Wallace committee had not been active enough in protecting the interests of the bondholders, and Mr. Untermyer demanded the institution of a number of legal steps.

One of the suits soon to be filed will be against the members and managers of the Pittsburg-Toledo syndicate, and in this suit Wall Street is likely to take particular interest, for in it a demand is to be made upon George J. Gould and others, who were parties to that syndicate, for an accounting of the funds handled. With the bringing of this and still other suits already begun or now in contemplation, the Chaplin committee feels that it has laid the foundation for a most active campaign for the protection of the bondholders.

Representatives of the committee say that it is daily receiving large deposits of Wabash-Pittsburg Terminal bonds as well as certificates of the Central Trust Company for bonds previously deposited with the committee headed by Mr. Wallace. The Colonial Trust Company of Pittsburg, of which Chairman Chaplin of the Bondholders' Committee is Vice President, has made formal demand upon the Wallace committee for the return of the bonds deposited with it by the Colonial Trust Company. The Wallace committee has not yet taken any formal action on this demand, but will do so, it is said, at a meeting to be held shortly. Should the return of the bonds be refused, the prediction is made that steps will be taken to force the surrender of these bonds on the ground that inasmuch as the Wallace committee has held the bonds for over two years without announcing any plan of reorganization, it cannot longer retain possession of them against the desire of the depositors.

In the suits which are now being brought, the Wallace committee, through its counsel, is co-operating with the Chaplin committee.

SHOWS TRACTION EARNINGS.

Service Board Gives Figures for Metropolitan and Third Avenue.

The Public Service Commission gave out yesterday the tabulation of the operating statistics of traction companies of the city for the month of June, 1910, and for the twelve months ending in June. The annual reports of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company had already been made public.

The receivers of the Metropolitan Street Railroad showed operating receipts of $13,217,116 and operating expenses, exclusive of taxes, of $9,256,306, leaving net operating revenue of $3,960,807. Taxes, which are not stated in the tabulation, require about $1,300,000 of this sum, and interest and rentals on lines still in the system most, if not all the balance. On the Third Avenue system Receiver Whitridge took in $5,377,000 gross and had $2,371,000 net, after paying operating expenses, exclusive of taxes.

Weekly Failure Report.

Bradstreet's reports 210 failures in the United States during the week against 173 for the previous week, and 198, 266, 179, and 171 for the corresponding weeks of 1909 to 1906. The Middle States had 76, New England 19, Southern 34, Western 44, Northwestern 17, Far West 20, and Territories 0. Canada had 30, against 18 for the preceding week. About 84 per cent. of the total number of concerns had capital of $5,000 or less; 10 per cent. has from $5,000 to $20,000 capital.

FOREIGN TRADE OPPORTUNITIES.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—The Consular and Trade Report will note the following trade opportunities abroad. Further information regarding these may be obtained by addressing the Bureau of Manufactures, care of the Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington, D. C., giving the number of item referred to:

5,519. HARDWARE AND SPECIALTIES.—An American business man writes that one of his correspondents in France desires to be placed in communication with American manufacturers of hardware, housefurnishing specialties, &c. He especially mentions picture book machines. He is anxious to establish an agency in Paris for American specialties of this nature.

5,520. COTTON PRINT REMNANTS.—An American Consul in the Levant reports that a commission merchant in his district desires to purchase American cotton print remnants and states that a good business can be done in that line of goods.

5,521. AMERICAN PIANOS.—A report from an American Consul in Mexico states that shipments of pianos from Germany are steadily arriving in his district and that but twelve American instruments reached his port during the past six months. As this is a trade worth looking after, he thinks it reasonable to suppose that American makers ought to secure a fair share of it and if American pianos cannot be sold at the prices at which they may be obtained from German makers then manufacturers should study the situation and produce an instrument that can compete in price and quality.

5,522. CREOSOTE.—An American Consul in a Latin-American country reports that regular shipments of creosote have been received in his district for the past year and not a month passes without the arrival of a shipment. Most of this stock is consigned to a local mining company. If American producers of this article would look after the matter a satisfactory trade might be established.

5,523. CANE CRUSHING MACHINERY.—The Bureau of Manufactures is in receipt of a communication from a Porto Rican business man requesting to be put in touch with American manufacturers of machinery for the crushing of cane. He desires catalogues in Spanish so that he can select the style of machine which he desires to purchase.

5,524.—MOVING PICTURE FILMS AND AUTOMOBILES.—A report from an American Consular officer in Asia Minor states that a local firm desires to introduce American moving picture films in his district. Cinematograph shows are popular in that region, and there is no reason why Americans should not get their share of the business, if proper attention is given to the matter. The same firm would also like an automobile agency. The market for these articles at present is not large, but is likely to become important within a year or two.

5,525. MACHINERY AND EQUIPMENT FOR GROUND BONE FACTORY.—An American Consular officer in the Far East has forwarded a communication from a local business man, in which he states he is about to establish a ground bone factory, and desires to import the machinery and apparatus which is necessary for the business. He is anxious to secure American equipment if possible, and desires full particulars from manufacturers in the United States. Quotations should be given cost, insurance, and freight to certain city. The factory will have a capacity of about 7,000 tons annually.

THE COMMODITIES MARKETS.

The wheat market showed irregularity, developing a strong market late, and closed at a net advance for the day of ⅞ to 1⅞c. The cables were unexpectedly firm, due, it was claimed, to the decrease of 153,000,000 bushels in the semi-official estimate of the Russian crop and to an estimated decrease of nearly 100,000,000 bushels in the French crop. The exports of wheat from Australia, Argentina, and India for the week made a total of only 2,312,000 bushels, a decrease of 1,100,000 bushels from the previous week. The world's exports were estimated at about 3,000,000 bushels less than the previous week. There was a somewhat better tone to the cash markets, and the Winnipeg market, which was particularly weak on Thursday, showed a decided turn for the better. Late in the day quite active buying developed, and this caused a stampede of shorts, resulting in a rapid rise in prices the last hour. Bradstreet's exports for the week were 2,174,000 bushels, and were made up largely of durum and Manitoba wheat. Reports regarding the progress of new crop seeding were somewhat conflicting. Export interest in the market was limited, and no business was reported for shipment locally, although late Thursday there were sales of 40,000 bushels Manitoba wheat at Winnipeg. Cash wheat quoted: No. 2 red, $1.03¼, elevator; No. 2 red spot nominal, $1.03½, free on board, afloat, for export; No. 1 Northern Spring, $1.22¾, new; No. 2 hard Winter, $1.04¾, and No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $1.09½.

Corn was weak and active. The market opened at a decided decline, and although there was a little rally with the late rise in wheat final prices showed a net loss of ⅝@⅞c. The weather was good in the corn States, and the weather map was promising for continuation of favorable conditions. Claims are being made that the amount of corn safe from frost in the leading States ranges from 20 to 75 per cent. of the crop, but every day of good weather means a very important reduction in the total amount left endangered. Receipts have been decreasing this week at the interior, compared with last week, while there has been a material increase in the shipments from interior points. Cash corn was easier, with a moderate export business on the decline, sales being reported of 48,000 bushels at outports. Cash corn quoted: No. 2 nominal, 65¼c, elevator, to arrive, cost, insurance, and freight, domestic basis, and 63c, free on board, afloat, for export, rail basis.

Oats were fairly active and very steady. The market opened with some pressure, in sympathy with corn, but later showed a better tone. There has been a material falling off in the movement of oats at the West this week, and the shipments from the interior have been equal to the receipts. Cash oats quoted: Standards, 39¼c; No. 2 white, 39¾c; No. 3 white, 39c; No. 4 white, 38½c; natural white, 39@40½c, and white, clipped, 39½@43½c.

Provisions were irregular. Near by deliveries were weak, particularly of pork, notwithstanding smaller receipts and higher live hog prices. Late there was some recovery and a fairly steady close.

COTTON.

There was a good advance in cotton, with the best prices of the day made late. The market was influenced by some commission house buying, and there developed a good deal of covering, while the statistical news was not as bearish as looked for, and the Giles crop report was bullish. This report made a loss in condition in two weeks of 5.1 points, compared with an average loss for the full month of 6.6 points. The figure of 68, however, was one point better than the ten-year average condition for the end of September, showing that the crop is maintaining its relative promise. An average yield per acre would be about 12,000,000 bales, total crop. The statistics showed spinners' takings of American cotton for the week of 158,000 bales, against 171,000 last year, indicating an increase in the visible supply of only 67,000 bales, compared with an increase a year ago of 139,000 bales. The amount of cotton into sight for the week was 225,000 bales, against 133,000 the previous week, and 310,000 last year. The into-sight since Sept. 1 has decreased 172,000 bales, compared with last year. There was a further loss in local stocks, the total now being only 49,000 bales, a decrease of 35,000 in a week. The weather news was not unfavorable. Temperatures, as a whole, were seasonable. There were some scattered complaints, but apparently not of a character to attract special attention.

Southern spot markets were unchanged to ⅛c advance.

New York—Spot cotton quiet, 10 points advance; middling uplands, 13.90c; middling Gulf, 14.15c.

COFFEE.

Coffee met a sensational decline, last prices showing a loss of from 15 to 47 points with the late positions, in which the greater speculative interest has accumulated, showing the greater weakness. The rate of Brazilian Exchange on London was 1-16d lower at 18¼d, but the milreis price in the Brazilian markets was from 50 to 100 reis higher. The European markets showed no such losses as those here, as Havre closed ¼@½f higher after having opened ¾f higher, and Hamburg showed a net loss of only ¼@½ pfennig.

The selling here was extremely heavy, more than 158,000 bags. The market opened weak at a decline of 15@35 points

WHY AMERICAN TRADE IS LOW IN VENEZUELA

Consul from La Guayra Explains the Conditions to Manufacturers Here.

REQUIREMENTS NOT MET

English and Germans Find Out What's Wanted and Meet the Demand—They Get Most of the Business.

The unwillingness of the American manufacturers to make themselves agreeable and to adapt their products to the needs of the South American people is the chief reason, according to I. A. Manning, United States Consul to La Guayra, Venezuela, why this country contributes less than one-third of the foreign products used in Venezuela.

Mr. Manning came all the way from his post at La Guayra at the bidding of the United States Government to tell the manufacturing associations of this country why they are failing to get more South American trade. His first address on this mission was delivered yesterday afternoon before the National Association of Manufacturers at 30 Church Street and their guests. More than 200 representatives of large export manufacturing firms were present. Some of the houses whose Presidents or other executive officers attended were the Mergenthaler Linotype Company, J. A. Fay & Egan Company, Yale & Towne Manufacturing Company, A. J. Tower Company, the National Sewing Machine Company, Adriance, Platt & Co., the National Roofing Company, Manhattan Electrical Company, Watson-Stilman Company, and the Pocahontas Fuel Company.

Mr. Manning made a particularly strong plea for the personal element in getting and keeping foreign trade. "Friendly personality brings about valuable commercial relations," said he. "Our manufacturers can get the trade in Venezuela only by going after it. Catalogues and correspondence have little effect. The Germans control the greater part of the trade now because they went after it in person. The idea of long credits, which has scared our manufacturers here, is purely a bugaboo. From 60 to 120 days is the rule, especially on ordered goods. The merchants in La Guayra and other towns are honest and pay their debts as well as we do. They are anxious to do business with us, and it is entirely our own fault that we have only a small share of their trade. Our cotton manufacturers, for instance, make the best goods in the world, and have the raw material, yet we supply only $300,000 worth out of several millions sold in Venezuela annually.

"Our total export trade there is only $3,000,265 out of $10,120,000. Our main competitors in the sale of manufactured goods are the English and Germans, who manufacture raw material sent from the United States and sold in South American countries, American cotton in the form of manufactured cloth. England and Germany compete more than successfully with us in the sale of machinery, ironware, tools, and in the staples.

"Our manufacturers insist on sending down there the better class of cotton goods, notwithstanding that the purchasing power of the mass of people in Venezuela is very, very low. The great majority of the poorer class in Venezuela who work on the coffee and cocoa plantations and in the corn and tobacco fields at a day wage of 25 to 50 cents do not require high-grade goods. We may say this sort of trade is not very valuable, but in the aggregate it is decidedly so. The European manufacturers consider it worth considerable attention. In 1908 South America imported cotton goods to the amount of over $9,000,000. Our share of that profitable trade was, indeed, small. The fact of the matter is our goods do not suit that trade.

"The agent of the Department of Commerce and Labor visited a cotton goods importer for Venezuela. The merchant showed him cotton fabrics that could be sold for 7 to 10 cents a yard.

"'Yes,' said the agent, 'but these are splits, and our manufacturers do not make splits.'"

The manufacturers seemed greatly interested and asked Mr. Manning many questions bearing on the value of the trade with Venezuela and how best it could be increased.

Another Consul from a South American city will address the association next month, and he is to be followed each month of the Winter and Spring by other Americans stationed in foreign cities.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

Stock Market Quiet in London—Paris Prices Irregular.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Money was in good demand and the supply was ample to-day. Discount rates were steady.

The stock market was quiet, with narrow changes. Kaffirs and foreign rails hardened, but gilt-edged securities and rubber and copper shares dropped from lack of support.

American securities opened steady and a fraction higher and then advanced on light covering. Later on the improvement disappeared under Wall Street selling, and the market closed easy.

Bar silver steady, 24½d per ounce.

Money, 1 per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 2¾ per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for three months' bills is 2⅞ per cent.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—Prices were irregular on the Bourse to-day.

At closing 3 per cent. rentes were 96 francs 97½ centimes ex-interest.

Exchange on London, 25 francs 23 centimes for checks.

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—Unfavorable reports from Wall Street and the American iron markets caused a weak opening on the Boerse to-day. Prices strengthened later and the closing was steady.

PAID BRIBES SEMI-MONTHLY.

Arbuckle Sugar Refinery Officials Tell of Money to Government Weighers.

Further evidence of payments to assistant goverment weighers by employes of the sugar and coffee firm of Arbuckle Bros., in Brooklyn, came out yesterday at the trial of Charles D. Drew, Charles N. Wardell and George E. Bedell, on charges of conspiracy to defraud the United States through false weighing of importations of figs, sugar, fruits and cheese.

John C. Cary, Dock Superintendent for Arbuckle Bros., corroborated the testimony of James S. Doyle, his assistant, that his concern had made regular payments. Payments of from $50 to $100 were made on the first and fifteenth of each month to government weighers.

The payments were stopped, Cary said, in August or September last year, about the time the Government discovered irregularities in the plant which led to the payment of $600,000 evaded duties. Cary said he knew little about the payments as Doyle distributed them, but he knew they were being made.

Thomas V. Mason, a paymaster for Arbuckle Bros., testified he had honored requisitions by Cary and Doyle for money on the first and fifteenth of each month, but did not know what was done with it. He understood the payments were to obtain "every advantage possible" from government weighers. This "advantage" Mason believed to be the rapid discharge of the cargoes.

After Patrick J. Sullivan, a liquidator at the Custom House, identified corporation tables recording the importations during 1906 and 1907, Prosecutor Stimson rested his case, and Judge Martin allowed an adjournment until Monday.

REORGANIZERS GOING TO LAW

Third Avenue Bondholders to Contest Service Board's Decision.

That there will be a legal fight over the decision of the Public Service Commission on the Third Avenue Railroad reorganization plan became evident yesterday when the commission adopted its final order disapproving the plan submitted by the bondholders' committee.

The bondholders, following the return of their counsel, William D. Guthrie, from Europe, declined to negotiate with the commission and will at an early date, it is understood, start a legal battle over the right of the commission to consider the reorganization plan on the broad lines adopted. The bondholders contended that in a reorganization the only function of the commission was to determine whether the securities on which the reorganization was based were properly issued, whether the reorganization committee was properly vested with the control of the property, and whether the proposed new capitalization represented any increase over the old capitalization. If the litigation that is now about to be started results in the success of the Third Avenue bondholders, the power of the commission over the issuance of securities in reorganizations will be practically at an end.

Naturally the result will be important in determining the lines on which the reorganization committee of the Metropolitan Street Railway will shape its plan. As originally intended, the Metropolitan plan would have involved the issue of securities under conditions prescribed in the Third Avenue case.

The review of the decision of the commission in the Third Avenue case will probably be attempted through certiorari proceedings.

NORFOLK EARNINGS UP.

Increase in Net $2,419,765 for the Year.

The Norfolk & Western Railway, it appears from the annual report issued yesterday, earned $35,063,870 gross during the year ended June 30, an increase of $5,736,768 over the previous year. Net earnings were $14,017,110, an increase of $2,419,765. After providing for taxes and all fixed charges, there was left out of the year's earnings $9,043,165, compared with $6,665,432 the previous year. From this balance there was deducted $3,573,598 to maintain earning power and offset obsolescence, leaving a surplus of $5,469,566 applicable to dividends. After paying 4 per cent. on the preferred stock and 5 per cent. on the common stock, there was a final balance for the year of $1,117,056, which was added to the profit and loss account.

In keeping with the requirements of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, all the expenditures for road and equipment were charged to property investment accounts. The Directors decided, however, that of this sum $2,373,598 had been required to maintain earning power and offset obsolescence, and should not, therefore, be capitalized. For a similar reason, half of the $1,000,000 paid out during the year for the principal of car trusts was charged against income.

President L. E. Johnson says in his report to the stockholders that the Directors, while differing with the Inter-State Commerce Commission regarding the wisdom of some of the commission's accounting requirements, have followed the instructions of the commission in making up the balance sheet.

On the subject of increased expenses President Johnson says that until a readjustment in rates fairly commensurate with the increase in expenses can be obtained a reduction in operating ratio cannot reasonably be expected.

PHILIPPINE TRADE GROWS.

Exchange of Merchandise with United States Shows Heavy Increase.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Trade between the United States and the Philippine Islands increased 84 per cent. during the first year's operation of the new tariff law, according to Department of Commerce and Labor statistics. The new tariff law provides for the free interchange of merchandise between the islands and the United States.

On July 31 last the law had been in effect one year. The total imports from the islands in that year were $18,917,372 and total exports to the islands were $17,517,675. Chief among the imports were sugar, Manila hemp, cigars and cigarettes, copra, and fibres. Sugar increased from $1,000,000 in 1909 to $5,000,000 in 1910. The principal exports to the islands were iron and steel manufactures, cotton cloths, flour, boots, shoes, explosives, meat, and dairy products.

Railroad Men to See New Station.

Passenger traffic managers and general passenger agents of most of the principal railroads of this country are coming to this city next week as guests of the Pennsylvania Railroad. They will inspect the Pennsylvania's new terminal and tunnel system. Officials from all over the West have been invited, and there will be an unusually large delegation from Chicago. The inspection will take place on the morning of Sept. 23. There will be a luncheon at the Waldorf.

NO ACTION ON COTTON BY FOREIGN BANKERS

Committee Has Not Yet Taken Up American Refusal to Guarantee Bills of Lading.

NEW ORLEANS MAY GAIN

Shippers at Southern Port Expect to Profit by European Discrimination Against Interior Bills.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—No meeting of the Committee of European Bankers has been called as yet to consider the refusal of the American bankers to guarantee the bills of lading on American cotton shipments. It may be some days before further action is taken, as several members of the committee are out of town.

Meantime, the situation is the subject of considerable interest to cotton and banking circles. The general opinion appears to be that the matter will right itself. The head of one of the three firms which opposed the action of the conference on Wednesday explained to-day that while he refused to sign the resolution he would not do anything to prevent the committee from securing the guarantee desired.

If a settlement is not reached before Oct. 31 it will be necessary to convene another meeting, at which it is probable a suggestion will be made that will meet the views of both sides. Sir E. H. Holden, who has been most active in the recent movement, may take up the matter when he goes to New York on his usual business visit next month.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 16.—Many cotton merchants in the South believe the outcome of the cotton bill of lading muddle will be an important increase in the actual as well as the contract cotton business at New Orleans.

Two years ago the New Orleans Cotton Exchange improved its future contract in keeping with the recommendations of United States Commissioner of Corporations, Herbert Knox Smith, and in order to increase its usefulness as a trade hedge, natural or actual market differences or premiums and discounts for the grades above and below middling are used. This contract, in conjunction with the inevitable tendency to utilize the port bill of lading in the place of the interior through bill of lading, will, in the opinion of leading New Orleans cotton merchants, induce both American exporters and European importers to purchase to a greater extent New Orleans futures, since by so doing they may receive supplies at spot market differences in the shape of tenders in port and within immediate reach of a port bill of lading, or ship master's receipt.

Foreign bankers will, they say, continue to accept drafts secured by port bills of lading, the controversy over the cotton bill of lading question having grown out of interior complications only.

Ten days ago the New Orleans compresses and warehouses, in anticipation of an increased business this season, reduced their charges for handling and housing cotton by from 20 to 30 per cent., and to-day the charges that apply to free on board cotton in the port of New Orleans were lowered. Of course the big and well financed cotton firms will be able to finance through shipped cotton whether the international bankers get together or not, but the firm with limited resources in order to ship through will be compelled to finance, through an American bank, a local bill of lading from point of origin to port, and there finance the ocean shipment on an international draft, unless the bankers of America and Europe find some means of handling the through bills as before.

Meanwhile, the fact that through bills may be financed in the old way until Oct. 31 is increasing the demand for cotton for September and October sailing.

The Bill of Lading Committee of the American Bankers' Association received from London yesterday an acknowledgement of the committee's cablegram of the previous day along with the information that the American communication would be laid before the London committee at a meeting to be held next Thursday.

Inaccurate information regarding this communication from London which circulated in Wall Street yesterday made it appear that the committee of European bankers had decided to reconsider their previous decision, but the ntext of the cablegram received by the American committee supplied no basis for any such inference. The American committee is not disposed to predict what will be the outcome of the stand which they have taken, but they are confident that in the long run the European banks will have to abandon their attitude or else their spinners will be forced to make payment for the cotton here instead of abroad.

Want to Wind Up Standard Cordage Co.

Creditors and bondholders of the bankrupt Standard Cordage Company, formed to control the cordage business of the country in 1906, yesterday applied to Supreme Court Justice Whitney for the appointment of Albert N. Barlin of Boston as receiver, under $100,000 bond, to wind up the company's affairs. Referee Jerome Hess, who reported that the company should be dissolved, found it had lost more than three-quarters of a million dollars since 1906. Justice Whitney reserved decision.

BOXER GOODMAN OUTPOINTS HYLAND

Californian Erratic in His Aim, but Hits with Considerable Power.

Dick Hyland of California was surely outpointed by Jack Goodman of New York in their ten-round bout at the National Sporting Club last night, but just as surely Hyland was not outclassed. Judging the go on the basis of boxing, Goodman was a clear winner, but judging it on a fighting basis it was a draw.

On a summing up of this sort, however, last night's affair must perforce go to Goodman. Hyland is a rugged little chap with lots of steam, but a bad aim and an abominable way of clinching. Naturally, with a clever boxer like Goodman the Westerner's only chance was to go in close and rough it if possible. He did this to the Queen's taste, but he got many a poke in the face while doing it.

If so much time had not been wasted in hugging it would have been an exceptionally good fight, with a boxer against a fighter. As it turned out, many were of the opinion that Hyland would win in a longer contest. Goodman's principal fault is breaking ground continually.

When they came into the ring it was seen that Goodman had it on the other fellow in height, and he looked a bit heavier.

Jack started with his left working in and out straight from the shoulder. His left found Hyland's face early, and his scoring was quick and clean. Hyland drove Jack into the corners, and it took all of Goodman's cunning to get out safely. The clinching started early, and Hyland got some good work in close. Goodman kept pegging away with left and right, and Hyland landed several on the body.

Hyland took a hand at the jabbing game in the second round, but he soon saw that he was mastered at this game. However, he landed on Jack's face lightly and forced the going, and took a left and a right in the face, but he never slowed up. Fast infighting followed, and both got home on the body. Goodman poked his left in Hyland's face, which sent his head back almost at right angle with his back. He then rushed Hyland and pounded him around the head. He got him in a corner and worked his left and right at the sturdy Hyland, who fought himself out of a mighty tight hole.

Long-range sparring occupied the fore part of the third round until Goodman countered one of Hyland's left leads for the face. Goodman's blow was a right, straight across, and it landed soaking on Hyland's ear. This didn't bother Hyland a little bit. He kept coming all the time, but Jack was meeting him more than half way. A ripping right swing on the side of the head sent Goodman tottering. Jack came back with a left feint, high, and followed it with a hard right on the body.

The fourth round was even, Hyland offsetting Goodman's good boxing with hard infighting.

Goodman started with the fifth round to show how really more clever he was as a boxer than Hyland. He had the "native son" guessing, but far from undaunted. Hyland kept pushing in, generally getting a left jab on the nose or a cop on the ear, but he kept coming nevertheless. Toward the end of the round Goodman sent four successive and successful lefts flush on Hyland's face without a return.

Hyland was in no sense fuddled by the plants in the snout he was getting, and he kept coming. He generally clinched and the crowd was beginning to get a bit tired of it in this the sixth round. On this account Goodman's pretty tallies were loudly applauded. Jack time and again pushed his left in Hyland's face, and if he hadn't been so tough he would have probably got discouraged and gone home. On the other hand he kept merrily at it and set the pace, though his opponent had a clean lead on the round.

Hyland clinching and Goodman landing left and right about the head characterized the work in the seventh round with much the same report for the doings in the eighth.

With the beginning of the ninth Hyland showed a dangerous looking flash of fierceness that started Goodman on the run. He ran at the Eastener like a cornered cat. His left and right worked like the trudgeon stroke, and he scored on Goodman's body hard. Jack came back with his favorite blow—a straight left in the map. Hyland never for a minute slowed up, and rammed at Goodman with anything he could think of. He had the force all right, but his aim and execution were at fault. One dandy, though, caught Jack over the left eye and some blood was spilled.

Hyland, as usual, cut out the pace in the last round, but if anything he was faster than he was in the preceding round. Goodman had all he could do to hold on to the advantage he had gained with his superior boxing, and his bad habit of breaking ground robbed those pretty points he made of much of their heft. The rugged little Westerner was still going at the bell and willing to keep it up.

Goodman didn't cover himself with a whole lot of glory in the encounter.

Sam Horner and Jim Austin, two husky colored middleweights, furnished the fun of the evening in a four-round go, which was for the most part a veritable wild scramble. The fighters were on the floor most of the time.

Eddie McMahon made the six-round semi-final an unsatisfactory affair by his persistent clinching and unwillingness to take a punch and his inability to give one. Lewis tried hard to make some semblance of a fight out of the bout, but McMahon's tactics prevented.

Lively Bantams for Sharkey's Night.

Bantams will hold the boards at the weekly entertainment of the Sharkey Club next Wednesday night. Manager Buckley has matched Young Wagner and Jimmy Dunn, two local younsters, to meet in the star bout for ten rounds. There will be some fireworks when these boys face each other. Both are rated with the top notchers. Young Wagner has met many of the best boys in his class, and he always makes a good showing and gives the members a run for their money. Jimmy Dunn is regarded as a coming bantam champion. He has had many fights up the State, and scored victories over Tommy Houck, Bert O'Donnell, and Sonny Smith, and defeated Young Britt at Baltimore a couple of weeks ago. Besides the main go Manager Buckley has arranged an interesting semi-final and some corking preliminaries.

Goldman Knocks Out Tiger Young.

Charley Goldman, the Brooklyn bantam, knocked out Tiger Young in the eighth round at the Lehigh Athletic Club last night. It was Goldman's fight from the start, Young landing only occasionally with a straight left jab, which did little damage. Young avoided Goldman's attack for two rounds, but ran into a hard right in the third and went down. Goldman floored him in the sixth and seventh, and in the eighth a hard swing to the jaw sent him down for the count.

Burns Ready to Meet Winner.

Frankie Burns has notified Matchmaker Billy Gibson of the Fairmont Athletic Club that he will be ready in two weeks to meet the winner of the Joe Coster-Phil McGovern bout, which is to be held at Fairmont Tuesday night. Both boys are working hard for this bout. Coster was shaded by McGovern when the pair met about a year ago, but has improved wonderfully since that time. McGovern realizes that he has a difficult task and has a strong corps of boxers with him at Sheepshead Bay.

Dixie Kid and Dick Nelson.

Dixie Kid, the colored welterweight, is working out at Mount Vernon for his bout with Fighting Dick Nelson at the Olympic Athletic Club next Monday night. Nelson is doing his training with four sparring partners at the Reno Athletic Club in Brooklyn. The Dixie Kid is credited with saying that he will stop Nelson in five rounds, and Nelson comes back with the statement that he will not only stay the limit, but outpoint his colored opponent.

McFarland-Wolgast Bout Off.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Packey McFarland has canceled his date to box Ad. Wolgast, lightweight champion of the world, ten rounds before the Star Club of Milwaukee Oct. 6. In calling off all bets McFarland makes free to admit the weight at which he had agreed to meet Wolgast is a bit too low for one of his dimensions. Furthermore, he complains of an injury to his arm, sustained recently in a fall from a motor cycle. Wolgast's manager has claimed the $500 forfeit posted by McFarland.

AMATEUR BOXERS IN RING.

Forty-nine Bouts for Metropolitan Championship To-night.

To those who have been in the habit of witnessing the professional boxing matches at the various local clubs the preliminary bouts of the metropolitan A. A. U. championships at the Irish-American Athletic Club on Thursday night were in the nature of a revelation.

It is true that most of the boys displayed only swings and willingness, but this latter quality was produced in such a marked degre that it left no question in the minds of the members of the club who packed the club's gymnasium that they "had the gloves on" for keeps. As a matter of fact, so little real boxing is shown nowadays that the average fight crowd doesn't know it when it sees it.

There were twenty-five bouts decided on Thursday night, and every one was full of ginger. Even with the excellent arrangements in vogue, due to the indefatigable efforts of Johnny McHugh, who managed the affair, the show did not close until 1:30 yesterday morning. In order that to-night's part of the programme, which will consist of the semi-final and final bouts in all of the classes, shall not lap over into Sunday morning, hostilities will be started promptly at 7 o'clock. The entries in the various classes are:

105-Pound Class—Joseph Rocks, Irish-American A. C.; James McGuin, Irish-American A. C.; Barry Hill, Knights of St. Anthony.

125-Pound Class—Andrew Cortes, Pastime A. C.; J. P. LoRusso, St. Bartholomew A. C.; Herbert Atkins, West Side Y. M. C. A.; James McDonough, Irish-American A. C.; W. McGirr, Pastime A. C.; J. Ring, Irish-American A. C.

115-Pound Class—J. Weisenburger, Harlem Y. M. C. A.; John Hansen, Norwegian Turn Society; M. Schwinker, Clark House; G. Hein, Boys' Club; F. Hufnagel, National A. C.; J. Jordan, South Paterson A. C.

135-Pound Class—Daniel A. Barker, Loughlin Lyceum; William Aue, Mott Haven A. C.; Harry W. Nelson, Acorn A. A.; J. Clement, Irish-American A. C.; W. Adams, Northern A. C.; John Griffin, St. Gabriel's A. C.; J. Kenski, National A. C.

145-Pound Class—Oscar Anderson, Swedish-American A. C.; L. Weidlein, National A. C.

158-Pound Class—George McDermott, St. Gabriel's A. C.; W. Hickey, St. Paul's A. C.; W. Beckman, New West Side A. C.; L. Killian, National A. C.

Heavyweight Class—Fred Mang, Grace A. C.; John J. Garretson, Irish-American A. C.; Emory Payne, Mohegan A. C.; C. Speck, New West Side A. C.

Sheppard and Stevens in Ring.

Lew Sheppard and Sailor Stevens are in fine condition for their ten-round bout at the Delhurst Athletic Club, Mount Vernon, Monday night.

WORLD'S HARNESS RECORDS.

Many Marks Changed by Trotters This Year—Minor Heir's Pacing Mile.

Trotters have done an unusual amount of record-breaking this year, while among the pacers the breaking of the principal world's record has been confined to Minor Heir, son of Heir-at-Law, 2:05¾, dam Kitty Clover, by Hedwald, 2:25½. Minor Heir first lowered Star Pointer's mark of 2:00¼ to 2:00 at Galesburg, Ill., two weeks ago, and at the Indianapolis State Fair Grounds on Saturday last, the stallion paced the mile in a race in 1:59. The new world's records of the trotters are:

Uhlan, blk. g., by Bingen, 2:06¼, dam Blonde, by Sir Walter, Jr., 2:18¼; from 2:01 to 1:58¾.

Fastest stallion—The Harvester, br. g., by Walnut Hall, 2:08¼, dam Notelet, by Moko; from 2:02¼ to 2:02.

Fastest gelding—Uhlan, blk. g., by Bingen, 2:06¼, dam Blonde, by Sir Walter, Jr., 2:18¼; from 1:59¾ to $1:58¾.

Fastest three-year-old colt—Colorado E., b. c., by The Bondsman, dam Flossie McGregor, by Jay McGregor, 2:07¼; from 2:06¾ to 2:06½.

Fastest mile to wagon—Uhlan, blk. g., by Bingen, 2:06¼, dam Blonde, by Sir Walter, Jr., 2:18¼, from 2:03¾ to 2:01.

Fastest mile in a race by a stallion—The Harvester, by Walnut Hall, 2:08¼, dam Notelet, by Moko; from 2:03¼ to 2:02.

Fastest two miles in a race by a stallion—The Harvester, by Walnut Hall, 2:08¼, dam Notelet, by Moko; from 2:03¼ and 2:06¼ to 2:04¼ and 2:03¾.

Fastest three heats—The Harvester, by Walnut Hall, 2:08¼, dam Blonde, by Sir Walter, Jr., 2:18¼; from 2:04¾ to 2:02.

Fastest green stallion—Colorado E., (3,) by The Bondsman, dam Flossie McGregor, by Jay McGregor, 2:07¼; from 2:07½ to 2:06½.

ON THE TENNIS COURTS.

Baffling his opponent by startling changes of his drives, Frederick G. Anderson of Reading, Penn., yesterday won the position of challenger for the New Jersey State lawn tennis championship in singles. In the final of the tournament on the courts of the Morristown Field Club Anderson defeated G. C. Thomas, Jr., a young Princeton player, 6—3, 7—5, and 6—4. Which ever way the challenge match goes to-day, the cup passes out of competition. Richard H. Palmer, the defending holder, has two legs upon the trophy, as has also Anderson. The cup has been in open competition for eight years, the other holders being C. Frederick Watson, Jr., and Edward P. Larned, the younger brother of the famous National champion.

The tournament will be brought to an end to-day, Miss Marie Wagner in the women's singles meeting Miss Esther Smith of Boston. The summary:

Championship Men's Singles.—Final Round—F. G. Anderson of Reading, Penn., defeated G. C. Thomas, Jr., of Princeton, 6—3, 7—5, 6—4.

Men's Doubles.—First Round—R. P. Bennett and H. McCabe defeated Alan Fox and W. B. Wadsworth, 6—0, 6—0; E. S. H. Pendergast and L. H. Freedman defeated W. A. Larned and C. F. Watson, Jr., by default.

Second Round—R. P. Bennett and H. McCabe defeated G. C. Thomas and C. Tomlinson, 6—4, 7—5; W. S. Hoskier and S. H. Miller defeated E. S. H. Pendergast and Leon H. Freedman, 2—6, 7—5, 9—7.

Third Round—Cragin Du Bosque and Steele Du Bosque defeated J. T. Willis and Dr. F. H. Glazebrook, 4—6, 6—1, 6—3; O. H. Hinck and S. H. Voshell defeated R. P. Bennett and H. McCabe, 6—1, 6—2; F. G. Anderson and H. J. Mollenhauer defeated W. S. Hoskier and S. H. Miller, 6—1, 6—3.

Mixed Doubles.—First Round—Mrs. and Mrs. B. M. Phillips defeated J. C. Tomlinson and partner by default; Mrs. and Mr. Edes Johnson defeated Mrs. and Mr. J. A. H. Hopkins, 6—2, 6—0; Mrs. G. I. Edgar and Lindley Dunham defeated S. H. Voshell and partner by default.

Semi-final Round—Mrs. and Mr. Edes Johnson defeated Mrs. and Mr. B. M. Phillips, 5—7, 6—2, 6—4; Miss Marie Wagner and H. J. Mollenhauer defeated Mrs. G. I. Edgar and Lindley Dunham, 8—6, 6—4.

Showing the top speed of a fast driving and volleying game, Charles M. Bull, Jr., the playing through ex-champion, won his way to the final round of the championship singles yesterday on the courts of the Crescent Athletic Club at Bay Ridge, defeating W. A. Campbell in straight sets, 6—3, 6—2, 6—1. On his shots for placement Bull sent the ball on a course that eluded his opponent. His net work was very steady, and he appeared superior to the form he displayed two seasons ago, when he won the title. The summary:

Men's Championship Singles.—First round—L. Barker defeated W. Bonner, by default; C. M. Bull defeated N. C. Barnaby, 6—1, 6—2, 8—6; J. E. Parsons defeated E. F. Dunham, 6—3, 6—1, 6—4; O. A. Kimberly defeated E. A. Fitter, by default; H. C. Martin defeated H. H. Neale, 6—1, 6—1, 6—0; H. A. Clinkenbroomer defeated C. J. McDermott, 6—3, 6—3, 6—1; N. B. Beecher defeated E. A. Bigelow, by default; C. R. Woodward defeated E. C. Thayer, 6—0, 6—2, 6—4; N. Dowling defeated L. Brooks, by default; C. M. Bull, Jr., defeated E. E. Perry, 6—2, 6—4, 6—2.

Second round—Robert Cassamajor defeated E. W. Whiting, 6—4, 7—9, 6—3, 6—1; J. V. Lauderdale defeated H. E. McGowan, by default; D. Van Brunt defeated Burton Smith, 6—1, 6—0, 9—7; C. D. Potter defeated G. H. Henshaw, 6—2, 4—6, 7—5, 9—7; T. W. Richt defeated H. B. Smithers, 6—2, 6—2, 6—3; L. Barker defeated L. M. Brigham, by default; C. M. Bull, Sr., defeated J. E. Parsons, 6—3, 6—3, 6—1; Harry C. Martin defeated O. A. Kimberly, 6—0, 6—2, 6—2; N. B. Beecher defeated H. A. Clinkenbroomer, 8—6, 6—2, 3—6, 6—1; C. R. Woodward defeated N. Dowling, by default; C. M. Bull, Jr., defeated F. N. Cluff, 6—1, 6—1, 6—1; O. B. Van Sault defeated T. Escher, by default; F. O. Affeld defeated H. D. Hadsell, 6—1, 6—3, 5—7, 6—1; H. Eggers defeated C. M. Dinneen, by default; W. A. Campbell defeated C. C. Possire, 6—1, 6—0, 6—0; M. S. Charlock defeated O. P. Lovell, 6—1, 6—2, 6—2.

Third round—Robert Cassamajor defeated J. Lauderdale, 6—4, 6—2, 6—4; D. Van Brunt defeated C. D. Potter, 6—4, 6—0, 7—5; L. Barker defeated T. W. Richt, 6—4, 6—1, 6—2; H. C. Martin defeated C. M. Bull, Sr., 6—1, 6—2, 6—4; C. R. Woodward defeated N. B. Beecher, 6—0, 6—2, 6—4; C. M. Bull, Jr., defeated O. B. Van Sault, 6—3, 6—4, 6—0; F. O. Affeld defeated H. Eggers, 6—3, 6—3, 6—0; W. A. Campbell defeated M. S. Charlock, 6—0, 6—3, 6—1.

Fourth round—Robert Cassamajor defeated D. Van Brunt, 6—3, 6—0, 7—5; C. M. Bull, Jr., defeated C. R. Woodward, 6—3, 6—4, 8—6; W. A. Campbell defeated F. O. Affeld, 7—5, 6—0, 7—9, 8—6.

Semi-final round—C. M. Bull, Jr., defeated W. A. Campbell, 6—3, 6—2, 6—1.

ATHLETICS HELPFUL TO AMERICAN YOUTH

Overindulgence Is Bad, but Wise and Moderate Performances Aid to Preserve Health.

BY HARRY L. HILLMAN.

Every now and then we hear of some prominent medical authority condemning athletics in general. He will attempt to show how the American youth is gradually undermining his health, and will endeavor to trace the early fatalities of heart failure and tuberculosis victims to the strenuous competition in the various forms of athletics. And in his long talk generally convinces quite a few persons to his way of thinking; but if this authority would take the right fellow as an example, undoubtedly he would change his ideas. Probably he has come in contact with the athlete who before he took up the game had some organic defect, and naturally the participation in strenuous exercise aggravated the trouble. If a youth passes a thorough physical examination, athletics seldom can be blamed for any ills and ailments that may get hold of him, providing, of course, he takes pretty good care of himself and lives a clean, moderate life.

Track athletics, football, rowing, swimming, and other sports requiring strength and endurance necessitate those indulging in these forms of competition to be free from any form of serious weakness in their physical make-up. In all the preparatory schools and colleges the athlete must pass an examination before being permitted to take part in the competition, and in most of the athletic associations, although not compulsory, it is possible to undergo the same examination, and a young man contemplating entering competitions should take advantage of these opportunities for his own welfare.

A boy 12 to 17 years old can ruin his health by too much competition, and unless he is advised by some responsible person, athletics will greatly shorten his life, but a mild form of athletics, as prescribed by the Public Schools Athletic League, will gradually develop him and fit him physically and mentally for future greater endeavors. Immediately after the London Olympic games, the Marathon craze hit this country with a rush. When John Hayes won his notable victory in the long race from Windsor Castle to London, the American public became excited over Marathon races. All the youths in New York were running around the streets or on the boulevards almost every evening. A squad of fifteen or so would rush by, and the youngsters ranged from 12 to 17 years old. They got the fever, and you couldn't keep them down. Marathon races were being held every week, and in a great many instances the same contestants would attempt to run in every race, with the result that a lot of runners collapsed in the various events.

On account of Dorando Petri's game showing in the London race, the poorer class of Italians in New York thought it was up to them to try and duplicate his performance. In one particular race fully a dozen young Italian bootblacks and newsboys entered for the long twenty-six-mile grind. Probably not one of these boys had the first idea of how to get into condition for such a grueling contest. When the majorty of them had gone about four or five miles they began to get weary. Some of them quit, while others tried to be game, as they thought, and stick it out, and naturally, not being in condition, and also being entirely too young to undertake the task, they began to fall by the wayside. Four of the boys were picked up in rather bad shape, but fortunately came around in due time.

Instances like these will bring forth criticisms from the non-athletic advocates and give them good ground for complaint. Although Marathon running is a hard game, and an event that a man should not too often take part in, the average matured Marathon runner, providing he does not run too often and has gone through a systematic course of preparation, seldom feels any ill-effects from the long race.

Athletes like Hayes, Crowley, Svanberg, Clarke, Jansen, Mellor, and a score of others have yet to feel any serious effects from their many long grinds, although they have competed in about twice as many as is considered advisable. Sam Mellor has probably run fifty of these long races, yet he is in good physical shape to-day. Pat Dineen, a professional runner of Boston, only the other day won a twenty-six-mile race, and he is 37 years old. Of course, at his age it is not benefiting his health any by sticking at the game.

If an athlete taking part in track sports uses tobacco and alcohol to excess he will invariably feel the effects of the strain. Smoking to excess has a tendency to injure the heart of the ordinary, everyday man, and if an athlete expects to keep his health he must cut the habit out entirely, or decrease it to a minimum. The hard work required in athletics, together with incessant smoking, is liable to greatly weaken the action of the heart.

Many sprinters and short-distance runners smoke a great deal. They imagine because they can run almost or just as fast whether smoking or not they will feel no bad effects from it. They probably will not for a while; but the double strain put on the heart has a tendency to weaken this organ, and in later years the athlete may realize his mistake.

Alcohol beverages tends to undermine the whole system. The stomach will gradually weaken with the constant use of liquor, and a weak stomach is invariably the cause of many serious ailments. An athlete with a poor stomach is like an automobile with defective machinery. It has also a tendency to wear down the nervous system. The use of ales and stouts, in many cases, are very beneficial. A man under a severe course of training needs a little stimulant now and then, especially at the end of a long course of preparation. Many lightweight men are compelled to take a bottle of stout once a day in order to keep their weight up to a certain figure, otherwise the hard work would pull down their weight to such an extent that they would be likely to go stale.

Every young man should take up some form of athletics. First of all, undergo a thorough physical examination, and, if pronounced fit, get mixed up in some one of the various sports. Try them all. Then select the one best fitted for your physical make up, but do not go in for the hard competitions until you feel you can stand the strain. After a person has reached the age of 18 he usually can safely enter hard competition. If it is found too strenuous and has a tendency to weaken the system, wait another year and gradually develop yourself to meet the requirements.

Live clean and get plenty of sleep. Smoke, if you must, in moderation, but cut it out entirely if possible. Keep on the water wagon altogether, with the exception of a little ale or stout ocasionally ,and do not hit the high places. Take good care of the stomach; eat plain, wholesome food at all times, and, if attending banquets or occasional late dinners, pass up all the fancy dishes, and you will find athletics the greatest asset to a healthy life.

Unless a healthy young fellow can use up some of his surplus energies in athletics, and get acquainted with the life of the athlete, he may possibly get mixed up with a lot of uncongenial companions. As athletics take up most of a person's spare time he generally avoids all this.

Colleges and preparatory schools would fnd it hard to exist without the several form of athletics. Nowadays the National Guard, churches, commercial houses and others are forming athletic associations, and the benefits derived by the youth can be easily noticed.

If not overdone and the young man is physically fit, athletics is the greatest developer for the growing youth, and should be encouraged and not discouraged.

Willie Beecher and "Battling" Hurley.

The card arranged by Matchmaker Billy Neumann for Thursday night's show at the Longacre Athletic Association should be one of the greatest contests that the local club has staged this season. In the final event of ten rounds that fighting whirlwind of Passaic, "Battling" Hurley, will meet the Ghetto champion, Willie Beecher. While his contest with "Fighting Dick" Hyland is still fresh in the minds of the boxing fans, his coming bout with the Jersey battler will be his real tryout in the lightweight division. Both boys are in active training, Beecher working out at Woodlawn Inn, while Hurley is putting on the finishing touches in his home town. The boys have agreed to box at 133 pounds, weigh in at 6 o'clock. Application for membership can be had by applying at the clubhouse to the Secretary no later than Sept. 21. Beside the final event there will be a six-round semi-final and three four-round bouts between good local boys.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES.

A recent change in the personnel of the automobile trade of this city has just been made known by an announcement from the Carhartt Automobile Sales Company that Walter R. Lee, Secretary and General Manager of the New York Automobile Trade Association, has been secured to serve as Assistant General Manager of that company. Mr. Lee's new duties will involve the retail sales management of the New York branch.

An effective way in which to cover up grease cups or the small oil cups which supply such parts as steering knuckles and connections, spring shackles, and rear axles with oil so that they may be kept free from dirt and mud, which accumulates on them, and which are carried through into the bearings with the grease or oil when the cup is filled, is to procure a number of hollow rubber balls of just such size that the cups will fit within them, and to enlarge the holes so that they may be forced over the cups and get a tight grip on the bottom part. These balls will make an absolutely tight covering for the cups and can be painted the color of the car, so that they do not by any means appear unsightly.

More than $2,100,000,000 worth of mineral oil has been exported from the United States since that product began to be an article of exportation, some fifty years ago. Mineral oil is one of the few articles of staple production in the United States whose sales abroad in the fiscal year 1909 showed an increase over those of the preceding years. A statement just compiled by the Bureau of Statistics shows that during the year which ended June 30 last, a year of declining exports in our trade as a whole, mineral oils showed a gain of over 10,000,000 gallons in sales to foreign countries, and a gain of nearly $2,000,000 in value.

The Motor Cups Holding Company has opened temporary offices at Room 212, Putnam Building, Broadway and Forty-third Street, where all information regarding entries, drivers, boxes, seats, and parking spaces for the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize races may be obtained. All departments are represented, and blanks, tickets, and information may be obtained.

The Kissel Motor Car Company of Hartford, Wis., has been granted a license to manufacture under the Selden patent.

Harry M. Bronner has succeeded R. T. Newton as the head of the New York office of the Stoddard-Dayton Company. Mr. Newton goes to the Newark branch office, and E. C. J. McShane will become manager of the new office which is soon to be opened in Brooklyn.

The Automobile Owners' Association has entered into an agreement with a leading surety company whereby the company will furnish all members of the association with a bail bond power of attorney, enabling the member to secure a release in case of arrest for violation of the motor vehicle law.

Since Monday's automobile races at the Brighton Beach Motordome two notices have been sent out relating to the affair. The Motor Racing Association disclaimed any connection with the meet, and the American Automobile Association sent out a notice that De Palma's mark of 0:50 4-5 would stand as official in spite of Oldfield's record of 0:49 4-5.

"Wally" Owen, who was injured in the last twenty-four-hour race at Brighton Beach when his car overturned, has entirely recovered from the effects of the spill.

BUSINESS TROUBLES

KALLMAN HOFFMAN.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Kallman Hoffman, manufacturer of cloaks and suits at 22 West Third Street, by these creditors: Bacon & Co., $856; Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne, $36, and J. L. Sachs, $50. The assets are estimated at $10,000. Mr. Hoffman was originally of Hoffman Brothers, who went through bankruptcy in 1901, and after receiving his discharge in April, 1901, he became a partner in the firm of Hoffman & Laiken, succeeded to the business in September, 1903, and has been alone since. In January last his statement showed assets of $31,970 and liabilities of $7,664. The liabilities now are reported to be $35,000.

MELVIN V. COLCORD.—Melvin V. Colcord of 35 Broadway has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $3,413 and assets of $633. The largest creditors are William O. Badger, Jr., $2,581, on a judgment obtained on Oct. 13, 1908, on an agreement of Mr. Colcord to take stocks and bonds of the Coney Island and New York Navigation Company for $2,500, which company made an assignment on May 4, 1908, and S. E. Hartzell of Tranger, Penn., $500, loan for the benefit of E. L. Cottell, Inc. Mr. Colcord was President of this corporation and had one share of stock, which was seized by the Sheriff on an execution in favor of Mr. Badger.

LOUIS GLICKMAN.—Louis Glickman, restaurant manager at 276 East Houston Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $4,135 and no assets. The largest creditor is H. Koehler & Co., $3,450, deficiency judgment, loan, &c.

ABRAHAM ABELOWITZ.—Abraham Abelowitz, salesman, of 126 St. Mark's Place, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $1,802 and no assets. The debts were contracted between Jan. 1, 1908, and Jan. 1, 1910.

UNITED WORSTED JOBBING HOUSE.—Judge Martin has appointed William Henkel, Jr., receiver in bankruptcy for Herman Wolf, trading as the United Worsted Jobbing House, at 298 Broome Street. The assets are estimated at $3,000.

K. FRIEDMAN & SON.—Judge Holt has appointed Merrill E. Gates receiver in bankruptcy for K. Friedman & Son, manufacturers of fur coats at 9 Bleecker Street. The stock and materials on hand are estimated at $2,000, and it is said that some creditors carried away $4,000 worth of goods.

ZAIMANT & BLUMENSTEIN.—Judge Holt has appointed Walter H. Gilpatric receiver in bankruptcy for Zaimant & Blumenstein, dealers in dress goods, at 1,358 Fifth Avenue. Seventeen creditors requested the appointment of Jacob Granowitz receiver, who is a creditor and who agreed to act without compensation. The stock on hand is estimated at $2,000.

ABRAHAM J. SCHULMAN.—Judge Holt has appointed Raymond G. Guernsey receiver in bankruptcy for Abraham J. Schulman, druggist, at 1,500 Fifth Avenue. The assets are estimated at $1,000.

J. B. & J. M. CORNELL COMPANY.—Judge Holt has authorized A. Gordon Murray and Michael Blake, receivers of the J. B. & J. M. Cornell Company, iron works, Eleventh Avenue and Twenty-sixth Street, to continue business for sixty days, as it will take at least that time to complete existing contracts which have been in progress all Summer. Substantially no new work has been undertaken since the last extension of the receivership, on June 17. The company has been in bankruptcy since March 22, 1909.

ROCHESTER GOLD MINING COMPANY.—Deputy Sheriff Harris has received an execution for $25,287 against the Rochester Gold Mining Company, formerly at 80 Broadway, in favor of John Weir, for the amount now due on six notes of the company made on Jan. 16, 1905, payable one year after date, and for money loaned to the company. It is a New Jersey corporation. S. F. Sullivan was President and Frank V. Sullivan Secretary.

ABRAHAM LEHRMAN.—Abraham Lehrman, a baker, formerly of 1,919 Second Avenue, has made an assignment to Isaac B. Reinhardt.

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—Walter F. Perkins of Wakefield, a member of the firm of Perkins, Hardy & Co., shoe manufacturers, of Derry, N. H., with offices at 139 Lincoln Street, Boston, has filed a list of creditors with the Clerk of the United States District Court to have the creditors' petition in bankruptcy against the concern dismissed. The total of unsecured claims of the firm, as filed by Perkins, is $630,240.79. No secured creditors are named. The firm was petitioned into bankruptcy Aug. 14 by the Atlas Tack Company of New Bedford, holding a claim for $1,127.54; J. Einstein of New York, with a claim for $2,394.77; Locke, Tolman & Co. of Boston, whose claim is $7,316.27, and the Security Trust Company of Lynn, which holds a claim for $4,950. The return day is Sept. 21.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Stitching Ornaments to Gowns Held Not to be a Process of Setting.

In sustaining a protest filed by Terrill & Co., the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday made a ruling construing in a liberal manner the provision in the Aldrich-Payne tariff covering silk gowns embroidered and set with imitation pearls. General Appraiser Sharretts, who writes the decision for the board, holds that the provision in Paragraph 448 of the tariff enacted last year, for articles of personal adornment, does not apply to silk gowns that have had stitched thereon articles in the nature of millinery or dress ornaments set with imitation precious stones. Such wearing apparel, the board holds, is dutiable properly at 60 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 402 of the act.

The merchandise covered by the protests consists of silk gowns, which were assessed with duty at the compound rate, equivalent to 85 per cent. ad valorem, under Paragraph 448, as articles of silk wearing apparel ornamented with imitation precious stones. The importers' contention was for the imposition of a 60 per cent. duty as silk wearing apparel. The gowns were embroidered, and had attached to the corsage a single ornament set with rhinestones. In reversing the Custom House authorities the General Appraiser has this to say:

"The word 'set' employed in Paragraph 448 is to be taken in its technical sense. Stitching an ornament to a fabric is not a process of setting, and, furthermore, the phrase 'designed to be worn on apparel' is convincingly indicative of the character of the articles that Congress intended to fall within the purview of the enactment. We find that the merchandise is silk wearing apparel, and hold that it is dutiable at 60 per cent. under Paragraph 402. The protest is sustained and the Collector's decision reversed."

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Except for showers in Florida, Louisiana, and Iowa, fair weather prevailed during Friday in all districts east of the Rockies. Beyond the mountains scattered showers still prevail. The temperature has continued to rise in the central valleys, while in eastern sections the weather has remained moderately cool. East of the Rockies generally fair weather, with but few changes in temperature, will prevail till Sunday night.

Winds along the New England Coast will be moderate northeast, except brisk on the southeast coast; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate to brisk northeast; South Atlantic Coast, moderate northeast.

Steamships departing Saturday for European ports will have moderate to brisk northeast winds, with generally fair weather, to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND SUNDAY.

Eastern New York, New Jersey, New England, and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair Saturday and Sunday, not much change in the temperature; moderate northeast winds.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	1909.	1910.		1909.	1910.
3 A. M.	65	61	4 P. M.	72	71
6 A. M.	64	57	6 P. M.	70	70
9 A. M.	68	64	9 P. M.	69	66
12 M.	72	69	12 P. M.	69

This thermometer is 108 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 64; for the corresponding date last year it was 68; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 66.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 62; at 8 P. M. it was 68. Maximum temperature, 72 degrees at 2:20 P. M.; minimum, 57 degrees at 5:30 A. M. Humidity, 54 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 47 per cent. at 8 P. M.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

The Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society's Property on Washington Heights Reported Sold—Deal on West 26th Street—Harlem Property in Trade—Many Suburban Sales.

A large building company, it was reported yesterday, has purchased the Manhattan property of the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society, occupying the entire block front on the west side of Broadway from 150th to 151st Street. The dimensions of this large plot are 199.10 feet on Broadway and 225 feet on each street. The property is to be improved in the near future with high-class apartment houses. The plot is one of the few available parcels in the Washington Heights district, which has been characterized of late by heavy building operations, for new structures of an elaborate and expensive character.

Possession of the land will not be given until the society moves to its new home at Pleasantville, N. Y., where several acres were purchased a short time ago, and work is now under way on the first group of buildings, to cost $750,000. The cornerstone of the main structure was laid in July, and next year it is expected to occupy the Pleasantville quarters.

The Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society was organized thirty-one years ago, and among its Directors are Adolph Lewisohn, Jacob H. Schiff, Mortimer L. Schiff, and Felix Warburg. The present Broadway property was originally the country home of Cyrus W. Field, and his old house still forms a part of the orphanage building.

Samuel D. Levy, Vice-President of the society, refused to either confirm or deny the report of the sale yesterday, but he admitted that negotiations for the sale of the property are pending.

West 26th Street Loft Sold.

The Charles Weinstein Realty Company has sold to a client of Isidor Reis the seven-story loft building 130 West Twenty-sixth Street, on a lot 25 by 98.9, for $110,000, subject to mortgages of $75,000 for five years.

The sellers take in part payment the six-story tenement 391 and 393 Cherry Street, on a lot 76 by 80.

Crocker House Reported Sold.

The residence of the late George Crocker, at the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Sixty-fourth Street, is reported to have been sold to J. B. Haggin. The dwelling is a four-story structure, covering a plot 30.9 by 110. No confirmation of the report could be obtained yesterday. The heirs of the estate withdrew the parcel from the market several weeks ago.

Sale on Upper Fifth Avenue.

Goldberg & Greenberg have purchased from Dr. Henry Ettinger 2,150 Fifth Avenue, a four-story single flat, on a lot 19 by 75. The buyers will alter the premises into stores.

Harlem Flat in a Trade.

E. A. Johnson has resold, through Clarence E. Hutchinson, the five-story flat 66 West 133d Street, on a lot 25 by 100. The buyer gives in exchange a two-story house, on a plot 175 by 100, at St. James, L. I., and fourteen acres at Port Jefferson, L. I.

Buyers of Marginal Street Plot.

The Warwick-Thomson Company of Twelfth Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street is the buyer of the plot of twelve city lots from the Consolidated Gas Company, fronting on Marginal Street, opposite the Chelsea dock improvement, between Nineteenth and Twentieth Streets. Upon taking title the owners contemplate the erection of a ten-story warehouse.

Sells Private Residence.

The H. M. Weill Company has sold for Philip Levey the three-story and basement dwelling 634 West 138th Street. The buyer has given a place at Long Branch in exchange.

Investor Buys Bronx Flat.

The Irving Construction Company has sold through Ernst & Cahn the southeast corner of Honeywell Avenue and 179th Street, a four-story flat in a plot 32.6 by 85. The buyer is said to be an out-of-town investor.

Brooklyn Sales.

Green & Bailey have sold the two-family house at 71 Kenilworth Place, Flatbush, for Mary Begemen to Georgia R. Hall; the two-family brick house at 339 East Twenty-ninth Street, Flatbush, to Anna J. Orlouski for F. H. Moll, and the one-family brick dwelling as 644 Halsey Street for Georgia R. Hall to an investor.

The John Pullman Real Estate Company has sold 70 Berkeley Place, a three-story and basement brick dwelling, 17 by 50 by 100, for Thomas E. Pilsworth to Mary J. Howe for occupancy.

Frank A. Seaver has sold a plot 80 by 100 on the southerly side of Sixty-seventh Street, 170 feet westerly from Third Avenue, for R. B. Wilhelm to an investor.

Big Factory for East Orange.

The Nevins Church Company has sold to the Sims Magneto Company a tract of seventy-two lots on the Delaware, Lackawanna, and Western Railroad at East Orange. The purchasers, one of the largest concerns of their kind in the country, intend to erect a large plant.

Development Co. Buys Acreage.

Eleven acres in the town of Woodside, L. I., known as the Joseph property has been purchased by the Queensboro Corporation for immediate development.

This parcel adjoins the company's Barclay-Dugro tract and has a frontage of three blocks on Jackson Avenue. The purchase was made through the Halleran agency.

Suburban Sales.

T. P. Matthews has purchased from the Rickert-Finlay Realty Company at Kensington, L. I., a plot 113 by 80 on the north side of North Drive, 220 feet west of East Drive.

A tract of twenty-five acres on Gerritsen's creek below the old Red Mill and mill pond near Jamaica Bay has been purchased by a syndicate in which Samuel Newborne of Salt Lake City is interested.

The Armor Realty Company has sold through E. Sharum nine lots on the easterly side of Hickory Street, 153 feet south of Quincy Avenue, Arlington, N. J., and three lots on New York Avenue, near Ninth Street; two lots on Ninth Street, near Adelaide Avenue, and two lots on Kenmore Avenue, near Fifth Street, all in Jamaica, N. Y. Two frame dwelling houses on a plot 50 by 125 each on the easterly side of Willet Place, 150 feet north of Washington Avenue, Roosevelt, L. I., were taken as part payment.

Hallam & Co. have sold to a syndicate for improvement a plot of 160 lots at Massapequa, L. I.

Fifth Avenue Art Gallery.

Only one plan was filed for a new building at the Manhattan Bureau of Buildings yesterday, and that was for a five-story brick fireproof structure for Roland F. Knoedler, who will use it exclusively for his art store and galleries. The building will be located on the west side of Fifth Avenue, 25.5 feet south of Forty-sixth Street, with a frontage of 50 feet and a depth of 100 feet, with a rear extension. On the first or ground floor will be a large reception hall, two small and one large galleries, over which will be large glass skylights. There will be three rooms devoted to prints on the second floor. The fourth floor will contain show and stock rooms, while the fifth floor will have three large galleries, with glass skylights. The façade of the building will be of brick, with limestone trimmings, and thoroughly fireproof. Carrere & Hastings, architects, have estimated the cost of this building at $175,000. The site was formerly occupied by the Lotos Club.

SPECIAL SALE
"TO-DAY"
of
TEN BEAUTIFUL COUNTRY HOMES
At Plandome Heights, L. I.,

30 to 40% Less Than Actual Value

$20,000 Home for $14,000

We will have completed and offer at special sale ten magnificent Homes, built for the purpose of establishing at once the right atmosphere at Plandome Heights, the exclusive, refined suburb, five minutes' walk from Manhasset Station—28 minutes to Herald Square.

We give with each house a plot of land worth from $6,000 to $10,000.

This sale will nearly close out Plandome Heights, the development of which we commenced this Spring. Before the improvements were under way, already over one-half of the property was disposed of; to-day only a few one-quarter-acre plots remain unsold. A certain proof of quality.

This is a rare opportunity to secure at 30 to 40% less than actual value a refined, elegant home, as good as man and money can build, in an excellent, established neighborhood where your neighbors are of the right kind.

COMMITTEE ON EMPLOYMENT FOR STUDENTS

New York, N. Y., September 12, 1910.

The New York Times,
Times Square,

Dear Sirs:

Last spring our Committee on Employment for Students was fortunate enough to obtain a small fund for advertising. We tried a number of magazines and daily papers, but the Times proved to be the best medium for bringing results In fact, our students secured as many positions through the Times alone as through all the other publications combined.

Thanking you for your kind and courteous attention to my requests, I am,

Yours very truly,
Paul C. Holter
Secretary

Readers realize that the Want advertisements published in The Times are reliable because each advertisement offered for publication is subject to close scrutiny and objectionable and doubtful advertisements are rejected. The Want advertisements published in The Times are worthy of confidence. Telephone 1000 Bryant. The Times will write the advertisement for you or a representative will call if you desire.

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF LIQUIDATION OF THE CITY DEBT.
ROOM 206 CITY HALL ANNEX.

New Orleans, La., Aug. 22, 1910.

The Board of Liquidation, City Debt, acting under authority of Act No. 19 of the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana for the session of 1906, and Act No. 116 of said General Assembly for the session of 1908, and Act No. 23 of 1910, which said acts, No. 19 of 1906 and No. 116 of 1908, have been adopted by constitutional amendment, and have become part of the Constitution of the State of Louisiana, will receive sealed proposals at its office, in the City of New Orleans, Louisiana, up to 12 o'clock noon on Tuesday, Oct. 4, 1910, for the purchase of seven million dollars in face value of the new public improvement bonds of the City of New Orleans, authorized by and to be issued under the provisions of the acts aforementioned, and the constitutional amendments ratifying same.

Said bonds are of the denomination of one thousand dollars each, and bear interest at the rate of four per cent. (4) per annum, evidenced by interest coupons payable semi-annually on the first days of January and July of each year, respectively. They are by law exempt from taxation, State, parish, and municipal.

Said bonds are payable Jan. 1, 1942, and are subject to call at the option of the City of New Orleans after Jan. 1, 1928, and will be issued under and subject to the acts aforementioned, which are referred to and made part hereof as greater certainty and particularity.

Said proposals shall be received under and subject to the following conditions, to wit:

1st. No sale shall be made of any of the said bonds unless the aggregate of the bids shall be for the full amount of said bonds, to wit: $7,000,000 in face value.

2d. Said bonds will be adjudicated to the highest bidder or bidders, provided that said bonds or any part thereof shall not be adjudicated for less than par and accrued interest, less a commission not to exceed six per centum on the principal thereof.

3d. All matured interest coupons on said bonds shall be cut from said bonds and canceled, and the successful bidder, or bidders, shall pay the interest which may have accrued on said bonds up to the date of delivery.

4th. Said bonds shall be paid for by the successful bidder, or bidders, in cash as fast as they can be signed and delivered, said deliveries to be made on twenty-four hours' notice. First delivery to be made Nov. 5, 1910.

All bonds to be delivered within a period not to exceed one hundred and twenty days from date of final acceptance of bid.

5th. No bid will be received or considered unless accompanied by a certified check on some chartered bank in the City of New Orleans for three per cent. of the amount of each bid, the check, or checks, of the successful bidder, or bidders, shall be cashed and the proceeds retained by the Board of Liquidation as a guarantee that the said bidder, or bidders, will comply with his or their bids, and said proceeds shall be applied to the payment of the bonds last delivered to said bidder, or bidders, respectively. In case of neglect or refusal to comply with any bid, the proceeds of the bidder's check shall be forfeited to the Sewerage and Water Board.

6th. Any local bank or banks, bidding for said bonds are referred to Section 2 of Act No. 23 of 1910, and any bidder or bidders, bidding for said bid, or bids, that they have the custody of the Public Improvement Fund after the 5th of November, 1910, as provided for in said Act No. 23 of 1910.

7th. If any local bank, or banks, should be awarded the depository as provided in Act No. 23 of 1910, the said local bank, or banks, shall be required to pay the rate of interest on daily balances in the amount and at the time provided therein, and shall comply with all the provisions of said statutes as to said and other matters.

8th. The Board of Liquidation City Debt reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Mark all bids: "Proposals for Purchase of New Public Improvement Bonds."

Further particulars and information will be furnished upon application to T. WOLFE, Jr., Secretary of the Board of Liquidation, City Debt, Room 206 City Hall Annex, New Orleans, La.

LIFT $550,000 DEBT ON BIG CATHEDRAL

Individual Catholics and Churches of the Diocese Join in Aiding St. Patrick's.

CONSECRATION ON OCT. 5

Dignitaries from All Over the World Coming to Help Archbishop Farley at the Ceremonies.

All but a few thousand dollars needed to pay off the debt on St. Patrick's Cathedral, Fifth Avenue and Fiftieth Street, has been already paid in, according to Mgr. William G. Murphy of the Cathedral's Consecration Committee. The debt, left over from the building of the cathedral in 1879, is $550,000. To liquidate it the 225 churches of the diocese have raised $300,000. In addition to this individual Catholics have contributed $221,175. Less than $30,000, accordingly, remains still to be raised. And contributions are still coming in daily, a substantial one being received by Archbishop Farley only yesterday afternoon from William C. Orr.

The $221,175 donated by individual Catholics is largely the result of the personal labors of Archbishop Farley. When the question of raising money enough to pay off the cathedral's debt, so that the edifice could be formally consecrated this Autumn, came up last Spring, the Archbishop wrote to about 100 prominent Roman Catholics of this diocese, stating that the cathedral could not be consecrated until the debt was paid off, and asking them what assistance they could give. He asked when they could see him, and, on receiving their replies, he got into a taxicab and in spite of his sixty-eight years, paid personal calls upon them.

One of the first Catholics the Archbishop called on was a well-known traction man.

"Mr. ——," said the Archbishop, according to Mgr. Murphy, "we are trying to lift the debt from the cathedral so that we may formally consecrate it next October. The debt is $550,000. About half of this will doubtless be taken care of by the churches of the diocese. I am making a round of calls on prominent Catholics of the diocese, asking them if they can help us raise the balance. Can you see your way to help us?"

The Archbishop and traction man then conversed on other matters for a time, and the Archbishop left. How much the traction man was going to contribute, the Archbishop did not know when he departed. Next day, however, the prelate received a check for $25,000.

Two other New York business men contributed $25,000 each, and six others gave $10,000 apiece, eight contributed $5,000 each, and six $2,500 each.

"I send you my check for $2,000 and wish it could be ten times as much," another Roman Catholic wrote.

Fifteen persons contributed $1,000 apiece and seventeen $500. Eighty-five persons altogether contributed amounts ranging between $25,000 and $25. Many smaller contributions have also been received by the Archbishop toward either paying off the debt or defraying the expenses of the consecration ceremony.

Here is a list of the principal contributors:

Thomas F. Ryan, James Butler, John B. Manning, John F. O'Rourke, George Ehret, Joseph Grace, Herman Ridder, Peter Doelger, Morgan J. O'Brien, John D. Crimmins, Robert Collier, John Whalen, Bryan L. Kennelly, Cornelius Callahan, John B. McDonald, Adrian Iselin, Jr., Gerald Borden, Clarence Mackay, William Lummis, John C. Agar, Eugene A. Philbin, George W. Loft, Bernard F. Coleman, Henry Heide, Michael J. Degnon, Joseph Dillon, James A. Farley, C. F. Fornes, N. H. Amy, Eugene T. Connell, M. C. Bouvier, W. Bourke Cockran, William D. Gothrie, Francis Higgins, William H. Moffitt, Benziger Brothers, William F. Sheehan, Elizabeth S. Hamilton, Elizabeth Horgan, William E. Iselin, Louise Varet, Countess Leary, Stephen Farrelly, Thomas L. Feitner, William C. Orr, John F. McGrane, William F. O'Connor, Joseph J. Almirall, Patrick F. McGowan, Thomas M. Mulry, John F. Carroll, F. B. Delahanty, George J. Gillespie, Daniel W. Harnett, Daniel F. Cohalan, William F. Clare, Joseph F. Daly, John C. Ward, James A. O'Gorman, William H. McIntyre, John J. Radley, Patrick Kiernan, Thomas J. Colton, John Aspell, Arthur Kennedy, E. L. Keyes, John J. Barry, Joseph F. Mulqueen, F. B. Hoffman, Marie La Montagne, and William Roach.

The consecration ceremonies, which will take place on Oct. 5, will be in many ways the most distinguished Roman Catholic function which has ever taken place in this city. Roman Catholic dignitaries from all over the world will be present. Cardinal Logue of Ireland will come from Montreal. Cardinal Vannutelli will come from Rome, and Archbishop Glennon from St. Louis. Mgr. Mooney is Chairman of the Invitation Committee; Mgr. Lavelle heads the Reception Committee, the Right Rev. F. H. Wall heads the Dinner Committee, the Rev. John J. Kean heads the Children's Committee, and the Rev. Joseph F. Flannelly heads the Printing Committee.

Cardinal Gibbons will open the consecration ceremony by officiating at a solemn pontifical mass at the Cathedral on Oct. 5. Archbishop Falconio will preside at solemn pontifical vespers in the evening, when a sermon will also be preached by Bishop Hickey of Rochester. Every Catholic church in the city will hold thanksgiving services. The New York Catholic Club will give a reception to Cardinal Vannutelli at 120 Central Park South.

On Tuesday evening, Oct. 4, the relics from the sixteen altars of the Cathedral will be removed to the Catholic College, Madison Avenue and Fifty-first Street, where they will repose all night, and will be watched by a guard of honor. Archbishop Farley will preside at this ceremony.

On Thursday, Oct. 6, the day following the consecration, will be held a grand votive mass of thanksgiving, which will be sung by the children of all the schools of the diocese.

Americans Home from Jamaica.

Nicholas R. Snyder, American Consul in Jamaica, and his wife arrived yesterday on the United Fruit steamship Almirante. He said that large crops were bringing prosperity to the island. The million-dollar hotel erected at Port Antonio to replace the one burned, he said, will soon be opened. Other arrivals on the Almirante were Dr. W. E. Deeks, of the Ancon Hospital, Panama; James C. Courts, Secretary of the Congressional Committee on Appropriations; Lieut. Eric Corson of the British Navy, and Mrs. John Ehrmann of Panama.

Police Get Summons Blanks.

Policemen throughout the city at 8 o'clock last night received from the lieutenants in charge at their stations small books containing summons blanks, which they will hereafter serve on all persons having proper identification cards who are arrested for speeding, violating the rules of the road, and other minor misdemeanors, instead of taking them as prisoners to the station. The persons so stopped and served will appear in court for a hearing at the time specified in the summons.

CITY PRISONS INSPECTED.

Hart's and Blackwell's Islands Visited by Prison Conference Delegates.

The penal institutions on Hart's and Blackwell's Islands and the new $500,000 Municipal Lodging House were visited yesterday by about forty delegates from foreign countries to the International Prison Congress to be held in Washington early next month. This afternoon at 4:30 o'clock the delegates will attend a reception by Acting Mayor Mitchel at City Hall, and to-night they will go to the Hippodrome, and later to a smoker at the City Club. To-morrow night they will leave on a special train to visit penal institutions of the State, going first to Elmira.

The delegates were met yesterday morning at the foot of East Twenty-sixth Street by Commissioner of Correction Patrick A. Whitney and Deputy Commissioner William J. Wright. They went first to Hart's Island on the Massasoit, visiting the reformatory, where delinquent boys were drawn up for their inspection. Mrs. Whitney, wife of the Correction Commissioner, presented to them an American flag.

Some delegates visited the branch workhouse, occupied by cripples, committed for minor offenses. Others went to old Potter's Field, now designated the City Cemetery.

A luncheon was served on the Massasoit on the way from Hart's to Blackwell's Island, where the penitentiary was visited. Some of the delegates thought the cells too narrow, too dark, and too cheerless.

Returning from Blackwell's Island at 4 o'clock, the delegates visited the new Municipal Lodging House, in East Twenty-fifth Street, of which they expressed a very high opinion. They knew of nothing to compare favorably with it in Europe.

BEGIN TO RAISE THE MAINE.

Col. Black Returns from Havana, Having Started the Work.

Col. William M. Black, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., who is President of the board of army engineers appointed by authority of an act of Congress to raise the wreck of the old battleship Maine, returned from Havana Thursday night. Col. Black was at his office in the Army Building, in Whitehall Street, yesterday. He said that it was certain that the wreck would be raised, and that work is actively under way.

Col. Black and Capts. Ferguson and Harper, who have charge of the work, met in Havana, and made plans for the preliminary work. Some persons who have studied the circumstances surrounding the sinking of the battleship believe that she sank as the result of an internal explosion, and not from coming in contact with a Spanish mine or other external cause, which is the general belief. This belief was so strong at the time of the explosion that it is supposed to have precipitated the war with Spain.

Col. Black said yesterday that the commission had received every courtesy at the hands of the Cuban Government, and that the Government had placed at the disposal of the engineers a complete apparatus with which to make the preliminary borings and soundings.

SAVE A MANIAC FROM DEATH.

Train Is Stopped Within Three Feet of Where He Lay on Tracks.

While looking for loiterers along the New York Central Railroad tracks at 113th Street and the Hudson River last evening Detectives Marx and Davis saw a man throw himself across the north-bound track just as the "Dolly Varden" express, north-bound to Spuyten Duyvil, bore down upon him.

Both detectives whipped out their handkerchiefs, and, running down the track, waved them in warning at the train, which rushed at undiminished speed toward him. Suddenly the engineer saw the detectives and threw on the brakes, stopping the train barely three feet from where the man lay.

The detectives tried to lift him, but he struggled furiously, and it required their efforts combined with those of the engineer and fireman and a policeman to tear him from the tracks. All the way to the West 125th Street Station he continued to struggle, kicking, biting, and striking at his captors.

Dr. Meiselas of the J. Hood Wright Hospital said the prisoner was insane and removed him to Bellevue Hospital, where he said he was William Brennan, a sailor, with no home. In his pocket the police found a memorandum book bearing the name "Alfred J. Winlock."

ADMITS HE'S NOT A SAINT.

Stableman Knew Betting Was Illegal—Dismissed for Being Off Duty.

Lawrence Cumaskey, formerly a stable foreman in the Street Cleaning Department, appeared yesterday in the Supreme Court to protest to Justice Whitney against his removal by Commissioner Edwards because he left his post to place bets on horse races at a nearby drug store.

"You know betting on horse races is illegal, don't you?" asked Edwards, who caught him off duty.

"I am aware of the fact, Commissioner, but we ain't all saints," replied Cumaskey.

"I appreciate that; but did you need to leave your post of duty to do it?"

"It's pretty hard if a man is tied down as strict as that."

Justice Whitney reserved decision on Cumaskey's plea for a writ of mandamus restoring him to duty.

CINCINNATI CUTS HER RECORD

Liner Will Clip Nine Hours from Her Best Time If Her Speed Continues.

The Hamburg American liner Cincinnati, incoming from Hamburg, is breaking her record across the Atlantic, according to wireless reports received by her agents, when she was 373 miles east of Sandy Hook at 2 P. M. yesterday. She should reach Sandy Hook at 2 P. M. to-day, making her time of passage 7 days 19 hours. Her best previous time was in September, 1909, when she crossed in 8 days 4 hours and 28 minutes. Passengers on the Cincinnati include:

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Goddard, Mr. Emil Boas, Resident Director and General Manager of the Hamburg-American Line; Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Wells, Miss Dorothy Wells, Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Gifford, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Bottomley, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Blossom, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Lafrentz, Mr. and Mrs. Percival E. Foerderer, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hollingshead, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Good, Mr. and Mrs. Christian Henrich and family, Mr. and Mrs. L. Weingarten, Newark, and Mr. and Mrs. B. Steiner.

CRY ALSO AGAINST FIFTH AVENUE SIGNS

Suggested That a Committee Pass on All Before They Are Erected.

ELIMINATING THE INARTISTIC

Ugly and Freak Signs Should Not Be Permitted, Architect Says—New Electric Wonder for Times Square.

Unsightly signs have been worrying those interested in beautifying Fifth Avenue as well as the property owners on Broadway in the vicinity of Times Square. The Fifth Avenue Association already has taken a decided stand against the erection of freak signs, electric or otherwise, in Fifth Avenue.

Robert Grier Cooke, President of that organization, said yesterday that on motion of Supreme Court Justice James W. Gerard the association had passed a resolution disapproving "of the construction and maintenance of unsightly electric or gas advertising signs, or signs of any other character on the roofs or against the walls, or affixed to any part of the premises of buildings on Fifth Avenue, or immediately adjacent thereto." He added:

"We are rather aiming at a strict regulation of signs than at their abolishment. We realize the value of signs, and that Fifth Avenue, as far as Fifty-ninth Street, is going to be a great business street. Advertising must come with business.

"The same careful consideration should be given to signs as to all other public accessories of business houses. The will of the majority should dominate. If a certain kind of sign is detrimental to the section then sign arrangements should be safeguarded.

"In this campaign we have tried to feel the pulse of the district. We have not only communicated with our own people, but with others affected not in our association. We have invited to our conferences representatives of other municipal organizations, who have pledged their support. At the present time our sub-committee is framing such legislation as seems to be practicable.

"There are at present few objectionable signs, and those who maintain them understand the sentiment prevailing.

"A leading architect of the city said:

"'I have always felt that signs and posters should be taxed, excluding, of course, signs to indicate the names and business of the owner or occupants of a building, but including signs for any other purpose. While I do not believe that we can suppress the evil we should be able to regulate and tax them, making them a source of income and preventing inordinate, unjustifiable, unsightly, and unwholesome abuse.'

"A large property holder on Fifth Avenue writes that he thinks matters should be referred to a committee to whom plans and designs should be submitted before the same are installed.

"The representative of a large jewelry house writes that he believes the prevalence of such signs would result in the removal of high-class houses and a serious loss to property owners. He thinks that only signs advertising the business of the premises whereon they are placed should be used.

"The association is trying to establish conditions on the most practical, as well as the most beneficial, basis for the majority. We do not want to antagonize legitimate interests, but we do feel that we are working for a section in which all citizens are interested."

The protest through THE TIMES against offensive signs and buildings in Times Square and elsewhere in Broadway has borne immediate fruit. Williams & Humbert, United States agents for the Perrier table water, had intended erecting a large electric sign in Times Square advertising the Perrier water. The sign was not to be unsightly, but designed to catch the business eye. A representative of the firm said yesterday, however, that after THE TIMES editorial and protests in the news columns the firm had decided to reproduce in its stead the Grand Fountain at Versailles. The undertaking will be one of the most expensive and difficult ever attempted in electric sign building, he said. The firm expects the sign to be far handsomer than first was intended, with the glaring advertising effect wholly eliminated. The firm is confident that the sign will interest a far larger number of refined people than a strictly commercial sign would.

SENT WOMAN FROM COURT.

Judge Angered by Her Admission That She Accepted Married Man's Attentions

Emile R. Siebold, a self-confessed thief, was before Judge Rosalsky of General Sessions yesterday for sentence. It was then learned that his counsel had been employed by a young woman to whom the prisoner was attentive before his arrest. Mrs. Burk, the probation officer, told the court that Siebold was married, and had a child, but had been living apart from his wife. Judge Rosalsky asked if the woman who had hired Siebold's lawyer was present. A well-dressed woman arose from a chair in the rear of the courtroom, and, walking to the witness chair, deposited a book she carried in her hand upon her lap, and awaited the Judge's questions.

"Do you know this man?" asked the Judge.

"Yes, I have known him for seven or eight months," she replied.

"Did he ever ask you to marry him?"

"No."

"Were you aware of the fact that he was married?"

"Yes, I was."

"Well, then, young woman, you get right up out of that chair, and walk out of this courtroom," said the Judge in anger. He then sentenced Siebold to the Elmira Reformatory.

The prisoner admitted stealing a watch from Mrs. Alice Pilzecker, with whom he had previously boarded.

MAY BUY GUNBOATS HERE.

Commander Olivera of Peru Inspects Our Shipyards.

Commander J. M. Olivera of the Peruvian Navy is staying at the Hotel Martinique. His visit to the United States may result in placing an order in this country for gunboats for that Government. They are to be used to police the rivers of Peru and protect the large industries there, especially the rubber plantations. Commander Olivera will visit the Brooklyn Navy Yard and several shipyards in Philadelphia before sailing for England next Wednesday.

"I have been commissioned by my Government," said the Commander yesterday, "to visit the navy yards here and in England, with the idea of studying the adaptability of gunboats to police the rivers of Peru. Nothing definite has been decided upon, and I am simply here to get ideas on the latest improved gunboats and the cost of building, and to look over the field in general."

SLAIN WHILE ASLEEP.

Hotel Keeper's Demented Son Suspected of Murdering His Father.

CHESTER, Penn., Sept. 16.—John J. Evans, proprietor of the Edgemont Hotel in this city, was murdered to-night while asleep in his room. His son Richard, aged 19, was arrested, charged with the crime, and is now in the county jail at Media.

Early in the evening Evans went to his room to lie down. As he did not return to the office at his usual time William Nickerson went to awaken him, and on entering the room beheld the pillow covered with blood and a gaping wound behind Evans's left ear. The police officials were at once notified and a physician was quickly summoned, but the latter reported that Evans had been dead for at least an hour.

Suspicion pointed to the son, who had been about the hotel early in the evening, but had not been seen for nearly two hours. Search was at once made for him, and he was found late to-night at Elwyn, a small town about three miles from this city.

Four years ago young Evans was injured about the head while playing football, and was later sent to the Elwyn School for Feeble-Minded Children for a short time, and returned to the hotel apparently much improved. Recently, however, the boy had acted strangely.

HAT THROUGH HOTEL WINDOW

An After-Season Straw Amuses the Breakfast Guests at the St. Regis.

During the breakfast hour at the Hotel St. Regis yesterday a straw hat came whirling through an open window from the terrace which fronts on Fifth Avenue. One of the waiters chased the hat and caught it on the fly. He was wondering what he would do with it, as the season for straw hats had closed, when a commotion was heard in the lobby.

"Did anybody see my straw hat?" a young man was asking the clerks. "It blew off my head as I was passing the hotel, and I am sure it must be around some place."

But try as the young man would he could not arouse any sympathy for his straw hat. He finally appealed to the porter, who smiled as he replied: "Get a derby!"

Just then the waiter appeared with the missing hat. The loser put it on and bravely continued his stroll down the avenue.

LOVE'S COMINGS

By AMELIE TROUBETZKOY

I

WHEN I was young, and wanton, wide-eyed Life
Teased me from sleeping, Love himself did come
Me to console and learn to dream awake.
With heavenly toys my pillow he bestrewed,
Gifts of Dame Venus in his babyhood:
The little mirror that had held her face;
A golden shoe that Pegasus had cast;
One of her dove's bright plumes; an irised edge
Broke from the shell she lay in at her birth;
A rose kissed open by immortal lips.
All night I with the pretty baubles played,
Then asked his name, not knowing him who he was.
"I am First Love," quoth he, and straightway fled.

II

Youth with First Love was gone and Life asleep,
But I lay wakeful, lonely even for dreams,
When one came suddenly, like a serving king,
And smoothed my pillow. Wonderful his eyes
As winter waters that enfold a star,
No baubles did he bring nor any rose,
But for a sceptre held a branch of thorns
Thick studded as with rubies. Trembling sore,
"Kind Lord," I questioned, "who art thou in truth?"
Then did he bend his sceptre to my breast:
"I am Last Love," he said, "and I remain."

TOPICS OF THE WEEK

An Apostle of Peace

MR. CARNEGIE does everything with so much zest, that one may easily be misled as to the relative amount of pleasure he derives from doing any given thing; but it is probably safe to assume that he never got half as much satisfaction from the mere act of money-getting as he now gets from despoiling himself of his surplus millions. When he isn't actively engaged in giving away money—and there must be moments in his fully-occupied leisure when he isn't actually signing cheques,—he fills in the time by writing essays or newspaper letters or delivering addresses in promotion of the cause of International Peace; and when Finis comes to be written at the end of his career, it will perhaps be found that by comparison with his devotion to this cause, even the building of libraries (at a cost of a hundred millions or so) was an avocation only, his real vocation being that of a propagandist of Peace.

Backing Up the President

I AM MINDED of this by the receipt of two recent documents from Mr. Carnegie's pen. One is a speech delivered at the Guildhall, London, on May 24th, at the annual meeting of the Peace Society, supplemented by a reply to the comment thereon of the Morning Post; the other, a leaflet, "War as the Mother of Valor and Civilization," issued by the same Society. The pamphlet is unreserved in its praise of President Taft's "flash of inspiration," when, in addressing the Peace and Arbitration Society in New York, last March, he advocated the submission of questions of national honor to international courts of arbitration. This was a step in advance of anything hitherto proposed by a man of the President's importance, and has done and will do very much to aid the cause of peace and good-will throughout the world. "No nation can dishonor another nation," says Mr. Carnegie, "and no man ever did or ever can dishonor another man, all honor's wounds being self-inflicted—" a fine phrase and a true one; and the writer pronounces Mr. Taft "among rulers the leader of the crusade against man killing man in war, as Lincoln became the leader in the crusade against the selling of man by man." It is quite possible that the founding of the Carnegie Hero Fund was merely an incident in the founder's crusade against War. By drawing attention to deeds of heroism in civil life, he doubtless aimed to confute the contention that Battle, Murder and Sudden Death are the sole begetters of human heroism.

A Diplomat Who Might be an Author

THE FACT that the Hon. Alvey Augustus Adee has been in the service of the State Department for forty years has been widely commented on lately, the anniversary of his appointment as Secretary of Legation at Madrid having fallen on the 9th inst. The Government has been felicitated on having so true and tried a servant, a man whose knowledge and experience render his services well-nigh indispensable. But what the Government has gained, literature has lost; for nothing but his absorption in the duties of his office has prevented Mr. Adee's becoming a well-known author. He is a scholar, a linguist, an accomplished writer and translator of verse, and one of the best prose writers in the country. Many, many years ago he contributed a long story to the old Putnam's Monthly, based on a plot or legend provided by his friend John Hay; and once in a great while he has been induced to write an essay for a magazine; but editors long since learned that he was the hardest man in public life to get anything from. As Chargé d'Affaires in Spain it was his privilege, in 1877, to introduce James Russell Lowell to the Court, then summering at La Granja. In later years, he wrote an introduction to Lowell's "Impressions of Spain." Mr. Hay was one of his oldest friends, as well as his departmental chief. His reminiscences would fill volumes of fascinating interest. But I doubt that they will ever be written. For one thing, Mr. Adee is a born diplomat, and has a holy horror of official indiscretion. For another, he would rather reread the classics than write a book that might fall below the very best of them in quality. Again, he is a very busy man for ten months of the year, and allows nothing to keep him away from his annual bicycle outings in France, in the early summer. So, having several times declined the Assistant Secretaryship of State, he will probably jog along quietly as Second Assistant Secretary for another four and twenty years, without ever finding time to record the recollections that would give him the reputation he could so easily win as an author.

A Novelist's Amazing Confession

HER reason for giving a happy ending to "Lady Rose's Daughter" is thus explained by Mrs. Humphry Ward in the new edition of her works in a way which throws an interesting side light on the author's appreciation of the fate of Julie's historical prototype, Mlle. de Lespinasse:

> At the bottom of my mind was the conviction that Julie would in truth have destroyed herself, whatever Delafield might do. But this conviction was met by another equally clear—that I no longer had the nervous energy wherewith to do it. The thought of Julie, ruined and dying of the wrestling with feeling and realization which lay before me if I was to bring home to myself first, and to my readers afterwards, a tale at all akin to that which appears in the letters of Julie de Lespinasse—presented itself to me, as the thought of another rock-face to climb might present itself to one already worn out in a wrestle with the mountains. I simply felt that it could not be done. The very thought of it haunted and terrified me. Deliberately, imagination turned to softer and easier things, and though I confess now that Delafield's interposition on the Paris journey, and all the later scenes of the book, involve, in truth, a forcing of the subject, a certain treachery to the artistic conscience, yet the relief and pleasure they gave me at the moment are not to be described.

This confession is as amazing as it is frank. It would be the easiest thing in the world to moralize on it, and to abuse the confessor for her weakness in following the line of least resistance, even though it involved an artistic sinning against the light. But as the confession is wholly voluntary, it must be regarded as having been made "without prejudice," as the lawyers say; and opposing counsel find themselves disarmed by the defendant's womanly plea.

A Scottish View of the Name "Mary"

CHAMBERS'S JOURNAL says that it cannot remember a book with a wicked Mary in it. An opportunity is thus given for some contentious Scotsman to open the whole question of Mary Stuart's character. Furthermore, there must be a good score of Jane Grey novels in which Mary Tudor is depicted in very dark shades; and who has ever defended "Mary, Mary, quite contrary"? And was it not Mary Beatrix of Modena who was "called a shocking bad name" by "William and [another] Mary, George and Anne," and by the entire Whig party?

MOTLEY AND HIS FRIENDS

Further Letters and Records Edited by the Historian's Youngest Daughter and Her English Husband

BISMARCK'S OLD SCHOOLMATE

An American Girl's Chronicle of Court Life at Home and Abroad

SOMEWHAT extended editorial notice has already been taken in these columns of the volume entitled "John Lothrop Motley and His Family,"[*] in which the historian's youngest daughter Susan, now the wife of Lt.-Col. Herbert St. John Mildmay, has culled from the family letter-box such an entertaining picture of life in the capitals of Europe in the period of our Civil War. The earlier notice dealt not with the historic picture so much as with that phase of the book which conveyed the fervor of Mr. Motley's patriotism, the burning zeal which the author of "The Rise of the Dutch Republic" felt and expressed for the Union cause, and his outspoken and sweeping condemnation of the other side as a wicked "insurrection of slave-holders," bent to destroy a "prosperous and happy commonwealth" and to "perpetuate a loathsome institution."

Upon that aspect of the book directly no more need be said here. But a curious side light is thrown upon Motley's failure to allow for the complexity of the motives of his Southern fellow-countrymen and their own lofty local patriotism by something else which his daughter's very charming and discreet volume reveals. This is the extremely tolerant attitude which this uncompromising democrat adopted toward Prussian absolutism embodied in the policies of his old friend and schoolmate at Göttingen, Prince Bismarck. The key to the seeming puzzle is found perhaps in the remark of Buckle to Mrs. Motley after he had read her husband's history. "It's hero-worship," he said; "but if one must have hero-worship, it is a gratification to have it so well done." Hero-worship—whether the hero is the cause or the man—involves an exaltation on one side which forces a depreciation on the other. None the less is Motley's attitude toward the iron military rule of his old college friend extremely interesting. Some of the most charming of the letters in the present volume are addressed by Motley to Lady William Russell. In one of them, dispatched in May, 1863, from Vienna, where he was American Minister, he writes:

> I am just now much interested in watching the settlement between Crown and Parliament in Berlin. By the way, Bismarck-Schönhausen is one of my oldest and most intimate friends. We lived together almost in the same rooms for two years—some ages ago when we were both juvenes imberbes. He is a man of great talent and most undoubted courage. He is the most abused man by the English newspapers I believe just now going, and I like him all the better for that.
> Don't believe a word of the rubbish you read. He is a frank reactionaire and makes no secret of it. Supports the King in his view that a House of Commons majority is not the Prussian form of government, whatever may be the case in England. I am a great Liberal myself, but I believe that Prussia is by the necessary conditions of its existence a military monarchy, and when it ceases to be that it is nothing. You as a despot ought to sympathize with Bismarck. We have got a little parliament here which we call a Reichsrath, and are as proud as Punch of it. It has worked two years admirably well, only the opposition members, who make up two-thirds of it, have never come, which makes it easier for the administration. I don't believe much in continental constitutionalism.

Being in Vienna just after "squeezing the poor Danes" out of Schleswig-Holstein—as, according to Mrs. Motley, he himself put it—Bismarck was often at the Motleys' house and sat and smoked and talked "English perfectly well" and charmed the whole family. A little earlier Motley had written to him asking him to come and adding whimsically: "But I forget. You are such a swell that you always take your king with you. Ego et Rex meus—like Cardinal Wolsey—and this is an impediment to smaller mortals like me." Still earlier—in 1858, soon after the publication of the "Rise of the Dutch Republic,"—

ITALIAN SCULPTURE IN EVOLUTION

A History that Reveals the Learning and Eclectic Taste of a British Nobleman

Besides the learning necessary to any proper treatment of so formidable a subject as the evolution of Italian art, Lord Balcarres possesses the great advantage of an eclectic taste which enables him to respect equally the masters of different periods and to discern merit in a creed outworn. His admiration, deep and sincere, for Michael Angelo, does not get in the way of an extremely sympathetic appreciation of Lorenzo Bernini, the antithesis in his technical methods and in his sentiment and mental bias of the impatient, brooding master of the sixteenth century. In a word, his concern is with art as an organic whole in which apparently diverse agencies and contradictory elements work together for harmony, movement and life.

In this admirably written and thoroughly illustrated volume* a really enormous amount of information is combined with much serious analysis and observation and illuminating comment. There is constant cross-reference and penetrating interrogation of the sources of superficially unrelated manifestations, nevertheless the text flows on with a fine freedom, and in the end the reader is left with the impression that the character of the book is genuinely synthetic, so skillfully are the isolated groups of phenomena combined and their interrelation shown.

The introductory chapter comprises a rapid survey of the influences which led to the emerging of sculpture in Italy, in the twelfth century, "as an organized and national entity," with Benedetto Antelami for its first great exponent; the tentative suggestion being thrown out that closer research will redirect the search for the origin and primitive essentials of Italian art to Rome itself and to Ravenna, "the Western counterpart of Constantinople." Following this is a section comprising several chapters on the progress of form from bas-relief to free-standing figures, and from free-standing to groups; thence to the final achievement of the equestrian statue. The author finds in Niccolo Pisano "the lineal descendant of the last of the sarcophagi" whose codification of the biblical scene and use of analysis in his work separates him from his predecessors. This differs radically from the view of him as a prodigy—a single star in the obscure heavens of early Italian art—frequently taken by students of his work; but it certainly is the only attitude toward genius to be tolerated in an age of reason. Passing over the interesting discussion of the gradual freeing of the figure from its background and the subsequent bringing together of the freed figures in homogeneous groups, and noting only casually selected points in the history of this development, we find especially rewarding the passages treating of Milanese reliefs, and those in which is drawn the contrast between Bernini and Michael Angelo. We have become in later years quite slavish in our devotion to the continuous silhouette and the partial emergence of the figure from the block of marble which gave to Michael Angelo's work its peculiarly poetic and suggestive character—peculiarities revived in part, though in so different a way, by Rodin. It therefore is wholesome to be swung into a more open mood by comments such as this:

> Bernini also made groups which technically can only be compared with those of Gian Bologna and Michael Angelo. The taste of the seventeenth century demanded something more agitated than the calm and majestic drama of the Cinquecento; the sentiment had to be full-blooded, movement was obligatory, drapery had to flutter in the imaginary breeze. Thus Bernini's groups express movement, while those of Michael Angelo, though full of action, are in repose. Aeneas staggering beneath the burden of the precious and somewhat heavy Anchises, and Bernini's other famous group at Rome, "Apollo and Daphne," represent plastic schemes in which unity of line and silhouette were out of the question; the cross-motive is of necessity introduced by the vigorous movement. Without a perfect mastery of statics and counterbalance, such groups would be impossible.

The single chapter on portraiture moves almost too rapidly for the reader who would like, for example, a fuller discussion of Pisanello's portrait medals, which here, as in the later section devoted to the art of the medalist, are dismissed with one or two sentences. Again, we get a word of enthusiasm for Bernini, whose portraits are contrasted with the monuments produced under the deadening influence of Louis XIV.'s egoistic ideals. Bernini's portraiture, the author reminds us, > represents one phase of reaction, and his appeal to nature was colored with romanticism. He returned to realities; and, theoretically, ought to have made more portraits than he did. Putting aside the series of tombs, it is in portraiture that he excelled. In this particular branch of sculpture his eclecticism was restrained; his respect for truth is shown in his habit of making the subjects of his portraits move about and engage in conversation, so as to seize the living face; and, finally, it is difficult to exaggerate his technical skill. Others who came later could rival his dexterity, but none could match his perfect mastery of material; few sculptors before or after Bernini could give marble the look and texture of skin. He did not die till 1680. His successors in portraiture preserved few of his high qualities, and exaggerated most of his shortcomings.

The second half of the volume is taken up with chapters on "Anatomy and the Nude," "Religious Thought All-Pervading," (in which Michael Angelo's mystic tendency is admirably defined as representing the mental attitude of a Quietest), "Plastic Embodiments of Religious Thought," "Secular Thought and Secular Form," "Classical Thought," and "Baroque." Nowhere does the author become perfunctory or obvious, although he occasionally is summary where less compression would be welcomed by the reader lacking Lord Balcarres's familiarity with the periods of which he writes. The book as a whole must be praised, however, as one of the most stimulating that has appeared on the always fascinating subject of Italian art.

JOURNEYING WITH ROOSEVELT

In a small paper-covered volume, John Callan O'Laughlan, one of the newspaper correspondents who met Colonel Roosevelt up the Nile and journeyed with him to Khartoum and Cairo, and then through Europe, publishes a vivaciously written narrative of his experiences, entitled "From the Jungle Through Europe with Roosevelt," (Chapple Publishing Co., Boston). His attitude toward the ex-President is that of the warmest admiration, and he frequently makes evident his conviction that Colonel Roosevelt's triumphal progress through Europe was quite the best thing for the United States that could possibly have happened. He thinks that it brought the American people "to a realization of the high position they occupy in the world's affairs." And he ends his book with this sentence: "He typified to Europe the greatness of the world power of the western hemisphere; and the American people should see that the standard he fixed shall not be lowered." The narrative is illustrated by a number of half-tones from photographs.

A STORY OF ADVENTURE

"Storm and Treasure," by H. C. Bailey (Brentano's,) deals with the insurrection of La Vendée, and, incidentally with long-lost hidden treasure. Its title, therefore, unlike that of many novels of the day, is really an indication of the contents of the book, which are stormy enough to satisfy the most exacting seekers of such sensations as come from adventure, peril, and blood. It is differentiated from the rest of its class by a certain French vivacity of dialogue, in which, by the bye, the clever Englishman, "Mr. Wild," excels. One becomes a little tired of both agony and epigram before the end is reached; but the story gives a faithful picture of perhaps the most terrible phase of the Revolution, and is, thus far, of historic value; while its mystery and its romance are well kept up to a happy conclusion.

STUDIES OF GERMAN HEADS

Pen-Portraits of Bismarck and Others by a Journalist Who Enjoyed the Chancellor's Confidence

By PERRY WORDEN

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—Whatever non-Germans may think of Bismarck, or however much the younger Schücking and his Socialist colleagues at home may seek to bare the already protruding thorn, that "Bismarck gave the Germans unity rather than liberty," there is no denying that the Iron Chancellor has continued to grow in popularity, not merely as one who enjoys wide esteem for exceptional gifts, but as the idol of thousands who, with or without reason, love the man and hail him as a genuine benefactor. This is true particularly, of course, in Prussia and in those German States most directly under Prussian influence, where the steadily pressing heel of the Hohenzollerns, though just as molding and just as destructive, is often attributed to the good God, nature, the perils of airships and the wicked heart of man; but even in the southern provinces, where the mention of Prussia provokes a grimace or a smile, memorials to Bismarck have cropped up year after year—not always, perhaps, as comely flowers so much as sturdy weeds. Some of these souvenirs of a stormy past, as the heroic stone figure of Bismarck overlooking the harbor of Hamburg, or the more delicately carved pillar surveying his battleground in Berlin, are among the triumphs of modern German art; while other memorials have added at least to the enormous and ever-increasing stock of the German book-trade. Not a few works on Bismarck have come to be classics in German literature; and with these must now be reckoned a part of the new essays entitled "Head Portraits,"* just given to the world.

Of all living Germans few, if any, may talk of Bismarck in the first person as Harden does, and, what is more, Harden is well aware of the fact, and banks upon it. Long years ago—so it seems, at least, when one considers all the topsy-turvying and rearrangements of political furniture by the young Emperor, who so summarily deposed Bismarck—Harden was sent as a reporter to the autocrat of Varzin, and the latter, instead of unchaining his bulldogs, or himself devouring him, as he was known to do with others, invited him to hearth and board—much perhaps as he did with Grund, the American correspondent in Berlin, who boasted, I believe, that Bismarck received him for the first newspaper interview he had granted in eight or ten years. Not only this, but Bismarck—discovering, undoubtedly, in the young man exceptional talent—took Harden to his bosom, and it was not long before the future editor of The Future (Die Zukunft) had merely to dash up to the almost imperial headquarters of the Prime Minister to have every portal thrown open, the while other correspondents looked on wistfully from the lawn under the trees.

Having thus favored him beyond all precedent in Prussian journalism, it was natural that Bismarck should grow as an idol in the estimation of the rising journalist; that all that Bismarck did and said, and all who pulled with him, should be lauded to the skies, and that when Bismarck fell Harden should give no quarter to those who opposed or criticised his standard bearer. In the case of some men such adulation and partisanship would be sufficient to condemn their writings and prevent a sympathetic hearing; but not only is Harden one of the really brilliant German journalists of today, but, as has been observed, he can talk of Bismarck as no other can. And apparently he has not yet exhausted his store of anecdote; so that when you chance upon him in the smoky corner of some wine room, his own thoughtful Kopf resting meditatively on his hand, and he begins, "When I clinked my glass to that of Bismarck at Friedrichsruh," you are sure that he is going to tell you of some spouting champagne other than the last, and that he has rarer vintages in his capacious cellar.

Like Moritz Busch, the Bismarck biographer, whose visit to your metropolis, years ago, many New Yorkers will recall, and who (apropos of "Americans who had cold meals on Sunday, as did Bismarck at Frankfort"), testified to Bismarck's simplicity of manner and living, Harden bears witness to both his idol's plainness and his steadfast religious faith. Besides the essays dealing with Bismarck and his associates in Deutschland's great drama, there are good papers on Ibsen, Zola and others, in forcible yet fluent speech, and all set in choice German typography. One or two peculiarities of style now and then halt the reader or recall the short-stop idiosyncrasy of the American journalist, Joe Howard.

Discussing Bismarck as he was, Harden, though full of praise, says that men have made no end of mistakes in attributing to the great German qualities and virtues that he never had—whispering of him almost fabulously as one who knew everything, weighed everything carefully in advance, and never stumbled. So it may seem through the glasses of the average citizen, just as Börne saw Goethe. The fact is that, though most of his life in a soldier's uniform, Bismarck never could rely on himself to adjust all his epaulettes and other trappings properly. What he had was personality, and that in the highest relief. Bismarck thought, spoke, and wrote as no other man of his time. Therefore it is silly to compare him with any one else—even Gladstone, as Crispi did in his somersault to flatter the Prussians; for Bismarck was himself quite independent of Gladstone, who was a good deal of a flirt with politics as well as the muses. This Bismarckian personality developed more and more like adamant, as was shown in his reply to the Emperor, who objected to the Windthorst interview and "forbade" any repetition of it: "The authority of my sovereign ceases in the drawing-room of my wife!" The virtues of this lady are drawn with a sympathetic hand. But once in the gallery of Parliament, she concerned herself solely with his domestic wants, and the only trace of a thunder cloud on their horizon ever observed by Harden was due to Bismarck's discovery one day that she had been distributing religious tracts to the workmen on the place. She died while the Iron Chancellor sat holding her frail hand and sobbing like a child. He afterward declared: "The flower of my life has vanished away."

The aged Emperor receives his meed of praise as one who, in a period where there was a tendency to get away from monarchialism, elevated the office again to power and honor; while Harden's estimate of the present Kaiser, at least in his relations with Bismarck, is shown by his dwelling upon the young Emperor's dismissal of Bismarck, and his telegram to Weimar, when he declared that Almighty God had ordained that he should take the helm of state, concluding with the memorable sentences: "The course remains the same as before. Full steam and forward!" But Harden deals no less gently with Emperor William than with the Kaiserin Friedrich. She was English, persisted in remaining English, tried to conform the Court and all it controlled to English patterns, and in so seeking relied on her sovereign station and her sex. There came a day of judgment, however, when the Re-former of the German states found that he required other building material, and the Kaiserin fell.

THE FARMER'S WIFE

In the Young Farmer's Practical Library Series, whose general editor is Ernest Ingersoll, the latest issue is intended solely for the farmer's wife. "From Kitchen to Garret" (Sturgis & Walton Co., 75 cents) is by Virginia Terhune Van de Water, a daughter of Marion Harland. It is in the nature of a succession of helpful, intimate talks on housewifery with the farm or village woman of moderate means, and aims to show her how she can make her housekeeping at once daintier and more efficient. The sixteen chapters deal separately with the care of the several parts of the house—the cellar, the bedroom, the living room, closets, the boys' room, and so on—and with the duties associated therewith. It is thoroughly practical, and while it makes no reference to the modern movement which bases household tasks upon science and makes of the housemother's duties a scientific calling, its spirit and much of its matter entirely accord with that propaganda. Most housewives, of the classes for whom the book is intended, will find it full of suggestions for simplifying their work and making their homes more pleasant and, what is quite as important, they can hardly fail to get from its pages a larger, nobler view of the importance and worth of their daily labors.

GLADSTONE'S CORRESPONDENCE

Two volumes giving "The Ecclesiastical and Religious Correspondence of Gladstone," edited by D. C. Lathbury, will be published this month by The Macmillan Co. This work does not include all of the letters written by Gladstone on religious subjects, but generous selections have been made by the editor from documents which have until now been difficult of access. The work will be illustrated.

BEGINNINGS OF ENGLISH HISTORY

A Summary by Prof. Oman of Latest Delvings Into the Records Before the Roman Conquest

By JOSEPH JACOBS

THIS is the first volume, though the fourth issued, of what promises to be, for a good while to come, the standard history of England. Special research in English history has become so voluminous and minute that it is virtually impossible for any one man to write a complete history of England from its beginning to the present day. The days of Hume or Lingard are over. On the other hand, it is virtually impossible for the ordinary reader to try and get his English history in instalments from the specialists on the various periods. Froude, Gardiner, (and Firth,) and Macaulay take about thirty volumes to cover less than two centuries. The obvious compromise is to get each well-defined section of the history dealt with by a specialist on some uniform plan, and this is the method adopted in the series edited by Prof. Charles Oman. This is to deal with the whole subject in seven reasonably-sized volumes, of which those relating to the Norman, the Tudor, and the Stuart periods have already been favorably commented upon in these columns.

Prof. Oman, the editor of the series, who has undertaken its first volume,* devoted to England before the Norman Conquest, is one of the most distinguished of the Oxford School of historians trained under the late Bishop Stubbs. He has begun an elaborate history of the art of war during the Middle Ages; has nearly completed a minute history of the Peninsular War, and has contributed to a series on general European history similar to the present one, a volume on the Dark Ages, dealing with much the same period in European history as he deals with here with regard to England.

It may be said at once that he has been signally successful in dealing with this, the most obscure portion of English history. Though not so brilliantly written as the volume contributed to this series by Mr. Trevelyan, or as original in research as that of Mr. Davis, it vies with both in accuracy of detail, in thoroughness of treatment, considering the scale, and in soundness of judgment. The author's task was the most difficult of all. The sources for this early part of English history are very meagre. A short account by Caesar, a pamphlet by Tacitus, Bede's Ecclesiastical History, and the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle almost exhaust the list, though these are supplemented by a few inscriptions, a number of coins, and some scattered notices in the classical and mediaeval chronicles. Prof. Oman has also made good and new use of the sparse information to be obtained in the early Irish, Welsh, and Icelandic annals.

Notwithstanding all these aids he has found it almost impossible to give a very connected account of English history before Alfred. Milton contemptuously referred to this part of history as mainly consisting of "battles of kites and crows." It takes all Prof. Oman's pains to make much more of it. His large acquaintance with contemporary history of the European Continent enables him at times to throw light on purely English events by what was happening abroad. Thus he brings the seemingly disconnected invasions of the Norsemen into a connected series by pointing out that in the years when they did not touch England they were attacking Ireland or Normandy.

Prof. Oman begins his account with two chapters devoted to the history of the country before historic records begin. He sums up, in his first chapter, the results of pre-historic archaeology derived from the opening of the long and the round barrows, which contain the remains of the earlier inhabitants of Britain. Curiously enough the race that buried their dead in long barrows were dolichocephalic or long-headed, while those who interred in round barrows were brachycephalic or round-headed. The former used stone tools and weapons, the latter were men of the bronze age. These were succeeded by three waves of Celtic invaders: the Goidels, who also swarmed over into Scotland and Ireland; the Britons, who ultimately became the Welsh; and the Belgians, who poured into the south-eastern part of the island. Pytheas, a Greek traveler in England in the fourth century B. C., calls it the Pretanic Isle, from which the experts in Celtic tongues deduce the name of Britain as meaning the Land of Painted, or Tattooed, men. These Britains had adopted a coinage from the Macedonians as early as the second century B. C., and had acquired considerable skill in coining.

With Caesar Britain emerges into the light of history, and Prof. Oman has henceforth a fairly familiar tale to tell. But he is enabled to put new aspects on old facts by using the results of the latest researches, as those of Mr. Rice Holmes on Caesar's invasion and of Prof. Haverfield on the later Roman Conquest. Caesar's invasion was by no means so successful as he pretended. He was virtually repulsed in his first attack and failed in the second to obtain the booty and slaves which were the main object of his visit.

It is curious to find that one of the main reasons for Boadicea's rising was the pressure put upon British landowners by Roman money-lenders, among whom was the celebrated philosopher Seneca, who called in debts amounting to no less than ten million sesterces. Prof. Oman's intimate acquaintance with the history of the art of war enables him to make much more clear the intricate details of the campaigns of Suetonius and Agricola, especially by using the recently acquired knowledge of the names of the legions employed in holding down Britain. This, too, enables him to give a clear account of the object and method of Hadrian's Wall. The end of the Roman Empire in Britain is more clearly explained by Prof. Oman than by his predecessors, owing to his intimate acquaintance with the history of the later Roman Empire, and the causes which withdrew the legions from Britain.

With the coming of the English to England a comparatively connected story begins, though in the early stages the connection is often broken and the attention of the reader is distracted by trying to follow the various fortunes of the kinglets who ruled over different sections of the heptarchy. The narrative here contrasts unfavorably in regard to clearness with that of J. R. Green in his "Making of England." But it is to be remembered that Green is working on a larger scale and allows himself much greater freedom of conjecture. It is curious, by the way, to find how few of Green's conjectures have established themselves. The progress of the study of Old English has also contributed to give firmer footing in this part of the history, especially through the excellent work of W. H. Stevenson on the charters and of Plummer on the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle. The struggle for hegemony between Mercia, Northumbria, and Wessex is brought out clearly by Prof. Oman. It was the Danes who gave the precedence to Wessex by breaking the power of the other two competitors. In two admirable chapters the social and political history of the early English kingdoms is sketched by Prof. Oman on the basis of the recent researches of Chadwick and Vinogradoff. A later chapter does much the same for the vikings, explaining the reasons why they had to resort to piracy in England, Ireland, and Normandy.

Prof. Oman is at his best in dealing with the heroic figure of Alfred the Great, making admirable use of the researches produced by the Alfred Millenary. In particular he brings out more clearly than has hitherto been done Alfred's reorganization of the English army system, which enabled him ultimately to keep the Danes at bay. He has done similar good work in explaining consolidation under Cnut. For the reign of Edward the Confessor and that of Harold there was not much room for improvement on Freeman, but Prof. Oman strikes a novel note in maintaining against all his predecessors that the Norman Conquest did little to advance the progress of England in civilization. Even in architecture a beginning had been made before William the Conqueror, which developed into the so-called Norman arch without any further impetus from the Continent. This occurred in Scotland, and would probably have happened in England. What was virtually the feudal system existed in England before the Conquest, as is shown by the "common form" of Domesday for tenures both before and after the Conquest; while the character of the English Earls and Archbishops compare favorably with that of most of the barons and many of the ecclesiastics who followed William. Prof. Oman here makes good use of the superior artistic quality of the later Anglo-Saxon coins as compared with the short pennies of Henry II. and his sons. Altogether an ingenious case is made out from a novel point of view.

If, therefore, the reader wishes to have, in a comparatively short compass, the latest results of historic research on the history of England before 1066 he cannot do better for the present than acquire Prof. Oman's volume on this period.

EUROPEAN GUIDE-BOOKS

IMPORTED by George Edmund Platt, the Ward, Lock & Co. guide-books, half a dozen in number, are issued in new editions, with considerable revision and some additions to their illustrations. They offer the intending traveler instruction and advice as to "Switzerland," "Belgium," "Holland," "Paris," "London" and "Stratford-upon-Avon." Each book contains a large, folding map of the region under consideration, and smaller maps and plans of cities, parks and gardens, museums and galleries. Each is copiously illustrated also with views of cities, scenery and famous buildings and reproductions of masterpieces of art. All are written with the middle-class English traveler mainly in mind, but a sideward glance of the eye occasionally takes in the American or the Continental. There are interesting prefatory glances at the general subject, and scattered through the book are bits of history and helpful items of information. The arrangement of routes, directions for side trips and discussions of expenses are explicit, brief and clearly expressed. The volume devoted to London is quite comprehensive and detailed, although the author laments the impossibility of squeezing a hogshead into a pint measure. He has dealt fully, however, with the West End and the City, and has outlined all the principal excursions.

MINISTERIAL REMINISCENCES

AN ENGAGING combination of deep spiritual faith, religious feeling, common sense, and humor fill the pages of "Along the Trail of the Friendly Years," (Fleming H. Revell Co., $1.50,) by the Rev. William E. Hatcher, author of "John Jasper." The reminiscences are those of a man whose feeling toward the past is well expressed by the adjective "friendly." Born in the early thirties of the last century, in the Virginia countryside, his memories of boyhood and early manhood have the curious, other-world flavor of that old, dead time before the gulf in our National life which was made by the civil war. During the war he was pastor of a church in Manchester, Virginia, across the river from Richmond, and he gives many vivid pictures of those days as they looked to the people of the South. There are anecdotal accounts of his pastorates in Petersburg and Baltimore, and of the twenty-six years, from 1875 to 1901, during which he was in charge of the Grace Street Baptist Church of Richmond. It is a very human sort of book, and has interest which is to be found always in the revelations of real human experience.

By MARY E. WALLER

An American novel of great interest, the strongest book produced by the author since "The Wood-Carver of 'Lympus," now in its 26th printing.

"Flamsted Quarries" is a powerful exposition, through characterization, of present-day conditions of American life—social and industrial. The heroine is the child of Irish immigrants and the scenes of the book are laid in New York and at the granite quarries of Maine.

As in "The Wood-Carver of 'Lympus" Miss Waller emphasizes the nobility and dignity of work and its healing power, and gives a true story of self-sacrifice and love.

NOT ALL MEN ARE POETS

A List of Ten Recent Followers of the Muse Shows an Average of Achievement and Failure

ALMOST anyone can write a volume of verse nowadays, and, more than that, can get it printed. The ten books* on our list might, so far as marked individuality of thought, feeling or expression go, have all been written by one man, and he any one of the ten authors whose names appear on the different title pages. The rules of procedure have been acquired with about equal proficiency, and lyrics, odes and sonnets run neatly down the pages, addressed to practically the same themes of life and love and joy and sorrow, to dead heroes and writers, to their works or their deeds. Neither is nature in her various aspects neglected, but comes in for a fair share of tinkle and strum. The result being that each of the books contains about the same quantity of pretty lines, pretty fancies, a deeper note now and again, with here and there lapses from form that witness to the fact of the verses being hand-made and not turned out by machinery.

"Reveries,"* by Mr. Hult, reveals the author as not possessing any very satisfactory faith as to the why and wherefore of life, and doubtful on many other subjects that make him uncomfortable even to sadness; though he lets a few hopeful gleams shimmer through his lines now and then. There are a good many sonnets, a few longer poems, and some lyrics interspersed. Occasionally Mr. Hult gets his line a bit tangled, as where he writes:

* * * wondering why still burns
The white light not that cheered him on the road.

Occasionally, too, he yields to a false simplicity which produces a disheartening impression of silliness, as in the following:

I would I were a little wave,
Some brooklet's in the valley,
The lush and lusty grass to lave
And with the flowers to dally.

To madly waltz o'er deep and shoal
With endless song and laughter;
To feel the same wild thrill of soul,
Before the ball and after.

There are the usual sonnets on Keats, Homer, and lines "after reading" this or that, and all of it is very nicely done indeed.

In Mr. Cameron's "Poems"* we have a simple little collection of songs on the vague and sometimes lovely thoughts that idle through the brain, charming bits of verse with an English stamp, and utterly without pretentiousness. We quote the first stanza of "Song Before Sailing":

Here's to the lads that fight for the King!
Here's to the Highlanders, kilts aswing!
Here's to the boys from the Only Isle,
Who would die for the sake of their country's smile.
Here's to our comrades whose courage glows
Brave as their emblem, the English rose!
Shout till the rafters are ringing,
Here's to our luck,
Here's to our pluck,
On the road we must take to-morrow.

Written in another mood is the last poem in the book, "Vale!":

Welcome the end of the passing year
With a smile and a sigh.
Old things are vanishing, new things appear;
Old friends are leaving us, new friends are near.
Welcome the end with a smile as ye cry,
Let him die!

Watch for the end of the passing year
With a smile and a sigh.
New things are misty, but old things were clear;
New friends are strange, and the old friends were dear.
Sigh as ye watch for the end, as ye cry,
He must die!

"Verse Pictures"* is also an English book, and a gentle, winning atmosphere breathes through it, the short poems expressing in flowing meter those varying emotions that seem to beg to be turned into just such musical and minor lines as make up the small volume. We give the first stanza of "When?" which reveals the writer's special charm of diction and fancy as well as any in the collection:

You came like music in a silent room,
Peace after conflict, pleasantness for strife,
Rest after uphill walking, light in gloom,
Release of tension, and new lease of life.
You came like medicine to heal my pain,
And you are gone. When will you come again?

In "the Triumph of Love"* the author has set himself to high matters, singing of love working through nature and man to ultimate ends of good. The conception has evidently stirred him, but it requires a greater lyre than his to bring to other ears the full diapason of sound and meaning he strives to convey. Mr. Allen has not as yet achieved the power of writing poetry, howsoever finely he may manage to think it. His contributions are all long and cannot be quoted entire, so we choose the following fragment as an indication of his work:

ROSE OF PARADISE.

O Rose! thou wert waste and wild;
But now thou art wild no more.
Long, long hast thou striven, exiled
From Eden's primeval store,
Without the blaming of earth or skies,
To be, as thy passionate instinct cries,
God's Rose of Paradise.

"The Death of Maid McCrea"* contains two tragedies in the form of unrhymed narrative verse, and the book is dedicated to the D. A. R. The lines move smoothly and easily, and tell, in the first person, two connected incidents of Indian warfare in the days when the British made the red men their allies. The tales are romantic, sad, and quite interesting enough to warrant putting them into the form Mr. Auringer has chosen, and which he proves himself capable of handling agreeably.

In Mr. Day's "New Poems"* we have a collection like many another that the busy poets are turning out. There are sonnets to Dante, lines to John Henry Newman, verses to nature and to pagan gods, to memory, to most of the well-used and oft-sung topics. They witness to the fact that their transcriber has mastered the rules, and can pen you a rhyme while you wait. We quote "On the Shore," partly because it is short, and also because it is an example of the economy of method which marks many a modern versifier:

Only the sea and the sky;
Only the sun and strand.
No other scene is nigh.
Alone with the sea am I;
Alone on the surf-plowed sand.

Only the sea and sky;
Only the sun and strand.
One other scene is nigh:
God, and before mine eye,
The universe poured from His hand.

Possibly there may have been more "scene" behind the poet's back, but after all we have no regret that there are not other stanzas recording it.

"Hyllus"* is a Greek legend, which, so the author tells us, is "for the purposes of this drama arranged as follows"—and thereupon he tells the story very clearly and succinctly in a couple of pages of prose. After these, however, come many pages of blank verse, where every one of the ten characters or character groups gets the chance to hold forth in lengthy speeches that sound solemn and portentous and full of words, but which do not, come to think of it, amount to such a vast deal. Hyllus is cursed by Venus for lèse majesté with the desire for the unattainable, a desire that brings him and his once-loved Iole and his fond mother to misery and death, and distresses the priest and other personages of the drama, even causing the dryads and nereids to mourn after their fashion. There is good work in the book, yet it fails to touch the reader with any sense of actuality.

Another book that returns to ancient days for its inspiration is Mr. Hinckley's "Poems."* The first and major part of the volume is taken up by a play in blank verse, "Caesar's Wife." The short drama contains lines of real dignity, and does not leave the reader with that uncomfortable conviction conveyed by much modern blank verse, namely, that it is a ground on which fools rush boldly in while angels stand aloof. Besides this play there is a soliloquy by Savonarola that is imaginative and fine of feeling, a dialogue between Oberon and Titania, and a number of shorter poems. Mr. Hinckley is at his best in his longer work, but we have only space for the short "Vesper."

Thy shaft of light is like a temple key
That opens souls. The wings of thy sweet beams
Beat dewy odors on the hearts to be Partakers of the peace of love in dreams.

And peace to me, dear Star, thou whisperest
From the soft loveliness of rosy heights,
Ere yet into the bosom of the west
The day is folded, and the world is night's.

My heart goes with thee as I hear thy lay,
Chief minstrel of the singing spheres above,
Swan of the twilight, song of dying day,
That sailest the eternal mere of love.

The book as a whole, if it contains nothing of passion, reveals a reverence for beauty and a sense of harmony, and is worth knowing.

"Paestum and Other Poems"* is an imposing looking volume, but the verse that fills it is not strong meat, even for babes. It is pleasant enough, however, and contains, besides the title poem, addresses to the forest of the Sierras, an Inauguration Ode dedicated to the American people, with lines expressing homage and admiration to Shelley, Keats, Homer, and Lincoln. Altogether one feels that a good deal of time and labor have been spent upon the volume. We quote herewith one of the sonnets, of which there are a fair number:

WITH BURNING HEARTS.

With burning hearts forever we aspire
To pour love's precious metal, like pure gold,
Within the lips of life's immortal mould,
And though our hands have shaken with desire
And spilled some drops, and failed to make entire
The perfect image; even so, behold,
We are life's artisans! The world were cold
But that our hearts have burned with such a fire.

And since for beauty's sake my soul hath burned,
Though I the perfect mould may never fill,
Yet shall I feed that fire, with fire, until,
When the great Master's hand hath overturned
The clay, perchance in these poor drops I spill
Shall be my hope; and I may not be spurned.

We make a happy ending to our list with one of Mr. Bangs's clever and amusing books.* It is marked with the same blythe spirit, easy flow of line and rhyme, and philosophy as cheerful as it is simple, that have made this author so popular. We quote the poem "Melancholy" as expressing as well, if no better than the rest, Mr. Bangs's special talent:

Melancholy,
Melancholy,
I've no use for you, by Golly!
Yet I'm going to keep you hidden
In some chamber dark, forbidden,
Just as though you were a prize, Sir,
Made of gold, and I a miser—
Not because I think you jolly,
Melancholy!
Not for that I mean to hoard you,
Keep you close and lodge and board you,
As I would my sisters, brothers,
Cousins, aunts, and old grandmothers,
But that you shan't bother others
With your sniffling, snuffling folly,
Howling,
Yowling,
Melancholy!

"SCOTTISH EDUCATION"

IN A GOODLY volume of more than 400 pages John Kerr, of Trinity College, Cambridge, formerly senior Chief Inspector of Schools and Training Colleges in Scotland, presents a history of "Scottish Education, School and University" (Cambridge University Press—G. P. Putnam's Sons, $2), from the twelfth century to the present time. It is a scholarly work that traces the development of education in Scotland in sufficient detail to give the complete story that the specialist demands, although the narration is made with enough of interesting comment and of attention to the contemporary social background to give it considerable general interest. The multitudinous changes which have taken place since 1906 are treated concisely in a series of short appendices by experts.

"THE VARMINT" IN ENGLAND

OF Mr. Johnson's story "The Varmint," recently published by The Baker & Taylor Co., and now coming out in a new edition, the English novelist, W. J. Locke, writes: "My admiration of the book is frank and sincere, and it is shared by a very cultivated and fastidious friend, a high Government official, who read the book last week-end which he was spending with me in the country."

A Romance of the Civil War

By

Margaret E. Sangster in a letter to the publishers, D. Appleton & Co., said: "Accept my sincere congratulations on the publication of Mr. Chambers's striking novel. The love story is told with the author's consummate skill. He is a master in this line of fiction. As a resident of Brooklyn in 1861, I know every inch of the ground and every heart throb of the place and the hour which are AILSA PAIGE'S background. I have been living over the past in this wonderful book."

ROBT. W. CHAMBERS

RECENT BOOKS FOR THE YOUNG

Chiefly by Hands That Have Become Proficient in the Art of Producing Them

IT IS a curious fact that though a boy sometimes condescends to like mildly the "best books" written for his special reading, he almost invariably loves to distraction the second and even third best. The truth of the matter is that melodrama in some form is what the natural boy—young or old—prefers instinctively. Robert Louis Stevenson knew this when he wrote that shameless melodrama, "Treasure Island"—a book which to-day enjoys the distinction of standing practically alone in the schools as popular "required reading." In comparison, the books of youthful adventure to be reviewed here—largely intended for boys in their teens—are of mild flavor and hardly in the "thriller" class. Still, though they concern themselves with everyday matters (athletics, hunting and out-of-door fun generally) and invariably have a really commendable hero—yet each story wisely holds enough of melodrama to leaven the lump.

Every boy over twelve who read Edwin L. Sabin's "Bar B Boys" of last year, will probably ask that its sequel "Range and Trail" (T. Y. Crowell & Co., $1.50) be one of his Christmas presents this year. For Mr. Sabin has the magic wherewith to weave a story of sound ethics and clean-cut style, which yet can thrill and delight the boyish heart as surely as the wildest dime novel. In his latest book we meet again Phil and Chet, several of those delightfully wicked hangers-on of the old Bar B ranch, as well as some equally interesting new characters—to dwell with them for the moment in that enchanted adventurous West which Mr. Sabin can make so vivid to us. This time Phil reaches the ranch at Christmas and learns to care for stock during the cold, snowy months. Later, he shares in the herding and driving, and comes in for all the rollicking good times of ranch life, indoors and out.

"The Wireless Station at Silver Fox Farm," (T. Y. Crowell & Co., $1.50,) is a good story for older boys, and has a novel setting. Its author, James Otis, has been pleasing youthful readers for a good many years now, and his hand has lost none of its cunning in setting forth the history of young Paul, who guarded his father's valuable Russian fox farm from robbers. This the boy does mainly by the aid of a little wireless telegraph system, one end of which is stationed on the mainland in charge of his chum, and the other on Barren Island, where he has care of the foxes. One learns by the way some interesting things about the breeding of these animals for their pelts, as well as a great deal about the workings of "wireless." The narrative itself is straightforward and interesting.

Boys who are eager to know something of hunting and fishing on the Florida coast, will find pleasant reading in "By Reef and Trail," by Fisher Ames, Jr. (Chas. Scribner's Sons.) For the author has the happy trick of so interweaving the instructive portions of his book with the lively adventures of the boy, Bob, that the two patterns become virtually indistinguishable. Bob, who is drawn from life, has a pair of eyes to see things which escape most people, and never was there a lad who was on more intimate terms with the ways of tarpon, giant ray, egrets, wild turkeys, loggerheads and all manner of curious creatures frequenting the Florida coast. It seems almost a pity that Mr. Ames found it necessary to tack on a conventional closing chapter about hidden treasure; but then he no doubt considered that few boys have ever been heard objecting to that particular condiment in fiction-making.

"Tim and Ray in Camp," by Frank Pendleton (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co., $1.50), recounts the adventures of two boys whose uncle takes them on a long hunting and camping trip. As he has been a trapper for many years, he is able to guide them skillfully and make everything altogether grown-up and realistic. Though there is much rich material here, in the capital camp-fire stories as well as in the boys' own adventures; but the style of the book is heavy and awkward. Tim and Roy, for instance, rarely talk like real boys, and the uncle is given (sporadically) to speaking in a German-translation manner—such as "Upon the bark fasten these green branches." If it were not for its top-heavy style the narrative would be more interesting.

Though a story about college boys seems to call for a free use of slang in order to make things natural, yet in the case of Norman Brainerd's "Winning the Eagle Prize" (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co., $1.25), there is hardly enough realism to make up for the large doses of slang set on every page. Nevertheless the book, which is the second of the Five Chum Series, holds a lively conventional story of a boys' military school, with a thoroughly plucky hero. This lad, who works his way through college against great odds—the greatest being his own high temper and lazy nature—comes out on top eventually in every fight, according to prescribed rules. The plot throughout is of the "made-in-Germany" order; but there be boys who prefer this brand to any other.

Something of genuine college spirit seems to come from the pages of "Larry Burke, Freshman," by Frank I. Odell (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co., $1.25). Here one finds neither an abnormal amount of slang nor English stiff in the joints, but the straightforward, if free-and-easy talk of most half-grown American college men. Larry himself is the same all-'round good fellow, from the days of his initiation into fraternity secrets, when he faithfully tries to "cuckoo every hour" and "scramble like an egg," up to his last moment as a freshman. And in his various classmates there are some convincing and attractive characters. It cannot be said that this book is one of those of college life which will attract the lay reader, but its stories about baseball, football, ice-hockey, track and field sports tend to make any boy long to go to college, and many an old "grad" wish he might be there once more.

Compared with some modern boys' stories of the sea, "A Cadet of the Black Star Line" (Charles Scribner's Sons), by Ralph D. Paine, is not likely to hold the interest either of younger or older lads. It is too mature in style for the one and too obvious in plot for the other. The story is about a "cadet" on an ocean liner who has a hard time roughing it, both on board ship and in various trying adventures away from it. The gradual toughening of fibre in the boy—strengthening of body and humbling of spirit—is fairly well brought out for older readers; but the sentimentalism that pervades much of the narrative will hardly please the boyish appetite.

The older boys' book is often quite free of sentimental matters, but the book for older girls is as frequently marked by a pair of lovers who live happily ever afterward. In "Dorothy Brooks's Vacation" (T. Y. Crowell & Co., $1.50), Frances Campbell Sparhawk has given us a sort of hybrid story, in that it may equally interest both sexes. There are both boys and girls crowded into the two big automobiles, which go spinning along country roads to adventures dear to the heart of most youth, as well as to the adventure of a real grown-up (and sentimental) love tale. The ruling spirit, however, being Dorothy herself, with her love of fair play and the courage to "stand on her own feet on her own ground," the book may prove wholesome enough reading for young people generally.

CHURCH HISTORY

Two works in Christian History lie before us. One, Dr. David S. Schaff's "The Middle Ages" (1294-1517), in the monumental series of volumes begun by his late father (Charles Scribner's Sons, $3.25). The other is "The Development of Christianity," by Dr. Otto Pfleiderer (B. W. Huebsch, $1.50). The two volumes illustrate very different ways of writing history. Dr. Schaff follows the general plan and style of Dr. Philip Schaff's work, already very familiar to students. The present contribution (Part II of Vol. II) completes the history of the Middle Ages in a direct, readable narrative, with abundance of reference to original sources. Little attempt is made at philosophical interpretation. The result is an excellent compendium for the general reader, and an admirable handbook for the special student. In Prof. Pfleiderer's "Development of Christianity," following his "Christian Origins" and "Religion and Historic Faiths," facts are dealt with only as illustrating ideas and their development. The magic word is evolution, and Prof. Pfleiderer applies the evolutionary concept to the history of Christian theology. We have not at hand the German text, but it is occasionally interesting to try to guess from the supposed translation what it was that Pfleiderer actually wrote. Did he really speak (p. 12) of the doctrine of the "mortality of God"? Did he really say (p. 47) that Tertullian said that "the human soul is by nature a Christian woman"? Did Pfleiderer or Dr. Huebsch thus translate "Anima naturaliter Christiana"? What is meant by saying (p. 100) that the development of the Western Church was "more moved" than that of the Eastern? Why should Gregory VII twice appear as Gregory II? and why should F. C. Baur be referred to as "Bauer," a quite different person?

GALSWORTHY'S "MOTLEY"

A Collection of Short Stories by a Writer Who Is Also a Social Reformer

JOHN GALSWORTHY is one of the few really significant figures in the literary world to-day. It is difficult to understand the attitude of those who dismiss him with the slightly condescending dictum, "Oh, yes—Galsworthy. He's the Socialist and propagandist, isn't he?"

Socialist he may be, but he is too much the artist to be a mere propagandist. As a man of thought and imagination he reflects the ultra-modern temper—the new humanitarianism, which is concerned less with theories and formulae than with the actualities of life. The volume* of short stories, studies, and impressions just published is doubly interesting, for, apart from its intrinsic value, it is a striking revelation of the personality of the writer. As in the plays "Strike" and "The Silver Box" and the novel "Fraternity," one finds here the presentation of life, and modern problems concretely treated. If Mr. Galsworthy cherishes any solution of these problems he does not give utterance to it. Seemingly, he is content to write of what he sees and feels, not despairing of Utopia, yet not overconfident of its coming.

The book opens with "A Portrait"—a study, slightly in the eighteenth century manner, of a man of no particular importance in this hurrying world. It is detailed, leisurely and suavely written. One notes in it what may be quoted as an expression of the author's own views.

It is a kindly study, on the whole, and in contrast to the second, "A Fisher of Men." In this is a certain irony, a reflected bitterness, which still, in its own way, does not lack an emotional appeal. "The Prisoner" is a short sketch, impressionistic, plainly mirroring a protest against the penal system (which is undergoing reform in England to-day as a direct result of the author's play, entitled "Justice"), though no direct word of protest appears. "Courage," again, is impressionistic—a poverty-stricken little barber does his duty, as he sees it. He assumes the burden of a woman and her seven children, saying: "Life is hard! What would you have? I knew her husband. Could I leave her to the streets?"

"The Meeting" and "A Parting" are a little depressing. There is always sorrow, even to the mere looker-on, in the parting of those who love; and, after all, there may be sadness to the looker-on in the first meeting—but is it always wise to ignore the brightness of to-day for the grayness of to-morrow? "The Pack" is a study of the psychology of the crowd.

> It's only when men run in packs that they lose their sense of decency. * * * Individual man—I'm not speaking of savages—is more given to generosity than meanness, rarely brutal, inclines in fact to be a gentleman. It's when you add three or four more to him that his sense of decency, his sense of personal responsibility, his private standards, go by the board. I am not at all sure that he does not become the victim of a certain infectious fever. Something physical takes place, I am sure. * * * Single man is not an angel; collective man is a bit of a brute.

"Joy of Life," "Bel Colore" and "A Pilgrimage" are brief impressions, notable chiefly for their vivid but fleeting glimpses of children. There is grimness in the stories "A Miller of Dee" and "The Neighbors"—sordid tragedy, if tragedy may ever be sordid. "The Japanese Quince" is a curious little sketch. Two respectable, stolid business men are lured into a square by the subtle odor of an exotic tree. There is no dénouement, but the impression is as clear as a cameo. There is humor in "The Cadjer." But what one receives is, in the main, a conviction of the writer's art and of his intense desire to set forth plainly and effectively the case of those who cannot speak for themselves; the sense of an imagination readily touched, and a mentality essentially masculine. Some of the stories are commonplace as to theme, but each is vivified by a passionate sympathy with life in its every manifestation.

Peculiarly enough, here is a writer of whom one cannot say that he is the disciple of this master or that. Doubtless Mr. Galsworthy has absorbed much from the French writers of short stories, yet his method, no less than his matter, is strongly individual. "A Motley" is stimulating both to imagination and to thought; and it touches very close to the heart of to-day.

HARPERS BOOKS

On Monday—next Monday, the great novel MAX will be for sale. Katherine Cecil Thurston, author of "The Masquerader," wrote it.

My Mark Twain
By William Dean Howells

Now and then there comes a book written from the heart, a book which, without meaning to, tells all about the writer, his hopes and fears and loves and aspirations. This is that kind of book—a little bit of book which will live when great books are forgotten. It is the story of the unswerving affection—(one might almost say love)—of one man for another and the mere recording of the trust and friendship and sympathy between these two makes a story greater than any fiction because it is true. It ought to be called "The Story of Two Life-Long Friends." It is tender and mellow and altogether lovable.

The Heritage of the Desert
By Zane Grey

Here is a new writer who is not afraid to say things in his own way—and the things are well worth the saying. He gives us our West of a few years ago in a new setting and from a new point of view—but over all is the thrill of the perfect story-teller. Here is the tale of the taming of that wonderful horse Silvermane, and all through it runs the wonder of a strong man's love for a strong woman—all under the purple sky of the Desert. A story of wide spaces, to remember all of one's days.

A Successful Wife
By G. Dorset

Wifehood has never before been seen so clearly through a woman's eyes. The story is told just as a real wife would tell of her trials and triumph. But few women could write with the limpid sincerity and simplicity that make this story such a continued delight. No one will question the utter truth of this wife's behavior, but many will question whether her hard-won success was worth its cost. A novel that uncovers the very heart of the woman of to-day.

Round the Year With the Stars
By Garrett P. Serviss

The book tells you how to know the stars and when and where to expect them. Just what everybody can know and ought to know about astronomy—no more. Mr. Serviss writes with infectious enthusiasm. "Star-gazing," he says, "is great medicine for the soul." One doesn't need a telescope, or even an opera glass—it is naked eye astronomy he tells about.

Bismarck writes to his "lieber Mot," and by way of proof that he has read the "first half of the introduction" offers a "critical comment" on a certain "piquant misrepresentation" of the facts of history to which the "excellent historian J. L. Mot. has given the stamp of his recognition."

Undoubtedly the most interesting of all the letters in the volume which relate to Bismarck, however, is the one which Motley, then American Minister at the Court of St. James's, addresses to the Prince in September, 1870, at the moment when Germany is overrunning France with Moltke's terrible military machine. In this the historian ventures to presume so far on his ancient friendship as to suggest that "the more moderate the terms on the part of the conqueror at this supreme moment, the greater would be the confidence inspired for the future, and the more secure the foundations of a durable peace." "The words 'Damn confidence' were added by Prince Bismarck," says Mr. Motley's daughter, "in the margin of the letter." But the friendship of historian and statesman does not seem to have suffered.

Many, and not the least interesting of the letters in the volume, were not written by Motley at all or by any of the big-wigs he was so fortunate as to know. A large number are Mrs. Motley's, and still more Miss Lily Motley's, later married to Sir William Vernon Harcourt, and some Miss Mary Motley's, who married Algernon Brinsley Sheridan, of Frampton Court, Dorset, a descendant of the dramatist. Here also are letters from Oliver Wendell Holmes, from Longfellow and from the Comte de Paris, the last upon Motley's death.

Miss Lily Motley's letters (she was christened Elizabeth Cabot) are particularly lively; though sometimes when she writes to her father there is a touch of pedantry not unnatural in a very well-read young lady moving in very high literary and diplomatic circles. For instance, she writes to her grandmother in New England all about high life in London—how she dines with the Duke and Duchess of Argyle, and Macaulay, "who brings forth from the treasury of his mind things old and new"; how she dances the Sir Roger de Coverley (which is the Virginia reel) with the Comte de Paris and the Duc de Chartres, and goes to Eton, where she hears Latin orations and afterwards observes the proceedings in the dining-hall, where, while the servants were bringing in the dinner, certain "privileged boys were beguiling the time by rolling the round silver salvers they held, up and down the floor." Then the guests and boys came trooping in, "and the boys under us helped themselves to half a chicken each, without loss of time."

Grandmother is favored also with a description of a party at Orleans House, where the hosts are the deposed French royalties, who "certainly do not look the least melancholy." "It is certainly a very generous way of entertaining," comments the young American miss, "to ask people at 4.30, give them dinner and supper, and let them dance all night if they wish it." She reports also on a visit to the Ladies' Gallery at the House of Commons, "which is a sort of cage high up in the air where the heat is intense," when "Mr. Gladstone, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, opened his budget and proposed an addition of fourpence in the income tax." She adds bravely that, "though it was rather a dry subject, we were very much interested in his speech."

Transported to Vienna (Mr. Motley was appointed Minister there in 1861 and held the post for six years, or throughout the War), Miss Lily Motley has in turn to report on Austrian court life. She writes now to her sister, who is in the United States, very busy with army hospital work, about gay parties, where the lively young daughters of the oldest aristocracy in Europe flirt and chatter with magnificent-looking uniformed beings in the Comtessen Zimmer, while their elders amuse themselves more sedately apart. "I had to play hostess in my little domain," writes Miss Lily after a party of her own, "as much as if Mamma were not in existence, and until this morning I had no idea who was in the other rooms, except that I saw mammas come to the door when they wanted to carry off their daughters. There were no less than three promising flirtations in full blast. One couple are what is called in London 'a case,' and I am thinking of having a tablet let into the wall near which they sat all evening, 'Sacred to the memory of Count —— and Countess ——.'"

Our young lady meets Patti at dinner at the house of the Baron Sina, the Greek Minister, "who is certainly very princely with his millions." And Patti comes to call and is a "dear little duck, and says she is so fond of me and embraces me as if we had loved each other from the cradle." Miss Lily also describes the scene of mounted pageantry when archdukes, princes and counts, with eight or ten princesses, hold a tournament of knightly games in the most correct and magnificent costumes of the middle ages—"chain armor, waving plumes, brilliant colors and sparkling jewels,"—and dance equestrian quadrilles to the music of Strauss waltzes. In the midst of the ladies in the Imperial box is the Empress Elizabeth, "all in black of course, who looked beautiful, as she always does." There is also the Emperor Franz-Josef; "but I thought he looked at Elizabeth Bulow and me as if he considered young ladies an embarrassing invention."

Later, Miss Lily is in Washington and appears at the White House, where Judge-Advocate General Holt takes her in to dinner. Mr. Holt does not seem to have made a favorable impression, but there were Gen. Hancock, and old Admiral Farragut and President Lincoln, who seemed to Miss Motley "sufficiently jolly, though they all said afterwards that he was not in force." The young lady betrays, in spite of her fervent patriotism, a certain faint air of condescension toward the social crudities of the American capital. That is not very hard to forgive in one who is young and fresh from London and Vienna. In any case her comments are so fascinating that quotations tend to multiply themselves indefinitely. The only way to stop is to stop.

It may be explained that the volume contains, besides the hitherto unpublished letters which are its more than ample excuse for being, portions of certain other letters previously published, but useful in giving the present collection continuity.

AMONG THE AUTHORS

Dr. George Ernest Morrison, Peking correspondent of The London Times, and author of "An Australian in China," is in England, having just made a journey through Central Asia. Before joining The Times staff in 1895, he had walked from Normanton, Queensland, to Geelong, Victoria, had made an unsuccessful expedition to New Guinea, bringing away two spearheads in his body, and while convalescing in Edinburgh had added an "M. D." to the "C. M.," already won. He had gone as an ordinary seaman to the South Seas to study the Kanaka and "black birding," had voyaged to America as an emigrant, had filled an assistant purser's berth on a West Indian fruit trader, had been Court physician to the Shereef of Wazan, Morocco, and taken a post-graduate course in Paris under Dr. Charcot. Now his home is in Peking, outside the Legation quarter, in a Chinese house containing one of the best private collections of Eastern books in the world. He clips the newspapers and magazines, indexes his clippings Charles Reade fashion, and carries on an enormous correspondence with men of all nationalities in the Middle Kingdom. More than once he has announced that certain things were to be done or were to happen, and the British Foreign Office, after an angry denial, has had to admit that he was right. Lord Curzon, while Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, in the earliest years of Mr. Morrison's service defined his method as the "intelligent anticipation of events before they occur," which piece of tautology did in no wise console his chief, Lord Lansdowne. Mr. Morrison's behavior during the Boxer troubles was unanimously praised. He is in high favor in Japan as well as in China.

Mr. Arthur W. North, author of "Camp and Camino in Lower California," is a special attorney for the Union and Southern Pacific Railroads, with headquarters at Salt Lake City. He says that "Camino" is a Spanish word used to describe the extraordinarily difficult trails which run through California.

Mr. Warrington Dawson, author of "The Scar," and Mr. Kermit Roosevelt, unless something untoward has happened within a day or two, are this week at the Château de Josselin, the family seat of the Duc de Rohan, and were among the spectators at the Ploermel "Pardon," which took place on Thursday, the birthday of the Virgin Mary. The château is a survival of the fourteenth century, the Constable de Clisson died there in 1407, and half way between the castle and Ploermel is the pyramid commemorating the "combat of Thirty," fought in 1351 by thirty Breton Knights against thirty Englishmen. The present Duchesse is a poet, her salon being one of the very few to be found under the Third Republic. Between Mr. Roosevelt's visits to Versailles, Mr. Dawson has been hard at work on his coming novel.

Signor D'Annunzio, the Italian poet and playwright, who is coming here to assist in the production of his new play by Mr. Charles Frohman, will deliver a series of lectures, the tour having been arranged by Signor Del Gozzo, an Italian impresario. The poet will visit South America before coming to New York.

Miss Ellen Terry will sail from Liverpool on Oct. 19 to begin her lecture tour in this country at the Hudson Theatre on Nov. 8. She will give a series of four acted discourses on "Shakespeare's Heroines—Triumphant," "Shakespeare's Heroines—Pathetic," "The Letters of Shakespeare" and "The Children of Shakespeare."

Mr. Albert Bigelow Paine, whose new book of travel, "The Ship Dwellers," has just been published, has dropped for the time being his work on the Mark Twain Autobiography, gone away for a holiday and is now deep in the wilds of Nova Scotia which furnished the background and location of "The Tent-Dwellers," probably his best-known book. His companion will be the flesh-and-blood "Eddy" of the book, the spectacled doctor.

Mr. George Barr McCutcheon, whose "Rose of the King" is out this week, has just reached New York from Hot Springs, Va. In speaking indirectly of his new romance, he told his publishers: "The public is just as much interested in romance to-day as it ever was. It wants its love story, it must have its villain, and a real one; but it insists that he shall get the worst of it in the end. I always try to operate my stories that way. I would rather have people say, 'I love that story,' than 'That is a good, strong book.' They all like to see the thing end pleasantly."

Mr. Theodore Watts Dunton, who is the literary executor of Swinburne, has just made public some information concerning the poet's methods of work. He says, among other things, that the poet was "the most fastidious of correctors, with a system of punctuation of his own, in which a comma, instead of a semicolon, was treated as a vital matter."

Mr. Leroy Scott, whose new novel, "The Shears of Destiny," comes from the press this week, has been a sympathetic student of the Russian cause and has spent considerable time in that country. Furthermore, his wife, Miriam Finn Scott, is a Russian woman known as a writer and lecturer. Many of the dramatic episodes of the story were suggested by the actual experiences of Mrs. Scott's immediate family with the secret police and in the prison at St. Petersburg.

Mr. Burton E. Stevenson, author of the "Guide to American Biography," has sailed for Europe. The new series of the "Guide" deals with men of mind, just as the former dealt with men of action.

George Herbert's quiet study at Bemerton is now occupied by Miss Warre, one of the ladies interested in the revival of village industries in Wiltshire. She designs the rugs which have been the way out of destitution for more than one village weaver.

Myrtle Reed wrote part of her "Master of the Vineyard" in a Cincinnati hotel, whither she had fled to escape Chicago society. She worked for six hours every morning, and then strolled about the city. Once she entered a bookshop. A persuasive salesman tried to induce her to purchase a copy of "Lavender and Old Lace." She said she didn't care for it. "But you should," insisted the clerk; "everybody is reading it." To which Miss Reed retorted: "I shouldn't, though, for I wrote it." When she left the shop the delighted clerk was in possession of an autograph copy of the book.

A HISTORY OF SCOTLAND

Prof. Hume Brown Wastes No Sentiment on the "Pretenders," and Ignores Flora Macdonald

A SCOTTISH history covering the Stuart insurrections of 1715 and '45, which has not a word of sentimentality about that unfortunate house and does not mention Flora Macdonald even in a footnote, shows how far the modern school of historians has traveled in the last twenty years. Yet the third volume of the "History of Scotland" of Prof. P. Hume Brown of Edinburgh University, Historiographer-Royal for Scotland, in the Cambridge Historical Series, is far from being of the severely scientific order.* He has not set out with any thesis to prove or any lesson to teach, yet in his well-balanced narration of events north of the Tweed from the Revolution of 1689 to the Disruption of the Presbyterian Church in 1843, he illustrates one matter of great importance to all who believe that from the experience of the past they can ascertain at least the general direction of the future.

Accustomed as we are to look upon Scotland as an integral part of the United Kingdom, happy and prosperous, it is of great interest to note that the Parliamentary union with England was accomplished only under the spur of necessity, that it was followed by a period of transition in which the Scotch had to habituate themselves to their new conditions, and that it was only after years of discontent and privation that the northern kingdom at length fell into step with its richer neighbor and marched with it to political, social, and economic prosperity. The union itself was forced on the Scottish people by a small group of their leading men. Bribery, Dr. Hume Brown admits, may have played a small part in the final stages to force the treaty through the Scotch Estates, but there was none of that wholesale corruption at Edinburgh which disgraced the passing of the Act of Irish Union through the Dublin Parliament three quarters of a century later. It was the force of circumstances that drove those who loved Scotland best, to yield her autonomy.

At the close of the seventeenth century Scotland was beginning to turn her attention to commerce, and the importance of religion as a factor in her national life was waning. She began immediately to feel the disabilities of her connection with England, which forced her to submit to the policy of the Government in London without any influence on its decisions. Charles II.'s war with the Netherlands had deprived her of one of her best markets, the mercantile policy shut her out of the colonies, the ill-fated Darien scheme at once proved the Scotch lack of comprehension of the international situation and England's disregard for her weaker sister.

Then came the question of the succession. Queen Anne's children died before her and Scotland tried to use her right to select the line of succession to gain recognition for her rights from England. It seemed as though the two kingdoms might break apart once more, and that a Stuart monarch at Edinburgh might confront a Hanoverian in Westminster. But the commercial pressure which England could wield was too much for the Scottish spirit of independence. The announcement that, if the northern people did not fall in line with their southern neighbors by Christmas, 1705, they would be held to be aliens and the importation of their cattle, coals and linen across the border would be forbidden, forced those who could consider events from a higher standpoint than party passion to consent to an arrangement.

The Treaty of Union was signed in 1707, but it was greeted in Scotland with riots. Even the men who negotiated it regarded it as merely the lesser of two evils, and the feelings of its most ardent advocates were well expressed by the words with which Chancellor Seafield handed the act with the royal signature to the Clerk of the Scots Estates: "Now there's ane end of ane auld sang." The first tune played on the bells of St. Giles's in Edinburgh to celebrate the Union was "Why should I be sad on my wedding-day?" and within a few months all Scotchmen declared that never had there been a union more ill-starred. Every class had its particular grievance. The merchants were indignant at the export duty on linen. The clergy were scandalized by the toleration granted to Episcopalians. The peers were humiliated by the refusal to admit to the House of Lords a Scotch nobleman who had received an English title, and the people at large were embittered by the malt tax.

Dr. Brown declares that if Queen Anne had lived a few weeks longer nothing could have prevented a disruption, which England would have welcomed no less heartily than Scotland. Indeed, a motion to dissolve the Union, introduced in 1713 in the House of Lords by Chancellor Seagrave, then the Earl of Findlater, was lost by only the narrowest of margins. Of those present fifty-four voted on either side, and it was only the fact that of the proxies seventeen were for the union to thirteen against it that saved the day. Yet in spite of the hopes of the Jacobites, when the Scotch were face to face with the acceptance of a Roman Catholic monarch, they shrank from it in horror. Strong as were the romantic ties which bound them to the House of Stuart, still stronger was the sentiment that united them with the faith of the Covenanters. The Old Pretender received scant support from the people at large, but the causes of friction with England remained. It was difficult for the Parliament at Westminster to see with the eyes of Scotchmen, and the misunderstandings that lost England the American Colonies, that have given her centuries of trouble in Ireland and that are still the bane of the British Empire, did their best to wreck the Union.

The details of these misunderstandings have lost their interest but it is worth noting that just before the last great trial of Scottish loyalty her responsible officials wrote in a spirit of absolute dejection. In 1742 the Lord President Forbes said that "the revenue is in such a declining sense that the usual expenses of Civil Government can hardly be answered." In fact Scotland was just at the end of a period of change, which was inevitably most painful to those who had to bear its brunt. Her old channels of commerce with the Continent had been closed by the wars with France, and she had not yet perceived that already her partnership with England was giving her in the Empire, just coming into importance, an outlet which far exceeded in value her wildest dreams. It was the rise of the American colonies that saved Scotland's commercial and industrial life. Grants had been made to her industries, and between 1728 and 1738 her export of linen manufactures doubled. Agriculture had received an impetus from the introduction of improved methods and machinery and the shipping of Glasgow, hampered though it was by the jealousy of Whitehaven, Liverpool and Bristol, increased from nothing in 1718 to sixty-seven vessels in 1740 and seven hundred and eighteen in 1792.

So it came about that when Charles Edward landed in 1745 he was sorely disappointed by the support he received. Stripped of the romantic atmosphere which has gathered round it, it is seen that the rebellion was doomed from the first. Even the clansmen turned out with reluctance, and towns such as Perth, Dundee and Aberdeen, which had welcomed the Old Pretender, opened their gates to his son only under compulsion. In Edinburgh it was said that two-thirds of the men were Whigs and two-thirds of the women Tories, and, in spite of the brilliant levées in Holyrood, the Hanoverians held possession of the Castle and but three hundred recruits of doubtful reputation joined Charles Edward in the capital of his forefathers.

So he failed, and Scotland settled down to a marvelous industrial development. Its history began to pass entirely into the economic realm; but it is interesting to Americans to note that the effect of their struggle for independence was to found a new industry in Scotland. When the export of linen was cut off, the Scotch turned to the manufacture of cotton, obtaining the staple from the West Indian islands. In its turn America gained by the changes in Scotland, for as the Highland chiefs settled down into landlords, they depopulated the glens to create sheep farms, and between 1763 and 1775 it is reckoned that no less than 30,000 of the clansmen sought new homes on this side of the Atlantic.

As the years go on, Dr. Brown finds less and less distinctively Scotch material to write about. The people were prospering, their interests were merging in those of the United Kingdom and the idea of a revocation of the Union faded completely away. The Presbyterian Church has indeed a history of its own, but it concerns little the general historian. There was, too, that marvelous outburst of literary activity at the end of the eighteenth century, connected with the names of Hume and Reid, Robertson and Adam Smith, Burns and Scott. The Edinburgh Reviewers are of interest in the story of the development of the political power of the modern press, but for all that the history of Scotland as an independent country begins to grow thin. It had played its part in the development of the world as a separate entity and as it grew richer and better governed, it took once for all its place in the great Empire of which it is to-day so valued a part.

DIPLOMATIC INTRIGUES

IT IS SAD but true that an ill fate seems to hang over the pens of most beginners in fiction when they attempt to depict their heroines. The lovely lady who is to hold the centre of their stage is an object of so much solicitude, that they are very likely to end by giving her that air of tinted unimpeccability that belongs by right only to the best make of dolls. It was this ill fate that befell Schroeder Davis when he wrote "The Storm Birds." (Moffat, Yard & Co., $1.50.) It is a pity, too, for, aside from his all-sugar heroine, his firstling has some good qualities. Most of the subordinate characters are well managed, and their personalities made to stand out in quite a lifelike way. The dialogue is frequently very clever in the way it is used to portray character and to reveal the story's movement. But sometimes, again, it is useless enough to have deserved the blue pencil. The novel is mainly concerned with the diplomatic intrigues that led up to the Spanish-American war, and the author has his own well-worked-out theory, which forms a vital part of the plot, of the cause of the blowing up of the Maine. The book is primarily, a love romance, but the scenes with which it is filled of social and diplomatic life in Washington are realistic enough to show the author's familiarity with the subject.

KING EDWARD'S LAST READING

MR. NOEL WILLIAMS'S "A Rose of Savoy" is brought into prominence by these words from the English Western Mail: "The last book which King Edward read, or, rather, was reading at the time of his death, was 'A Rose of Savoy.' His Majesty was not a very rapid reader, and when a book pleased him he returned to its pages again and again. Literature dealing with old court life, especially the Courts of England and France, always had a great charm for King Edward. It was this quality which made the book referred to so agreeable to the King. Unhappily, however, he was not spared to complete his reading of the volume."

THE AUTHOR OF VATHEK

ALTHOUGH William Beckford was the author of a number of books, he is best known in letters by the strange story of "Vathek, an Arabian Tale," purporting to be the translation of an unpublished manuscript. This little volume, originally written in French, has been presented fifteen times in English and five in French, and has been from its first appearance—when the translator quarreled with the author—the subject of a good deal of contention, ranging from tart vituperation to meticulous disputation. For the present generation, though the latest edition dates from 1901, it possesses less interest than does the life of its eccentric writer, and this interest is pretty fully satisfied by the "Life and Letters," edited by Lewis Melville. (Duffield & Co.)

The volume is one that Beckford himself, in his saner moods, might have delighted in, attractive but simple, sincerely and modestly written and very happily illustrated. It has admirable reproductions of four portraits of Beckford by Romney, two portraits, one of Beckford's father and one of his sister-in-law, by Reynolds, and one of his son-in-law, the tenth Duke of Hamilton, by Raeburn. Those of Beckford express beauty rather than character, and the subject must have been an almost excessively handsome man, as if he had been as extravagant in good looks as in other things in life. Mr. Melville holds, it is true, that Beckford's extravagance, in spending and in conduct, has been grossly exaggerated, and that what there was of it was not more than might be expected from a man of abounding enthusiasm and great wealth. He finds, after much patient inquiry, that there is no convincing, or even very strong, evidence of the truth of the wild stories that have been told of the "Sultan of Fonthill."

Mr. Melville gives many of Beckford's early letters written before, at twenty-seven, he suddenly leaped into notice, if not into fame, with the appearance of "Vathek." They are those of an emotional, imaginative youngster, with an intensely active but wayward mind, constantly and deeply moved by the spell of nature in its more unusual aspects, and fed with all sorts of out-of-the-way literature, especially the Oriental. His fortune enabled its possessor to indulge in almost any whim. Neither political life nor the social life of the time suited his taste. Of the celebration of his majority he wrote to Lady Hamilton (the first, "not Lord Nelson's Lady Hamilton, or anybody else's Lady Hamilton") of "the swilling of punch, the cramming of venison" among the "ten thousand people" that "covered the lawn and the hills that rise over it." Politics he thought both unclean and frivolous, and though he lived through the American Revolution, the Napoleonic wars, and the troublous times of the first Reform bill, and was many years in the House of Commons, his letters bear little trace of interest in public affairs.

In his way he was humane. He spent large sums in quiet and almost secret charities. He constructed buildings and improved his estate largely to give employment in time of distress. True, he reveled in the extent of his plans, in the twenty miles of walk he laid out, in the million of trees he planted, in the tower 300 feet in height. But he built eight miles of twelve-foot wall about his place because he would not have foxes killed on it by the neighboring gentry, whom he despised and who seem to have repaid his scorn with stupid malignity and to have spread the stories which Mr. Melville notes. He had many friends and good ones among men devoted to letters and art and music, in all of which he was himself accomplished. And this is the more noteworthy because he had a sharp tongue and a sharp pen, which he used with much freedom. Thus he wrote of the great "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire":

> The time is not far distant, Mr. Gibbon, when your almost ludicrous self-complacency, your numerous and sometimes apparently wilful mistakes, your frequent distortions of historical Truth to provoke a gibe, or incite a sneer at everything most sacred and venerable, your ignorance of the Oriental languages, your limited and far from acutely critical knowledge of the Latin and the Greek, and in the midst of all the prurient and obscene gossip of your notes—your affected moral purity perking up every now and then from the corrupt mass like artificial roses shaken off in the dark by some Prostitute, your heartless cynicism, your unclassical fondness for meretricious ornament, your tumid diction, your monotonous jingle of periods, will be still more exposed and scouted than they have been. Once fairly kicked off from your lofty bedizened stilts you will be reduced to your just level and true standard.

Beckford, by the way, sojourning at Lausanne, bought Gibbon's library of over 6,000 volumes for £950. "I bought the library," he wrote, "to have something to read when I passed through Lausanne. I shut myself up for six weeks from early in the morning until night, only now and then taking a ride. The people thought me mad. I read myself nearly blind." He packed up about half the mass of books to send to Fonthill, but finally gave the whole to a local physician. It was characteristic of his whole life.

HUNTING WITH THE ESKIMOS

Mr. Harry Whitney's "Hunting with the Eskimos," a record of the author's adventurous year among the northernmost tribe, his big-game hunting, and his experiences of native life and the battle for existence through the long arctic night, will appear early in October. It is to have sixty-four full-page illustrations from photographs and reproductions of interesting native sketches.

LITERARY NOTES FROM LONDON

Some Recent English Partnerships in the Writing of Books and in Illustrating Them

LONDON, Sept. 7.—Is literary work by partnership as frequent with you in America as with us here? I fancy it is not, because most of our writers live in London, and so can be in easy working relationship with each other, while yours are scattered over a continent. But I do not mean only the writing of books jointly by two people—regular, set collaboration, as in the cases of Walter Besant and James Rice and Emile Erckmann and Alex Chatrian, two historical instances in English and French literature; I mean also the active work, maybe on different lines, say by husband and wife—surely the most delightful form of literary partnership. I have been asking myself these things as I have looked over the growing harvest of publishers' lists announcing Autumn books, and I have found the answer interesting.

Naturally you have collaboration oftenest in the writing of fiction, and Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Williamson make a conspicuous success there. Theirs may be called an Anglo-American literary alliance, for Mrs. Williamson is an American, her husband an Englishman. They have been in England this Summer, as usual, but are now, I think, back at their home in the South of France. Equally successful as joint novel writers are Mr. and Mrs. Egerton Castle, who have a large public with you, as they have with us. They have delved with great success in the byways of English and French history for the color of their stories, another of which is down to appear before long. We cross to Ireland, and we find Miss Sommerville and Miss Martin Ross doing together "Dan Russell the Fox," a new story on the lines of their first success, "Some Experiences of an Irish R. M." It is fiction that they write, but Irish fiction, which means that it is also very largely humor; shall we say of the kind made known to the world, by Charles Lever? Next I come upon a story by Mr. and Mrs. Claude Askew, "The Robe of Justice," which is also nearly ready, and which fairly illustrates the sensational tales for which they are so popular.

Turning from fiction, one finds that Mrs. Clement Shorter has a new volume of poems coming out under the title of "The Troubadour," whose title poem is a long ballad based upon a legend of Old Provence. Mrs. Shorter, who before her marriage was widely known as Miss Dora Sigerson, had the good fortune to win, through the medium of private letters, very high praise for her ballads both from Swinburne and Meredith, surely excellent judges. Meredith, in fact, wrote an introduction, the last piece of prose, I believe, that came from him, for Mrs. Shorter's "Collected Poems," with which her new volume will be uniform. To that little record of Mrs. Shorter's poetic activities one has to add that her husband, Mr. Clement Shorter, whose name is not less widely known, has a work appearing under the title "Napoleon in His Own Defence." It gives Napoleon's own view of his captivity at St. Helena and his own estimate of his career, and in a way therefore is associated with an earlier book which we owe to Mr. Shorter, "Napoleon and His Fellow Travellers." The contents of the coming book are from letters written by Napoleon to Lady Clavering, which originally were published anonymously. To these letters Theodore Hook made a reply, and Mr. Shorter prints that reply, as well as contributes an essay upon Bonaparte as a man of letters—rather a new aspect of him, is it not?

Another literary couple of English people whom I find at the front with a book this season are Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Webb. They have really devoted their lives to a study of municipal government and all that bears upon it. This book is entitled "The State and the Doctor," and thus is a by-product of Mr. and Mrs. Webb's more direct studies of local government. Then Dr. and Mrs. Bullock Workman, both Americans, are bringing out a book of the recent travels which they have carried through together, and instances of what somebody has called the "married book" might be multiplied from the Autumn lists. We have a different literary relationship in the fact that Mr. Ralph Nevill, the son of Lady Dorothy Nevill, has edited a second series of her memories, which Methuen are publishing. The three Bensons are all down for Autumn books, and, if they are a productive literary family, certainly they give us good stuff. As usual, Mr. Andrew Lang has several volumes in view, among them his new fairy book, and his brother, Mr. John Lang, is becoming active as an anthologist. This brother's wife, Mrs. Jean Lang, recently published a very good book on the romance of the Scottish Borders.

Various instances occur to one where the husband writes a book and the wife illustrates it, or it may be the other way about, but that is scarcely literary collaboration in the strict sense. Mr. Stuart Boyd, the Scottish artist, has, I fancy, pictured more than one book by his wife, Mrs. Mary Stuart Boyd, whose novels, although in America you may not have heard much of them, are making steady progress with us.

Might not somebody, for next Autumn, write a book on this engaging subject of literary partnership? It would take in the co-partnery which there was between Robert Louis Stevenson and his stepson, Lloyd Osbourne, in several stories. It would also take in the Brontë sisters, and the examples, ancient and modern, of an occasional book being done jointly by two people are indeed innumerable. Altogether there is excellent material for a volume on—what shall we call it?—the joint-stock method in authorship. Who is going to do it? JAMES MILNE.

Mr. John Galsworthy's play "Justice" was no sooner seen by Mr. Winston Churchill, the English Home Secretary, than he declared his intention of investigating the conditions that the author depicts. The conclusions from this investigation are now before Parliament. Mr. Churchill and the Prison Commissioners have implied in their proposals that the dramatist's view was only fair and sensible. They ask for changes which Mr. Galsworthy himself has notably defined as one and all inspired by imagination, without which reform is deadly, and by common sense, without which it is dangerous.

Miss A. Carter Goodloe, the author of "The Star Gazers," a love story, just published, the scene of which is laid in Mexico, is by no means a new writer, though a very good one. Her full name, Abbe Carter Goodloe, appears on the title page of "College Girls," and the shorter form of Carter Goodloe on the first page of "At the Foot of the Rockies" and "Calvert of Strathore."

Mr. Ralph D. Paine's reputation as a writer about college life and college men was made when "College Years" came out. "The Head Coach," a football story, followed, and now comes a third—"The Fugitive Freshman." Although half the action takes place away from the campus, the new book belongs with the earlier college volumes. The freshman who runs away from college, as the only possible means of extricating himself from a difficult situation, carries the college atmosphere with him through a succession of entertaining adventures.

Mr. Frederic J. Stimson, Professor of Comparative Literature at the Harvard Law School, has written a study of the history and tendencies of English and American legislation, which is to be published under the title, "Popular Law-Making." He aims to show the growth of our laws from their very origin, and to give a lucid exposition of legislative conditions to-day.

Mr. Maurice Hewlett's views on women are thus commented on by Milton Bronner:

> Kipling gives snapshot photographs of women. He shows them in certain brief moments of their existence, in vivid blacks and whites, caught on the instant, whether the subjects were laughing or crying. Stevenson's few women are presented in silhouette. Barrie and Hardy give etchings in which line by line, and with the most painstaking art, the features are drawn. But Meredith and Mr. Hewlett give paintings in which brush-stroke after brush-stroke has been used. The reader beholds the finished work true not only in features but in coloring.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Rhead sail from New York on the 17th inst. by the St. Paul to spend the Winter in Europe. Mr. Rhead has received a commission to illustrate a popular boys' book, and they will sojourn in an old-fashioned English college town—the scene of the story. Part of the time will be spent at Matlock Baths, on the Derbyshire River, Derwent, "the finest grayling and trout stream in England," where Mr. Rhead will study and write upon the art of dry-fly fishing for both English and American outdoor magazines.

"O. Henry's" literary executor, Mr. Harry Peyton Steger, would like to have copies of any letters or documents from the famous short-story writer, or to hear from anybody who is interested in a biography of him. Communications should be addressed to Mr. Steger in care of Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City, New York.

TWO BUDGETS OF OLD LETTERS

The Correspondence of a Scottish Ducal Family and that of an Amateur Architect.

By H. W. BOYNTON

It is a pity that so interesting a collection of letters as this* should have had to be issued with a catchpenny label. The title plainly suggests the grace, the wit, the gossip, the airy complacency of the powder-and-patches period. It invites the reader to a repast which is in very small measure forthcoming. A large proportion of the letters included in these two portly volumes are purely political or business-like. Almost all of the first volume is made up of this sort of material, interesting enough to the student of eighteenth century history, but without the "intimate social" flavor for which we are anxiously on the lookout. The fact is, this is a miscellaneous collection of letters written to and by various members of the house of Argyll from the year 1705 to the year 1843. It embraces also some purely scrap-book material, bits of quaint verse and legend; and a number of letters by various hands—Rob Roy, George Washington, et al.,—whose interest lies chiefly or wholly in their respective signatures. The editor, the present Duke of Argyll, has not imparted dignity to the publication by his preface. Fortunately, the bits of commentary with which the different groups of letters are connected are all that they should be.

The most interesting group in the first volume has to do with the "Douglas Case," a cause célèbre, on one side or other of which a large part of English Society found itself committed. The Duke of Douglas held large Scottish estates, including Bothwell Castle. The young Duke of Hamilton had been for some time the heir presumptive to these estates, when the Duke of Douglas's sister, Lady Jane Stewart, produced two children which she alleged had been born to her in France. The Duke of Douglas wished Hamilton to be his heir, and doubted whether the children were really his sister's. The case was brought for trial before the Scots Courts. The greatest excitement prevailed. Everybody took sides: feuds arose among hitherto friendly families; a duel was fought between two of the opposing lawyers (one of them afterward became Lord Chancellor Thurlow) while the case was pending. The decision, by one vote, was against Lady Jane and her "peasant brats," and the Duke of Douglas died happy. Shortly after his death, however, the House of Lords reversed the decision of the Scots Courts, and one of the doubtful children (now known to have been a fraud) actually succeeded to the Douglas estates. Boswell was active on the Stewart side, and was thoroughly snubbed for his activity by the Duchess of Argyll when, long after, he went with Johnson to Inverary.

There is a series of letters in this volume to the Duchess of Hamilton from the Duchess of Brunswick. This was Augusta, oldest grandchild of George II and sister of George III—a homely and almost illiterate, but good-hearted personage. Here, also, is a group of letters from the unfortunate Lady Derby—a rather piteous record of the struggles of a great lady, discredited by the higher powers of society, to hold her head up and wring some happiness out of life. In this correspondence we more nearly approach the intimate society flavor which has been promised to us; but Lady Derby takes her high life too seriously: in the nature of things, her letters are deficient in the gaiety which gives its finest relish to this style of letter-writing. By far the best letters, from a literary point of view, are those from Dr. Moore (father of Sir John Moore) to the Duchess of Argyll, written between 1771 and 1774. These years Dr. Moore spent abroad, in the capacity of tutor and companion to the young Duke of Hamilton. That youth seems to have been neither better nor worse than most other boys—a generous and affectionate, but idle and extravagant fellow, prone to momentary fads and amorous impulses, a good deal of a handful for the older man. Dr. Moore, however, seems to have been equal to the emergency, a gentleman not less than a man of parts. His letters to the young Duke's mother are full of dignity as well as humor. He has an unfeigned respect for the exalted rank of his patrons, but without a trace of obsequiousness or timidity. He gets a great deal of amusement out of the foibles of his boyish charge. For example, the Duke is "a little catched" by the charms of a certain Madam Cozzenof and the Doctor reports:

> This is the third Passion the Duke has had since we cross'd the Sea. Tney generally affect his appetite, and I can make a pretty good guess at the highth of his Love by the Victuals he Refuses to eat. A Slight touch of Love puts him immediately from Legumes and all kinds of Jardinage. If it arises a degree higher, he turns up his nose at Fricassees and Ragouts. Another degree and he will Rather go to bed supperless as taste plain Roasted Veal or Poulets of any sort. This is the utmost length his passion has ever come hitherto, for when he was at the worst with Mademoiselle Marchenville, tho' she put him entirely from Greens, Ragouts, and Veal, yet she made no impression on his Roast Beef or Mutton appetite. He fed plentifully upon those in spite of all her charms. I intend to make a Thermometer for the Duke's Passion with four degrees: (1) Greens, (2) Fricassees and Ragouts, (3) Roast Veal and fowls, (4) plain Roast Mutton or Beef. And if ever the Mercury mounts so high as the last, I shall think the Case alarming and inform your Grace.

Dr. Moore published several books of travel, and a novel famous in its day, "Zeluco." It was through the Duchess of Argyll that his son, afterward Sir John Moore, obtained a commission in the English army—in his sixteenth year. Curiously enough, it was also by her influence that Wolfe got his commission. A large part of the second of these volumes is made up of official and family letters, the chief exception being a considerable correspondence of Madame de Stael, who was a friend of Lord John Campbell, and put him into "Corinne." The work is finely printed and illustrated.

"An Eighteenth-Century Correspondence"* is also composed of a large number of letters, by various hands, and on all sorts of themes. But they have a real unity; taken together they give a striking portrait of a man as seen by his friends. Sanderson Miller, the recipient of virtually all of them, was a country gentleman of means who acquired not a little fame as an amateur architect. In fact, he was looked up to as a leader in that pseudo-Gothic revival which devastated the landscape of eighteenth-century England with its meaningless towers and battlements, its cascades and grottos and other painful artifices. It all seems rather preposterous now, but the craze swept the country, and the most cultivated Englishmen, Horace Walpole being merely a striking instance, busied their spare hours with attempts to beautify their estates according to the new mode. Sanderson Miller was an enthusiast: he built a Gothic tower on his own estate, and remodeled the adjacent side of the house to harmonize with it. His friendships as exhibited in this book had a good deal of range, but all of his correspondents are interested in Miller's architectural exploits, and not a few of them make use of his skill. He builds a ruined Gothic castle for Sir Thomas Lyttleton at Hagley, crumbling walls and all; and the design is so much admired that he is presently commissioned to build another for Lord Chancellor Harwicke. This latter made-to-order "ruin" is still to be seen at Wimpole, but the present irreverent generation calls it "The Folly." Folly the whole movement was, yet of interest as a first stirring of the romantic spirit which by the beginning of the nineteenth century had at least driven sloth from the British mind.

It was not, after all, as an architect that Miller was chiefly valued by the writers of this correspondence, but as a beloved friend. From the evidence of the few notes from his own hand printed at the end of the volume, we should suppose him to have been a man who took himself and his affairs with a kind of stolid seriousness. The evidence is contradicted by his friends' attitude. They write to him not because they owe him anything or want anything from him, but because he is in their thoughts. They are always asking him to come and see them, deploring the fact of their separation, making affectionate allusion to pleasant days spent with him in the past. They reflect, in short, an intimacy based upon the simplest and deepest liking. He was evidently a companionable man, and his wife, whom they all allude to as his "little woman," must have shared his companionableness. Almost all these correspondents were, in one way or another, notables. Dean Swift (nephew of the great Dean), Lord Dacre, Sir Edward Turner, Lyttleton, Hardwicke, Lord North, all seem to have held Miller in especial esteem and confidence. Altogether the best letters in the book are those from Sir Edward Turner, a writer of endless good spirits, witty because he cannot help it, and incapable of being dull in the briefest note of business. He, like Dr. Moore in the other correspondence, supplies the leaven which gives more than ordinary palatability to the whole lump.

"YACOB STRAUSS"

It seems a pity that Charles Follen Adams did not take "the wiser course" suggested in his preface to "Yacob Strauss" (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co., $1), by presenting at this time an abridged edition of his verses. For there is in the present collection entirely too much chaff for any reader to "cull it from the wheat," the precious grains being certain of the German-American dialect verses with which, some thirty years ago, Mr. Adams delighted a fun-loving people. What "elocutionist" of thirty years ago could afford not to include "Leedle Yacob Strauss" in his repertoire? And who, having once known Yacob, has ever forgotten him? Some of the other verses in the volume—pleasant mixtures of fun and seriousness—are "Mine Modder-in-Law," "Der Oak und der Vine" and "Der Long Handled Dipper." But it is hard to forgive the author for not having winnowed the chaff for us himself.

AUTOMOBILE LAW

Motorists who wish to keep out of trouble will find Twyman O. Abbott's "Road Rights of Motorists" (Outing Publishing Co., $1.50) a vade mecum for all parts of the country. Seventy pages are devoted to classified general rules formulated from State statutes and court decisions out of which the author has endeavored to extract the general principle involved and state it in simple language. Then follows, in alphabetical order of States, the complete motor vehicle statute of each State as enacted up to the beginning of this year. A full general index makes quickly available any small item in the book's mass of contents. The motorist who wants to observe his obligations as well as enjoy his rights on the highway will here find his line of conduct fully mapped out for him.

IN MEXICAN WAR DAYS

"The Tyranny of Power," by Charles Sumner Clark (The C. M. Clark Publishing Co.), is a novel well packed with American history. It treats of the period "just prior to, during and immediately following the notable Black Hawk and the Mexican wars." Gen. Zachary Taylor, Jefferson Davis, as the wooer and winner of the then Col. Taylor's daughter, Abraham Lincoln, Sherman, Albert Sidney Johnston, and others afterward famous, appear in the story. The author has been careful in his facts, but, as a romance, the tale does not arouse interest. It is almost childishly impossible, and its dialect, whether Western, Irish or negro, is an absurd jargon. Moreover, it is overspelled in that maddening fashion so common to writers of what they fondly believe to be dialect. Why "wurk" and "dun," for example? How else should the words be pronounced? The merit of the book lies in its clear presentation of the history of an interesting and much neglected period.

"THE HOUSE OF BONDAGE"

"White Slavery" as it Presents Itself to a Writer of Fiction

LITERATURE has frequently been employed as a means to correcting abuses or drawing attention to wrongs and sufferings that might otherwise find no voice. Dickens was, of course, pre-eminent among those who preach reforms under the guise of fiction, and he was but one among many, from Victor Hugo and Zola to the writer of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." No doubt great service to humanity has been done by books of this class, and, occasionally, quite as signal a one to art; but the combination is a rare one.

Mr. Kauffman has chosen this method for attacking and exposing one of the crying evils of our day, and particularly, in his presentation of the case, of our city, in his story called "The House of Bondage."[*] Taking a young country girl, probably typical enough, a girl living in a small factory town somewhere in Pennsylvania, with a brutal father and an overworked, nagging mother, a girl of sixteen, whom he depicts as rather pretty and daring and thoroughly rebellious against her parents and her bondage to them, he provides the tempter, at a critical moment, in the form of a traveling salesman who is a runner for a house of ill-fame in New York. The usual promises of marriage, with the terror of a beating at home hanging over the child's head, end in the desired result. The girl's ruin is accomplished, and she awakes to find herself a prisoner at Rose Legère's.

From this point the story follows the unfortunate girl down all the long, devious read of degradation, brings her at last back to her father's house, to find it shut to her forever, and returns her, derelict and dying, to the pitiless streets of the city. Together with this main thread are woven countless others, revealing the system of graft and the low politics that move together for the downfall of the working girl; and how the powers that be join equally with false sentiment and cruel conventions to hold her under, once she has fallen. Every man in the book, with the exception of one named Hermann, is nothing else than a ravening brute, and wherever woman looks she sees but one horizon. It is a bitter, cheerless story, in which the faithful love of Katie and Hermann makes no more than a feeble gleam of pleasanter light. Mr. Kauffman is the reformer, not the artist. His canvas is probably true to facts, the book is entirely sincere, but its gray monotony ends by wearying as much as it distresses the reader.

One miserable detail follows upon another. The prison in which Rose's "girls" live, the arrival of new recruits, the discussions between the inmates, fill page after page. Violet ends by escaping, but her respite is brief, her effort futile. There is no chance for her. She ends on the street, drifting lower and lower through the dance-halls and saloons. Upon her special adventures and agonies are hung all the squalid and shameful acts that make up the horrible system of graft which holds these women in its iron clutches, tearing the very flesh from their bones in its eagerness to feed itself. Mr. Kauffman has thrown no glamour about the incidents he gives. It is a gray and hopeless presentment of a black and fearful condition.

As to a solution, none is offered—at least directly. But the fault is placed upon economic conditions. So long as poverty endures, so long, too, will prostitution flourish. As the English girl puts it, "the biggest safeguard of a man's virtue is the greatest danger to a woman's—an empty pocket." It is the slums that lie behind the misery here related; and Angel, Violet, Rose, Dykman--all the evil or forlorn list—are but pawns shoved here and there under the pressure of necessity. In the great game of preying and being preyed upon, the weakest are crushed into the mud. If Mr. Kauffman offers no panacea he at least supplies a torch to smoke in the murky obscurity and reveal something of the true aspect of those lowest, slippery steps of civilization, with the black streams of despair splashing at their feet.

SOME NEW EDITIONS

THE FOLLOWING REPRINTS of books are just announced by Messrs. A. C. McClurg & Co.: Hanson's "The Conquest of the Missouri," second edition; Col. Sargent's "The Campaign of Marengo," fourth edition; Col. Sargent's "Napoleon Bonaparte's First Campaign," sixth edition; Upton's "Standard Operas," ninth edition; Mulford's "Hopalong Cassidy," fifth edition; Parrish's "My Lady of the South," fifth edition; Mrs. Dye's "McLoughlin and Old Oregon," seventh edition; Mrs. Arnold's "A Mother's List of Books for Children," second edition; Marah Ellis Ryan's "For the Soul of Rafael," tenth edition, and Dr. Holden's "The Channel Islands of California," second edition.

"A RENEGADE POET"

UNDER this title appears a collection of some of the miscellaneous prose work of Francis Thompson, the English poet whose death nearly three years ago ended a life of incomparable sorrow, (Ball Publishing Co., $1.25). Outside of a rather narrow circle his poems are but little known in this country, even yet, although in England critical appreciation has accorded to him a place among the greater of the late Victorian poets. Even less is his prose work known over here, although the recent posthumous publication of his essay on Shelley aroused some enthusiasm. The collection in this little volume of some of his fugitive pieces, contributed to English periodicals during, approximately, the first half of the '90's, will be welcomed by all who have a genuine love of literature. For even these slight things, to which the author himself probably did not attach much importance, have qualities of thought and of style which afford almost constant pleasure.

Wonderfully skillful is his use of words, while his powers of expression are as varied as his feeling. Sometimes a peculiar elfishness, as in the opening essay, from which the book takes its title, is the dominant characteristic. Again, poetic imagination, noble and sad, moves majestically through such a prose poem as "Moestitiae Encomium." Literary criticism, clearly thought out and simply expressed, is the substance of several papers on Henley, Crashaw, Pope and others, wherein sanity of judgment, intellectual poise and sweetness of temper give no hint of the years of wretched poverty, illness, disappointment and mental anguish out of which they grew. Indeed, the playfulness of conception and imagery with which every now and then his thought pirouettes about its subject fills the reader with wonder that a man could have lived through such a life and still possess such smiling, childlike gaiety of spirit. Just as irrepressible, also, are the workings of his exuberant imagination, which leads him constantly into parallel, or figure, or imagery, or symbolism. Sometimes they obscure his meaning, so fantastically or so luxuriantly do they clothe his ideas.

An introduction by Edward J. O'Brien gives a brief sketch of Thompson's life, tells a little about his work and offers an estimate of its value.

"PHILIPPA AT HALCYON"

GIVEN a rainy day, a wood fire, a box of fudge and Katherine Holland Brown's new book about college life, what normal maid of sixteen could resist the combination? "Philippa at Halcyon" (Charles Scribner's Sons, $1.50) is a story for girls, about girls, by one who is still a girl in her sympathies. Anybody who continues to believe that four years at college—generally known as higher education—will unsex a girl, need only read these chronicles of the doings of Philippa and her friends, to realize that even such strictly feminine matters as hand-run tucks may retain their importance in the face of serious college problems. Also, there are in the book plenty of the enthusiastic, innocent but none the less ecstatic thrills, which every girl who has gone through college in a normal way must have experienced.

The story dwells not so much on Philippa herself as on the doings of her friends at their college hall, Halcyon; and the plan, as worked out here, of a co-operative household managed by the students themselves, might be of value to puzzled deans of women's colleges. For if the experiment teaches nothing else, it emphatically drives home the lesson that "sometimes it is wholesome for people to find out their mistakes by experience." The characters—of serious as well as butterfly natures—are well-drawn and skillfully differentiated; but the narrative itself is a bit too happy, too glowing, too enchanted for any but youthful minds. To girlish sixteen, with its insistent desire to have a good time all of the time—the book—sane and wholesome beneath its frills—may be cordially recommended.

"THE ETERNAL FIRES"

IT is a story of temperament working itself out and being forged by circumstance into harmony with the inevitable that Nancy Musselman Schoonmaker has written. (Broadway Publishing Company, $1.50.) Her Mary Field is a Kentucky girl, the daughter of a race of home-keeping men and women who have found entire satisfaction in their quiet, secluded life. But upon this last and only child of four generations who have lived and died in an unchanging home have fallen the fires of unrest, of desire for the distance, of thirst for the unknown. When she comes to womanhood, freed by the death of her parents from home-staying obligation, she sets forth upon her quest of freedom, of search for she knows not what. In Paris she thinks she has discovered the unknown, longed-for good. For an artist gets inspiration from her presence, and she gives of her spirit generously, believing that she has found the highest expression of her own mind and heart. When he demands more than spirit she flies in disgust and finally, after many weeks, acknowledges the truth to herself and summons from the other side of the Atlantic the lover whose suit she had denied because she had thought it nobler to be an artist's inspiration than a business man's wife. The story is vividly told, with a rather skillful mingling of idealism and realism.

NIGERIAN FOLK STORIES

"FOLK STORIES from Southern Nigeria" (Longmans, Green & Co., $1.50) by Elphinstone Dayrell, District Commissioner for the West African Province, records the customs and beliefs of primitive tribes, of whose folklore we have heretofore had scant knowledge. We sympathize strongly with Mr. Andrew Lang, who says in his introductory comment that they appeal to the anthropologist within him no less than to the lover of what children and older people call "fairy-tales." They are full of strange, barbaric customs, presented, however, in such a casual matter-of-fact way that the reader is likely to be amused even more than repelled. Many of the plots, like the tales of the natives of Australia, reveal the belief that once no line was drawn between man and the lower animals. Some of the legends present the ancient fashion of animal parentage, others take their place in the "Br'er Rabbit" class, and still others belong to what Mr. Lang aptly calls "Just So Stories": myths to explain the ways of animals. Now and then one comes upon something which seems highly original, as in "The Disobedient Daughter Who Married a Skull"; but more often the tales are merely varied, if unusual, forms of stories that have been told the world over. Occasionally a rough but ingenuous moral is pointed out, as in the case of "Never lend money; you only make a dangerous enemy."

The most striking point throughout the legends is always the placid, almost good-natured telling of horrible cruelties. Some of these deal with poisoning, human sacrifices and cannibalism. It seems unlikely that the folklore of West Africa will ever be made over into food for babes.

FOR HOUSE-BUILDERS

NEW EDITIONS of three books that have been favorably known for some time to contractors and builders have just been issued by the David Williams Co., 14 Park Place. William Arthur's "The New Building Estimator" ($2.50) is a third edition, revised and much enlarged, with prices brought up to date and including much new tabulated matter. The book is an outgrowth of "The Building Estimator," which ran through four editions in as many years. It offers a practical guide to estimating the cost of labor and material in building construction, from excavation to finish.

I. P. Hicks's "Builder's Guide" ($1) is an edition, revised and enlarged, of the twentieth thousand of that work. Its system of estimating the cost of material and labor offers a comprehensive guide to those engaged in the various branches of the building trade. Numerous drawings illustrate the author's meaning.

The eighth edition of Fred T. Hodgson's "Estimating Frame and Brick Houses" ($1) has been revised upon an enlarged and improved basis and brought into harmony with present methods and current prices. The author has endeavored so to construct it that it will be found useful as a basis for making estimates in any part of the United States.

VIEWS OF READERS

Prof. James and His Philosophy

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

The death of Prof. William James removes one of our foremost men of science—a scholar, psychologist and philosopher, a charming essayist, the founder and vigorous exponent of a philosophical system which, whatever its future, bids fair to create for its author a permanent place amongst the founders of systems of thought. Like most American celebrities of the past, the stamp of the pioneer was indelibly graven upon him, as upon the physical pioneer of a rough, undeveloped land—by force of circumstances a Jack-of-all-trades, who tries his hand at many unrelated tasks.

Beginning his career with the study of plants and fishes under Agassiz, exchanging this, later on, for the study of medicine, in which he graduated and received the degree of M. D., William James became an instructor, afterwards a professor of comparative anatomy and physiology, afterwards of philosophy, then of psychology, and again of philosophy, which ever after remained his special study. If his "Principles of Psychology" (1890) shed the refulgence of fame upon its author by becoming a widely-used text book at school and college, yet it was his philosophical researches and studies, and his strikingly original system as presented in his "Pragmatism: a New Name for Some Old Ways of Thinking," that won for him a permanent place among the moulders of human thought—if such a place he is to have. It is indeed curious that the man who made his début in the world of letters with his thesis on "Great Men, Great Thoughts, and the Environment," in which he points out the influence of the environment upon the genius and creations of man, should himself in his later years have verified the theories promulgated in his early youth, by the elaboration of a philosophical system which holds that "that only is true which works" in real, practical life—a system which would fain measure everything, even emotion and thought, with the yardstick of the practical.

For, who would deny that Prof. James, living in a land chiefly distinguished for its industry and commerce, and the tone and view of practical utility seen in everything, as distinct from the ideological point of view that still largely prevails in most European lands, should be, more or less, consciously or unconsciously, influenced by his environment, and be led to propound his famous theory of thought which has aroused such a storm of discussion and become the bone of contention among philosophers? And to this view, emanating from and tracing its source to the practical matter-of-fact view of the man of the world, should also be added—howsoever unrelated the two views of life may at first glance seem to be—the view and outlook of the stern-visaged, God-fearing New England Puritan, full of mysticism and rigorous, rigid faith, who sees the finger of God in all that's about him, and purpose, aim and utility writ large on everything that his eye beholds. No idle, purposeless beauty, no waste of Nature's resources for the mere gratification of the senses, but worship, service and reward, use and exploitation are the aims and ends of all things in creation. Therefore, did the Puritan look with contemptuous disdain upon the frivolous works of the Renaissance, valued not its paintings, sculptures and rhythmic verses and sweet lyrics which, from his own peculiar point of view, served no useful purpose in life.

Still, in justice to its author, be it said that "Pragmatism," with the defining phrase of all being "true which works," is, for all that, as yet an ambiguous term, admitting of many qualifications and interpretations, as it depends, after all, a great deal upon what is exactly meant by the term "work," whether practical returns in mere dollars and cents and bodily comforts, or that which, also, "works," and contributes to produce something higher and nobler—the abstract pleasures and enjoyments which are only within the purview of the highly-attuned soul of the cultured man, and which would not be quite as bad as most of Prof. James's critics were led to believe. In the event of our acceptance of the former, and strictly literal, interpretations, we should, of course, be driven to say, with one of Turgeneff's heroes, that a "pair of boots are of more actual value than a frieze or a bas-relief by Michael Angelo, or the Madonna of Raphael"; or that, for instance, the delectable products of the American muck-raking magazine are of greater value than the exquisite creations of Shakespeare or the phantasies of "Paradise Lost"; while the latter interpretation would give us more latitude and would include the great works of the masters, which are in themselves conducive to a better life, or, by instilling in us an appreciation of the beautiful and noble, convert us, indirectly, into more ethically-perfect creatures; this, in turn, being bound to react upon conduct and deed, though beauty, as such, is not a desideratum.

And yet, for all that, we shall not be in the least surprised if, on some day in the not very remote future, we shall behold his theory completely overthrown into the dust, and pure speculative philosophy, the pursuit of the studies and inquiries into the realms of the abstract and undemonstrable—sciences which can not be turned to any practical uses and yet exert a great fascination over the mind of man, which is ever curious to peer beneath the tight lid of mystery that enshrouds nature and her forces—will be persisted in just as much as, if not more than, they were in all ages since man became a deliberating, cogitating creature. And what is Prof. James' own delving into the absurdities of spiritualism, in his old age, but a vindication of the truth of this assertion? HAROLD BERMAN.

Mr. Luffmann and His Spain

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

Referring to a letter on Mr. Luffmann's "Quiet Days in Spain," which appeared in your issue of Sept. 10 over the signature of Andrew J. Shipman, I would suggest that the difficulty with your correspondent seems to be that he knows Spain from official reports and church statistics, while Mr. Luffmann knows from actual experience and intimate personal contact. At the same time Mr. Shipman is so vague in his somewhat violent abuse that it is not quite clear in the greater part of his letter whether it is your review or Mr. Luffmann's book against which he is inveighing. However, he does definitely quote one paragraph of the author's for attack—viz.: "All decrees are of a suppressive character; press censorship, no public meeting, no free education, no unions or alliances, no emigration without permit, no petitions for work or demonstrations against rapacious authority"—and then goes on to remark that the "whole statement is false," supporting this comprehensive "lie direct" by the assertion that meetings of strikers have taken place and that there are thousands of free schools in operation. Now, of course, Mr. Luffmann's meaning is that there are no meetings allowed without Government sanction, and if strikers choose to meet without it, it will hardly be clear to the ordinary mind how this invalidates Mr. Luffmann's statement, for we all know that in Spain, as in some other countries, it is easier for the Government to make a decree than to enforce it.

With regard to the education question, probably Mr. Luffmann, as an Australian college professor, and Mr. Shipman, as a Catholic, mean different things by the words, "free education"; for, of course, the schools of which the latter speaks are manned and absolutely controlled by the Church.

Mr. Shipman again says, with some heat, that the trouble in Spain is an economic one, not a religious one, and if he had taken the trouble to read Mr. Luffmann's preface through he would have seen that this is precisely Mr. Luffmann's own standpoint. "Poverty is the most painful and haunting fact in Spain," the author says in one place; in another, "The blight of Spain is her system of government"; and in yet another, "She could produce adventurers by the thousand where she could not raise a score of administrators, and the characteristic still holds good." And although, as a matter of fact, he does imply that the Church stands in the way of free institutions, even Mr. Shipman will hardly hope to be able to assert that it does not; while the effect of the large number of monasteries and convents in the country which pay no taxes, receive large revenues from bequests and charity, and then by operating laundries and similar undertakings take the bread out of the mouths of the poorest class, really brings the Church well into the economic question, altogether apart from the official revenue it receives.

But the grand mistake in Mr. Shipman's letter is the point of view. He seems to think "Quiet Days in Spain" ought to be an encyclopaedic handbook on that country, full of statistical information, with every fact guaranteed by a notary's seal, whereas it is a book obviously written for the pleasure of the reader rather than his instruction. It is a humorous, sympathetic story of a long tramp among interesting people, in interesting scenes, and not a learned treatise.

At the same time, I am bound to say that recently in reading a new book just published by Messrs. Unwin of London, under the title of "Spain from Within", written by Mr. Rafael Shaw (who has been a resident of the country for years), I was astonished to see how wonderfully Mr. Luffmann's rendering of the Spanish temperament and his descriptions of their daily life are borne out by this professedly exact and informing volume of Mr. Shaw's.

Mr. Shipman makes one solitary good point in his letter, and that is that some of Mr. Luffmann's Spanish words are misspelt; but his deduction that Mr. Luffmann knows no Spanish is neither charitable nor necessary as, fifteen years ago, Mr. Luffmann thoroughly demonstrated his familiarity with Spanish in his first book, "A Vagabond in Spain."

"Macbeth," Macaulay and O. Henry

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

In to-day's REVIEW it is stated that it would be a good plan to select the three books one would like to retain, if one had to give up all others. Doubtless many of us have our favorites—those books which, like a wine growing better with age, afford greater pleasure as they are reread. Mark Twain had his favorite—Carlyle's French Revolution; Milton his Bible, and Ruskin his Milton. The books which a well-read man may prefer may or may not be acknowledged classics. Very frequently they are obscure, or even members of the substrata of literature. Carlyle greedily absorbed the most vivid, thrilling melodramas. Many of us have a secret hankering and affection for detective stories—the modern substitutes for the "thrillers" of the eighteenth century.

So it is that our three favorite books may well be a most peculiar trio. Our individual choice may easily astonish others. Some will hypocritically balk at short stories, detective stories and the like. Others will pedantically select the classics. Indeed, a third class will choose a combination. That class can do no better than take one of Shakespeare's dramas. My choice (quite evidently of the third class) is no doubt at variance with others' opinions. It is "Macbeth," Macaulay's Essays, and O. Henry's short stories.

The Work of the Y. M. C. A. Press

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

We thank you very heartily for your fair and helpful review of our book "At Home in the Water." Will you kindly give careful attention to the following statement? You have attributed the publication of that book to the Y. M. C. A. of New York, whereas it is published, as the title page plainly states, by the Y. M. C. A. Press. This is the trade name of the International Committee of Young Men's Christian Associations, an organization covering the whole of North America and extending in its activities into the Far East and throughout the world. The International Committee has published books for many years and has built up a series of non-sectarian Bible study courses which has often been declared by competent critics the best series issued by any house. This and other books have had a large sale, but the fact that almost no books of a general character have been issued has kept this publishing house from becoming popularly known. In the last few years, since the International Committee entered the new building given for its use at 124 East Twenty-eighth Street, there has been considerable expansion in the activities of the Y. M. C. A. Press. Through it are issued all the supplies—leaflets, charts and text-books used in teaching English to foreigners by the system of Dr. Peter Roberts, which was noticed on the front page of the TIMES REVIEW a few weeks ago.

This International Committee is a servant of all the associations, and no more closely related to the New York City Association than to that in Spokane. The New York City Associations do sometimes issue books, which should not be confused with the general publications for the whole continent.

"Reminiscences of Rosa Bonheur"

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

Your London correspondent announces my forthcoming book as "The Reminiscences of Rosa Bonheur." The definite article in the title gives an erroneous idea of the scope of the book. The exact title is "Reminiscences of Rosa Bonheur,"—i. e., the reminiscences of her friends concerning her. The only autobiographical feature of the volume will be the two long chapters of Rosa Bonheur's letters, where the great artist reveals all the varied characteristics of her complex and original nature. LITERARY NOTES FROM BOSTON

Lilian Whiting's Biography of Her Friend Louise Chandler Moulton—A Veteran Lawyer's Recollections.

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—In any case, Miss Lilian Whiting's "Louise Chandler Moulton, Poet and Friend," to be published to-morrow, would be attentively read, but psychologists and those humbler observers who note their own emotions and consequent behavior, will perceive that the author has evidently felt one of those unaccountable accessions of a beloved person's distinguishing qualities sometimes experienced by his friends after his death. Miss Whiting has written many volumes in memory of persons well known to her, either directly or through intimate friends, and all of them have been kindly and some reverential, but it is not too much to say that this book seems as if it would have been exactly what it is had Mrs. Moulton written it as a memorial of her twin self, and that Miss Whiting's mind has been intent upon the subject for some months does not seem altogether to account for the likeness. She has not become in the smallest degree poetical; it is a spiritual and sentimental; not a mental, resemblance that looks out from her pages, and fills one with desire for an explanation. No doubt a dozen explanations will be given by adepts in such matters, and meantime the book will be found not only a biography, but a fair sketch of the literary Boston of the half century preceding Mrs. Moulton's death in 1908, and a little treasury of characteristic letters and dedications from the foremost American and British authors.

Mrs. Moulton bequeathed to the Boston Public Library the autograph copies of books presented to her by their authors and others, and, by her request, Professor Arlo Bates collected them, and Miss Whiting prints his interesting description of them. Mrs. Moulton's daughter gave her mother's collection of autograph letters to the Congressional Library; and so, with her books and Miss Whiting's biography, she has a four-fold visible memorial.

Besides this book, Messrs. Little, Brown & Co. will publish to-morrow "A Lawyer's Recollections in and Out of Court," by Mr. George A. Torrey, who was born in Fitchburg in 1838, three years later than Mrs. Moulton; was graduated from Harvard in 1859, spent three terms at the law school and then entered upon a forty years' term of practice, emerging with a rare collection of good stories, some of which ornament this volume. He has thought it worth while to write of the manners and customs prevalent in his youth, and also of prices and expenses, and his observations are valuable. The changes recorded in the manners of the bar will be especially interesting to jurists.

Mr. Thomas F. O'Flynn's "The Story of Worcester" is not only a history of the city, but a guide to it, and contains an unexpected quantity of curious detail, such as the derivations of street names, and the history of the "meeting-houses," which until very recently were centres of local interest in Worcester as everywhere else in New England.

Messrs. Houghton Mifflin Co. will publish two editions of Alice Brown's "John Winterbourn's Family" on Saturday of next week instead of waiting until October. It is the longest story yet written by Miss Brown, and has not been published in any magazine. Constable & Co. will print a London edition of Mr. Harry James Smith's "Enchanted Ground" and Musson & Co. of Toronto will issue a Canadian edition. An Australian edition of "When Love Calls Men to Arms" is announced by Messrs. Small, Maynard & Co.

Mr. Luther G. Hornby, whose etchings illustrate Mr. Claude C. Washburne's "Pages from the Book of Paris," had no difficulty in sketching his subjects in the French capital, but in Africa he conceals pencil and paper under an Arab burnous, and so avoids the angry suspicion of the superstitious native. He is not yet twenty-eight years old.

Among the many novels promised by the C. M. Clark Publishing Co. are "Caleb Koons," by Mr. Russell Kelso Carter, whose "Amor Victor" and "Whom God Hath Not Joined" appeared over the pseudonym of "On Kenyon." In his new book, the chief character is a shrewd and witty lawyer, and the principal incident a mysterious disappearance. A Civil War story entitled "Jonas Hawley," by Mr. William W. Pennell, is also on the Company's list.

Mrs. Richard G. Badger will publish this autumn "The Story of the Soil," an agricultural and economical novel by Prof. Cyril G. Hopkins of the College of Agriculture of the University of Illinois. The story will instruct the reader in problems of the soil now directly facing all countries in which the population is increasing, and indirectly concerning all countries.

The W. A. Wilde Co. will bring out this year a Panama Canal story for boys, a tale by Mr. Hugh C. Weir, intended to give some conception of a piece of engineering greatly misunderstood by children in general, partly because Central and South America receive small attention in many schools, partly because the Isthmus looks so narrow on the map. The title is "With the Flag in Panama."

Messrs. Dana Estes & Co. announce "The Glad Lady," a story of a vacation spent in northern Spain in a region not much frequented by tourists. There are two love-stories in the book, one of the Glad Lady herself the others of the juniors to whom she has played good angel. The author is the girls' favorite, Miss Amy Blanchard.

STEPHENSON BROWNE.

EDUCATIONAL BOOKS

MESSRS. A. C. MCCLURG & Co., who have developed their general publishing business during the past few years to a very large extent, have entered the educational field. They will issue at once two books in English, "Elementary Lessons in English" and "Advanced Lessons in English," written by Professor George C. Howland of the University of Chicago, and they have engaged to take charge of this branch of their publishing business Mr. C. E. Ricketts, who has been for many years connected with one of the largest school-book houses in the country.

"AN UNUSUAL NOVEL"

DAVID GRAHAM PHILLIPS'

novels are the ones of which a well-known person once said: "They ought either to be suppressed or everybody should be forced to read them, and to be quite frank, I don't really know just which!" No book by this author better exemplifies the above statement than his latest novel.

THE HUSBAND'S STORY

gives not only a faithfully true picture of the social climber in American womanhood—the Passaic undertaker's daughter who climbs into English society and European château life, but also the most cold-blooded, accurate presentation of a certain type of money-making, hard working, commercial man.

QUERIES AND ANSWERS FROM READERS

"The Old Canoe," by Gen. Albert Pike—Theodor Herzl, Late Leader of Political Zionism—Thackeray's Comments on the Heenan-Sayers Prizefight Recalled—"A Name in the Sand," by Hannah Flagg Gould

COMMUNICATIONS intended for this column should be written on one side of the paper only. They must contain the name and address of the writer, though, if preferred by the inquirer, initials only will be printed. While the endeavor will be made to answer all queries of interest in the order in which they are received, this cannot always be accomplished.

H. L. C.—Will you kindly furnish me with the poem entitled "The Old Canoe," written, I think, by Albert Pike, who before his death lived in Washington, D. C. The first verse is as follows:

Where the rocks are gray
And the shore is steep
And the waters below look dark and deep;
Where the rugged pine in its lonely pride
Leans gloomily over the murky tide;
Where the reeds and rushes are long and rank
And the weeds grow thick on the winding bank;
Where the shadows are heavy the whole day through
There lies at its moorings the old canoe.

The first two lines of the first stanza should read:

"Where the rocks are gray and the shore is steep,
Where the waters below look dark and deep."

The next to the last line of the first stanza should read:

"Where the shadow is heavy the whole day through."

We give the rest of the poem in full:

The useless paddles are idly dropped,
Like a sea bird's wings, that the storm has lopped,
And crossed on the railing, one o'er one,
Like the folded hands when life's work is done.
While busily back and forth between
The spider stretches his silvery screen,
And the solemn owl, with the dull "too-whoo,"
Settles down on the side of the old canoe.

The stern, half-sunk in the slimy wave,
Rots slowly away in its living grave;
And the green moss creeps o'er its dull decay,
Hiding its moldering dust away,
Like the hand that plants o'er the tomb a flower,
Or the ivy, that mantles the falling tower;
While many a blossom of loveliest hue
Springs up o'er the stern of the old canoe.

The currentless waters are dead and still,
But the twilight wind plays with the boat at will;
And lazily, in and out again,
It floats the length of the rusty chain,
Like the weary march of the hands of time
That meet and part at the noontide chime,
And the shore is kissed at each turning anew,
And the dipping bow of the old canoe.

Oh! many a time, with careless hand,
I have pushed it away from the pebbly strand,
And paddled it down where the stream runs quick,
Where the whirls are wild and the eddies are thick,
And laughed, as I leaned o'er the rocking side,
And looked below in the broken tide
To see that the faces and boats were two,
That were mirrored back from the old canoe.

But now, as I lean o'er the crumbling side,
And look below in the sluggish tide,
The face that I see there is graver grown,
And the laugh that I hear has a soberer tone,
And the hands, that lent to the light skiff wings,
Have grown familiar with sterner things;
But I love to think of the hours that sped
As I rocked where the whirls their white spray shed,
Ere the blossom waved, or the green grass grew,
O'er the moldering stern of the old canoe.

J. LOUCHEIM.—Kindly give me some information regarding Dr. Theodor Herzl author of the book "Altneuland," his other works, if any, and if there is any translation of them in English.

Theodor Herzl, leader of political Zionism, was born in Budapest in 1860. In his boyhood he removed to Vienna. He studied law, but devoted himself almost exclusively to journalism and literature. For a long time he was on the staff of the Vienna Neue Freie Presse, and also wrote plays for the Viennese stage. In 1895 he produced "Der Judenstaat," in which he advocated the founding in Palestine of an autonomous Jewish State, under the suzerainty of Turkey. An English translation of this work appeared in April, 1896. In 1897 he founded "Die Welt" of Vienna. He planned the first Zionist Congress, and was elected its President. He wrote a play, "Das Neue Ghetto," in which he depicted the large Jewish element which combated his views. His latest work, "Altneuland," is devoted to Zionism. He died in 1904.

Mrs. M. T. R.—After the tragedy at Reno, when we could once more read the newspapers in calmness, I noted, in one editorial, the following: "Surely no Thackeray will ever drip enthusiasm over the fight at Reno yesterday, or wish he were an absolute King, so that he could confer knighthood upon either of the contestants."

Somehow this reference escapes me, yet I would be glad to read any description by Thackeray of a similar contest, and grateful for any assistance in finding it.

The reference in the editorial quoted by our correspondent is to the sketch written by Thackeray apropos of the noted prizefight which took place at Farnborough, England, on April 17, 1860, between Tom Sayers, the champion of England, and John C. Heenan, a California boxer, known as the "Benicia Boy." The sketch will be found in "The Roundabout Papers" under the title "On Some Late Great Victories."

JOSEPH L. BARNUM.—A friendly controversy has arisen between a few friends with regard to the authorship of a poem entitled "A Name in the Sand," published sometime during the years 1863 and 1864, the first few lines of which poem run as follows:

Alone I walked the ocean strand,
A pearly shell was in my hand.
I stooped and wrote upon the sand,
My name, the year, the day.

and, as we have been unable to reach a satisfactory conclusion, it has been suggested that we leave the matter to you for final decision, believing that with your extensive knowledge of such matters you will be able, very easily, to settle the question.

The author's name is Hannah Flagg Gould, and the poem is as follows:

A NAME IN THE SAND.

Alone I walked the ocean strand;
A pearly shell was in my hand;
I stooped and wrote upon the sand
My name—the year—the day.
As onward from the spot I passed,
One lingering look behind I cast;
A wave came rolling high and fast,
And washed my lines away.

And so, methought, 'twill shortly be
With every mark on earth from me;
A wave of dark oblivion's sea
Will sweep across the place
Where I have trod the sandy shore
Of time, and been, to be no more,
Of me—my day—the name I bore,
To leave nor track nor trace.

And yet with Him who counts the sands,
And holds the waters in His hands,
I know a lasting record stands
Inscribed against my name,
Of all this mortal part has wrought,
Of all this thinking soul has thought,
And from these fleeting moments caught
For glory or for shame.

Miss Gould was born at Lancaster, Mass., in 1789, and was a sister of Benjamin Apthorp Gould, the classical scholar. She resided for the greater part of her life at Newburyport, where she died in 1865. In 1832 she published a volume of poems, which originally had appeared in the periodicals of the day. In 1835 a second volume was issued, and in 1841 a third volume. In 1846 she published a collection of her prose articles, under the title of "Gathered Leaves, or Miscellaneous Papers," and in 1850, a volume of "New Poems," "The Diosma," a volume of poems selected and original, and "The Youths' Coronal," a book for little people. In 1853 she published "The Mother's Dream and Other Poems." One of our readers may know in which one of these volumes of poems "A Name in the Sand" first appeared.

EDITH K. THOMPSON.—Kindly give me the following poem in full, with the author's name:

I sat alone with my conscience,
In a place where time had ceased.

The last two lines are:

I care not what the judgment may be
To sit alone with my conscience, is judgment enough for me.

"The poem "Alone with My Conscience" asked for by our correspondent is given below. We do not know the name of the author:

I sat alone with my conscience
In a place where time had ceased,
And we talked of my former living
In the land where the years increased.
And I felt I should have to answer
The question it put to me,
And to face the answers and questions
Through all eternity.

The Ghosts of forgotten actions
Came floating before my sight,
And things that I thought were dead things
Were alive with terrible might.
And the vision of all my past life
Was an awful thing to face,
Alone with my conscience sitting
In that solemn silent place.

And I thought of a faraway warning,
Of a sorrow that was to be mine,
In a land that was then the future
But now is the present time.
And I thought of my former thinking
Of the judgment day to be;
But sitting alone with my conscience
Seemed judgment enough for me.

And I wondered if there was a future
To this land beyond the grave;
But no one gave me an answer,
And no one came to save.
Then I felt the future was present,
And the present would never go by
For it was but the thought of my past life
Growing into eternity.

Then I woke from my timely dreaming
And the vision passed away,
And I knew that the far-off warning
Was a warning of yesterday;
And I pray that I may not forget it,
In this land before the grave,
That I may not cry in the future
And no one come to save.

And so I have learned a lesson
Which I ought to have known before,
And which, though I learned it dreaming,
I hope to forget no more.
So I sit alone with my conscience
In the place where the years increase,
And I try to remember the future,
In the land where time will cease.

And I know of future judgment
How dreadful soe'er it be,
That to sit alone with my conscience
Will be judgment enough for me.

E. S.—I beg you will tell me where to find the first of Prof. Wallace's papers on his new Shakespeare discoveries, the one relating to records in the Ostler-Hemings suit, published in some magazine of October, last year.

In the Living Age of Nov. 13, 1909, there was published an article by Charles William Wallace entitled "Shakespeare Discoveries of Wallace." This is probably the article referred to by our correspondent.

E. M. OSBORNE.—From what poem is the following extract?

Thou hast conquered, Oh, pale Galilean—
The world has grown gray at thy breath.

It is from Algernon C. Swinburne's "Hymn to Proserpine."

Answers From Readers

A. L. H.—In your issue of July 23 the following poem was asked for:

A WOMAN'S ANSWER.

"Love thee!" Thou can'st not ask of me
So freely as I fain would give;
'Tis woman's great necessity
To love so long as she shall live.
Therefore, if thou do'st worthy prove
I cannot choose but give thee love.

"Honor thee!" By her reverence
The truest woman best is known;
She needs must honor where she finds
A nature loftier than her own.
I shall not turn from thee away
Unless I find my idol clay!

"Obey!" Doth not the stronger will
The weaker govern and restrain?
Most sweet obedience woman yields
Where wisdom, power, and manhood reign
I'll give thee, if thou can'st control
The meek submission of my soul!

Henceforward all my life shall be Molded and fashioned by thine own
If wisdom, power, and constancy
In all thy words and deeds are shown.
Whether my vow be yea or nay,
I'll "love, honor, and obey."

PHOEBE CARY.

ETHEL B. COOK.—Having read with pleasure the poem, "The White Rose Out of Reach," sent by Miss M. S. Elliot, in answer to Mrs. M. Bernstein's appeal on May 7, I am inclosing the poem, "The Little Wild White Rose," which I think is the poem looked for:

THE LITTLE WILD WHITE ROSE.

It was peeping through the brambles
The little wild white rose,
Where the hawthorn hedge was planted
My garden to inclose.
Beyond was fern or heather
On the breezy open moor;
Within were sun and shelter
And the wealth of beauty's store;
And I did not heed the fragrance
Of flower or of tree,
For my eye was on that rosebud,
And it grew too high for me.

In vain I strove to reach it,
Through the tangled mass of green;
It only smiled and nodded
Behind its stormy screen.
Yet through that Summer morning
I lingered near the spot;
Oh! why do things look sweeter
When we possess them not?
My garden beds were blooming,
But all that I could see
Was that mocking little white rose
Hanging—too high for me.

So, in life's wider garden,
Are buds of promise too—
Beyond our reach to gather,
But not beyond our view.
And, like the little charmer
That tempted me astray,
They steal out half the brightness
Of many a Summer day.
Oh! hearts that fail for longing
For some forbidden tree,
Look up and learn the lesson
From my white rose and me.

'Tis wiser far to number
The blossoms at my feet
Than ever to be sighing
For just one bud more sweet.
My sunbeams and my shadows
Fall from a pierced hand;
I can better trust His wisdom,
Since His heart I understand.
And maybe in the morning,
When His blessed face I see,
He will tell me why my white rose
Grew just too high for me.

ELIZA FLETCHER.

CHARLES. P. BUTLER.—In your issue of July 30 E. Adelaid Hahn states that eight lines of verse beginning

The twilight hours, like birds, flew by,

about which H. F. Albert inquired in yours of June 25 comprise the entire poem called "Twilight at Sea," by Amelia B. Welby, a sketch of whose life you published in the issue last named. In "Poems by Amelia" (Appletons, New York, 1846), which I have just consulted at the Montague Branch of the Brooklyn Public Library, the lines quoted form the fourth stanza of a poem, entitled "Musings," containing ten stanzas, beginning—

I wandered out one summer night,
'Twas when my years were few.

The correct quotation of the fourth stanza is—

The twilight hours, like birds, flew by,
As lightly and as free;
Ten thousand stars were in the sky,
Ten thousand in the sea;
For every wave, with dimpled face,
That leaped upon the air,
Had caught a star in its embrace
And held it trembling there.

W. P. A.—The hymn, "When Winds Are Raging," as given by "H. J. H.," in your issue of Aug. 13, has suffered badly at the hands of the hymn-tinkers. In a somewhat late Universalist Hymnal it has suffered more severely still. In the version you print the following changes should be made:

Second verse should read—

"Far, far beneath, the noise of tempests dieth
And silver waves chime ever peacefully."

Third verse should read—

"So to the heart that knows Thy love, O Purest."

Fifth verse should read—

"O rest of rests! O peace serene, eternal!
Thou ever livest, and Thou changest never.
And in the secret of Thy presence dwelleth

The last four of the above lines are quoted by Bartlett in his edition of 1882, page 567, and the name of the poem is there given as "Musings."

In the 1904 edition of Bartlett the same quotation appears on page 681, and the name of the poem is again given as "Musings." In Edmund C. Stedman's "American Anthology," however, the poem is called "Twilight at Sea," and consists of only eight lines, as stated by

E. Adelaide Hahn. Any one consulting Stedman's work would naturally suppose that the lines appearing there comprised all of Mrs. Amelia B. (Coppuck) Welby's poem.

HENRY FORREST.—Your statement is correct in every particular as to "Lord" Timothy Dexter, but add that the main source of his wealth was the shipload of warming pans he "sent to India" (the West Indies). Somebody, to make sport of him, advised him that the West Indies was a bitterly cold country, and that a cargo of warming pans would sell "like hot cakes." They did sell "like hot cakes," for they landed at Jamaica and were used to dip the scum off the rum vats —were exactly adapted to that purpose. "Lord" Timothy cleared $10,000 by the venture and had the laugh on his ridiculers.

We knew of the interesting facts about "Lord" Dexter given by our correspondent, but omitted them from our sketch of the eccentric New England merchant for want of room. The warming pan transaction was one of the sources of his wealth, but was it the main source?

M. FAY PEIRCE—I was delighted with the resurgence of the well-remembered "Life Is a Strife" through Miss Palmer's appeal. An uncle of mine used to sing it to his nephews and nieces to a very lilting tune. It had three verses, and the first four lines of the first one formed a refrain at the end of each. My uncle prized it as the most ideal specimen of mixed metaphor he had ever met. He gave it as follows:

Life is a strife,
'Tis a bubble, 'tis a dream,
And man is but a little boat
That paddles down the stream.
And Pleasure is the waterman
That floats us down the tide,
The passengers are smiling Joy
With Sorrow close beside.

Life is a strife,
'Tis a bubble, 'tis a dream,
And man is but a little boat
That paddles down the stream.

Sailing with the gale
We're oft inclined to veer,
But if Good Judgment takes the helm
Through life we'll gayly steer;
And when Old Age with lagging stride
Shall tow our boat along,
'Tis then, alas, that we are forced
To quit this busy throng.

Life is a strife, &c.

O when again we sail
O'er these waters clear and bright,
May there be as many smiling eyes
As we see here to-night;
For dear Woman is the object
Of affection and of care,
And the waterman of life's a fool
If we don't take a Fair!

Life is a strife, &c.

ALONZO RICE.—In your issue of July 30 E. Adelaide Hahn in reply to a request of H. F. Albert states that the poem containing the line, "The twilight hours like birds flew by," has but eight lines. The entire poem is given in the Magazine of Poetry, April, 1892. I send a copy.

The poem is too long to print in these columns. If H. F. Albert will send us his address we shall be pleased to mail him the poem.

JOSEPH WELLS, Jr.—I inclose a copy of the lines asked for by F. E. Mayer, in your issue of Aug. 13. They are known as "The Irish Jubilee." The author is unknown to me, though I have had a typewritten copy of it in my possession for several years.

"The Irish Jubilee" is of such length that we cannot find room in these columns for it. The copy which our correspondent has sent us has been mailed to F. E. Mayer. "Willie Wildwave" says that it is in Delaney's Song Book No. 1, that the words are by James Thornton, that the music is by Charles B. Lawlor, and that the song was issued by M. Witmark & Sons and copyrighted in 1890. The appeal was answered also by "C. M. H.," Norwalk, Conn.; "H. J. R.," Newark, N. J.

W. J. R.—Your replies to correspondents are usually so accurate that when a slip occurs it is to be assumed that you desire correction. Let this, then, be my apology. In your issue of Aug. 20, replying to G. Dore Cogswell, you state that Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper was evidently meant instead of Illustrated Monthly. Also that a Popular Monthly was not issued until 1876. I have in my library, I believe, all of the bound volumes of Frank Leslie's New Family Magazine. This began to be published Jan. 1, 1857. Doubtless it was merged in the "Popular." It is evidently the grandfather (to use that figure) of the present American Magazine.

G. Dore Cogswell asked the value of "Frank Leslie's Illustrated Monthly" for the years 1855-56-57-59. He did not, therefore, mean "Frank Leslie's New Family Magazine," which, according to "W. J. R.," was not published until 1857. Our answer was correct—that he evidently meant "Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper," instead of "Frank Leslie's Illustrated Monthly."

Appeals To Readers

GRACE MacGOWAN COOKE.—Can any of your readers tell me of a children's play made from "Alice in Wonderland?" It seems to me that I heard of such a dramatic arrangement some time ago, and now as we have the thoughts of presenting the book dramatically I should like to hunt up this volume.

KATHERINE AITKEN.—Perhaps some reader of your paper can tell me the name of the publisher or where I can procure a copy of "The Lollards," a story which I read a good many years ago from a Sunday school library.

I would like also to obtain a copy of "Fables and Allegories," stories for children, with a moral at the close. One of the long stories was entitled "The Lantern People" and another "The Forest People."

EDITH K. THOMPSON—Can any kind reader give me the poem the first lines of which are:

"Between eyes and nose a strange contest arose,
The spectacles set them unhappily wrong.
The point of dispute was, as all the world knows,
To which the said spectacles ought to belong"?

A. B. S.—Will some one kindly tell me who wrote the following lines?

LIFE.

Life—what is it?
Ah, who knows?
Just a visit,
I suppose.
Joy and sorrow
For a day,
Then to-morrow
We're away.
Youth and morning,
Manhood, noon,
Age—the warning,
Night comes soon.
Shines a star to Light us; then
'Tis not far to Home again.

SEARCHER—Can any of your readers help me to find the following quotation:

* * * * The hero is not slain,
Though pierced and wounded, with a hundred scars"?

It appeared in the "Atlantic Monthly Calendar" for 1908 as a portion of some inspiring verses once contributed to that magazine.

RAND LEWIS—Can any one tell me who wrote the following lines and from where they were taken:

"How often must we learn this lesson?
Men cease to interest you when we find their limitations?

"The only sin is limitations. As soon as you once come up with a man's limitations it is all over with him. Has he talents? Has he knowledge? It boots not; infinitely alluring and attractive was he to you yesterday, a great hope, a sea to swim in; now you have found his shores, found it a pond, and you care not if you never see it again."

J. N. P.—Can any of your readers furnish me with a copy of the verses, written about forty years ago, anent the excitement over the Rev. Stephen H. Tyng, Jr., preaching in a Methodist Church in New Jersey. The first verse is:

"Oh, say, Brother Stubbs, have you heard how they talk
Of the horrid low churchman who is coming from York,
Who vows he will preach without any gown
In a Methodist meeting house here in our town?"

The verses were written by Peter Strong of Long Island.

J. L. SHILLING.—Who is the author of the following statement:

"Lest we forget that out of wild nature we are come; that our instincts are great, our reasons little; that the main current of our will is still like the green moving waters, and our reasoned choices like the flutter of foam on its surface; that we became citizens but yesterday and were bred in the wilderness."

SIDNEY H. MOORE.—Can any of your readers tell me where I can find a piece of Macaronic verse published several years ago, written in five languages, Latin, Greek, French, German, and English, and called, I think, "Ich bin dein."

L. K. S.—Can any one give me the complete poem that was published, I think, in the St. Nicholas some years ago, the first two verses of which were:

"The night was thick and hazy when the Picadilly Daisy
Carried down the crew and Captain in the sea,
And I think the water drowned them, for they never, never found them,
And I know they did not come ashore with me.

I was very sad and lonely when I found myself the only
Population on this cultivated shore;
But I built a little tavern in a little rocky cavern,
And I sit and look for people at the door."

H. E. R.—Will you kindly advise me if it is possible for me to secure the words of an old war song, the title of which I have forgotten, but two stanzas of which are as follows:

"Wounded and sorrowful,
Far from my home,
Sick, among strangers,
Uncared for, unknown.

Even the birds
That used sweetly to sing
Have swiftly and silently
Taken to wing."

PHILADELPHIA BOOK NEWS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—The edition of the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam, containing the illustrations and decorations of Sangorski and Sutcliffe, of which the American publisher is David McKay, is being distributed this week. It is one of the most elaborate and lavishly illustrated publications of recent years. The initials and border decorations emulate those of the illuminated manuscripts of the Middle Ages, and the colored illustrations can only be compared with dainty miniatures. One of the editions is bound in tooled vellum, a prize for collectors and connoisseurs.

Very different is another of this week's publications from the same house—a new number in Gilbert Patten's juvenile series dealing with the doings of "Clif Stirling." In the present book the hero is "Captain of the Nine," a sub-title which indicates the scope of the story.

A mine of material for juvenile readers will be found in the fall list of the Penn Publishing Co., the first numbers of which are ready. Girl readers will renew their friendship with "Betty Wales on the Campus," in which Margaret Warde carries her heroine further along in her college career. "A Little Princess of the Pines," by Aileen Cleveland Higgins, is occupied with adventures in the Minnesota lumber camps, iron mines, etc., in winter; and still another book of adventure for girls, by Grace M. Remick, tells of the doings of the "Glenlock Girls Abroad." "Peggy Owen, Patriot," by Lucy Foster Madison, will appeal to the historic taste, as it deals with Revolutionary days and the adventures of a daughter of a soldier in the patriot army, a prisoner in the hands of the British, among whom she meets Sir Henry Clinton, Tarleton, Benedict Arnold, and Gen. Gates. Boyish tastes will be catered to, along similar lines, in John T. McIntyre's "The Young Continentals at Bunker Hill." Other boys' books in preparation include "An Annapolis First Classman," by Commander Edward L. Beach; "A United States Midshipman in the Philippines," by Lieut. Commander Yates Stirling, Jr.; "A Senior Quarter-Back," by T. Truxton Hare, and "Captain of the School Team," by John Prescott Earl.

The Penn Co. are also about to bring out a mystery story, which is bound to attract much attention. It tells about "Ashton-Kirk, Investigator," an antiquary who delights in the disentanglement of mysteries. The author, John T. McIntyre, intimates that this is but the first of the great cases which occupied the attention of his hero, and he is said to succeed in arousing curiosity and in holding interest.

This week has been marked by the publication of a number of the more important of the books of the Lippincotts' fall list, and several of them exceed the promise of the preliminary announcements. This is especially the case with respect to Von Seidlitz's "A History of Japanese Color Prints," a handsome volume, making a serious contribution to the literature of the subject and embellished with many beautiful illustrations. "Ceramic Literature," compiled, classified and described by M. L. Solon, is an elaborate bibliography of the art of ceramics, which will appeal strongly to collectors and museum curators.

"Steamships and Their Story," by R. A. Fletcher, is uniform with Chatterton's work along similar lines but dealing with sailing ships. It will be not only a mine of information to the student of modern progress, but a graphic account of one of the most interesting and romantic phases of industrial and commercial development. The author has brought his subject up to date, discussing the turbines and the latest types of warships.

In the group of descriptive literature is Captain Stigand's account of his journey "To Abyssinia," "Douglas Sladen's voluminous work crammed with "Queer Things About Egypt" and a new and more popular edition of Harry De Windt's "Through Savage Europe," meaning, of course, the Balkans and Southern Russia.

A new edition of the "Swiss Family Robinson," edited by G. E. Mitton, and embellished by twelve full-page illustrations in color by Harry Rountree, is an attractive Lippincott publication this week. The pictures give the book a peculiar distinction, and the edition will be appreciated beyond the circle of juvenile readers for which it is particularly intended.

Charles Morris's patient industry has lately been turned into new channels, for the Lippincotts have brought out this week an "Industrial and Commercial Geography" of his preparation which will be of value as a school text-book. The same house has also ready a new edition in four volumes of Gladys Davidson's "Stories from the Opera," suitable for gift purposes.

NEW YORK LITERARY NOTES

Myrtle Reed Breaks New Ground in Her Latest Novel—New Books by Chesterton, Shaw and Others

Myrtle Reed's New Departure

MYRTLE REED'S new novel, "Master of the Vineyard," is out this week. Miss Reed holds a brief for those who believe in preserving the institutions of family and marriage at the expense of the transitory affinity and soul-mating business. She does this with much charm—even with compelling force. She overlays the conventional idea of duty with poetic attractiveness and furnishes it with abundance of ammunition for its campaign against trial marriages and the general disruption of society by sexuality and sentimentalism. How a legal marital bond may become idealized into permanence by an ephemeral passion is altogether an original theme for the author of "The Spinner in the Sun" and "Old Rose and Silver." It seems almost unnecessary to add that the Putnams are Miss Reed's publishers.

The Putnams will shortly publish "Monster-Land," by Ronald Quiz, a reprint of a delightfully tranquil child's story, famous half a century ago, the illustrations of which have been redrawn and enlarged from the originals. Next week the same house will also issue "Government Ownership of Railways," by Judge A. Van Wagenen. Above all, the author contends that, far from being a political menace, due to the vast civil service which Government ownership would entail, it would be a political blessing in that it would end the corrupting influence the public-service corporations now have on politicians and legislatures.

Mrs. Putnam on "The Lady"

Sturgis & Walton Co. are to publish early in October "The Lady of Different Times and Nations," by Emily James Putnam. It will be a fully illustrated volume, beginning with the Greek lady and ending with a sketch of the twentieth-century lady, all written in a style of lightness and grace over a substantial background of knowledge of the eternal feminine. Early in the same month these publishers will issue also "Cowboy Songs," collected and edited by John A. Lomax, Professor of English in the University of Texas. The music of some of the songs will be presented, and there will be an important chapter on the history of the American ballad, particularly in its Western phases and growth, which has been overlooked by the poetical anthologists of the classic East.

The woman's suffrage cause in this country may or may not receive consolation or encouragement from "The Suffragette," which Sturgis & Walton Co. will presently publish. It is from the pen of Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, who, with her mother, led the militant suffragists in their varied and not altogether bloodless assaults on the House of Commons and the members of the British Government. Miss Sylvia, however her dominant idiosyncrasy may be censured, is a young woman of talent and knowledge. She has won scholarships and has painted pictures, and her pen is as graceful and vigorous as her brush.

Arsene Lupin Again

Doubleday, Page & Co. have secured the book rights to the translation of Maurice Leblanc's "The Hollow Needle," which recently closed its serial run in the Popular Magazine. The story deals with further adventures of that arch-rogue but courteous gentleman, Arsène Lupin. In spite of the end of the story, the reader must not be led to believe that one has seen the last of him. This will be published Sept. 22, on which date will also be made two important contributions to the literature of, hygiene—"Making Life Worth While," by Herbert W. Fisher, and "The Healthful Art of Dancing," by Luther H. Gulick; together with Nellie McClung's "The Second Chance," a sequel to the popular "Sowing Seeds in Danny"; "The Red Magic Book," by A. and E. B. Knipe; G. D. Abraham's "Mountain Adventures"; and two other outdoor books in new editions by C. A. Reed, entitled "Water and Game Birds" and "The Flower Guide." This week Doubleday, Page & Co. are placing on sale "Whirligigs," by O. Henry—the last collection of Mr. Porter's stories of which he had the personal selection, and for which he chose the title, a few days before his death; "The Shears of Destiny," by Leroy Scott; "The Caravaners," by the author of "Elizabeth and Her German Garden"; a second volume of "Presidential Addresses and State Papers," by William H. Taft; "Children's Diet," by Louise E. Hogan, and Chester A. Reed's "Wild Flowers."

Peary's "The North Pole"

Sept. 26 has been set as the official date of publication of Robert E. Peary's "The North Pole: Its Discovery in 1909." As most people now know, both Theodore Roosevelt and Gilbert H. Grosvenor, the well-known geographer, contribute introductory matter to the book. The number of illustrations has been increased from 104 to 110, and eight of them will be in color. The same house has in active preparation an anonymous novel called "Too Many Women: A Bachelor's Story." It deals with the Bohemian as well as the social world of London, and the characters are evidently drawn from life. This fact may or may not account for its anonymity.

An American in Japan

Prof. George Trumbull Ladd of Yale University, a well-known author and lecturer, has gathered into a generously illustrated octavo his reminiscences and impressions of his three visits to Japan. The volume, entitled "Rare Days in Japan," has been sent to press by Dodd, Mead & Co. for publication this Fall. Prof. Ladd met many notable Japanese on each trip, and counted among his friends especially the late Prince Ito, who invited his assistance in Korea when acting as Resident General there; he has twice been decorated and received many times in audience by the Emperor of the Flowery Kingdom. His chapters are full of interesting information and comment on such matters as the Imperial Diet, the theatre, Court functions, gardens and garden parties, etc., while those describing remote rural sections and feudal towns give one a vivid idea of "old Japan."

Dr. Andrew D. White, the well-known diplomat, educator and historian, publishes a volume of essays through The Century Co. this week. It is called "Seven Great Statesmen"—Scarpi, Grotius, Thomasius, Turgot, Stein, Cavour and Bismarck. The Century Co. will also issue this month a new library edition of the monumental "Life of Napoleon Bonaparte," by William Milligan Sloane, from new plates. The original edition is now out of print and the new one, which will be issued on the 22d, will contain more than ten per cent. of entirely new matter. It will be in four octavo volumes of 500 pages each.

"Socialism and Superior Brains"

John Lane Co. are issuing this week George Bernard Shaw's new volume, "Socialism and Superior Brains," in which he speaks in his characteristic, vigorous manner of such matters as the "able" author, the "able" inventor, "Artificial Ability" and "How Little Really Goes to Ability." Other Lane publications are "Herbs and Apples," by Helen Hay Whitney; "Landscape Gardening Studies," by Samuel Parsons, whose work, especially in Central Park, is well known here; and "Attitudes and Avowals: With Some Retrospective Reviews," in which Richard Le Gallienne offers some new essays on "Books as Doctors," "The Profession of Poet," "The World and the Lover," etc. On Sept. 23 will come from the same press Oscar Wilde's "The Sphinx," the final draft of the manuscript of which is now in the British Museum.

"The Husband's Story"

David Graham Phillips's new novel, "The Husband's Story," is published this week by D. Appleton & Co. The story is written in the first person by a multi-millionaire, who is self-ostracised from society. Mr. Phillips explains in a preface that the multi-millionaire once did him a favor which he is now able to return by editing and publishing "The Husband's Story." This story involves the trials and tribulations of a woman getting into American and European society. It is the old story of the husband who works and the wife who plays. Two other novels will be issued by the Appletons before the end of the month. One is by Arthur Goodrich and the other by Frances Rumsey. The former, entitled "The Yardstick Man," deals with conventional, commonplace business life, the dissatisfaction of a childless wife, and an interloper. The latter novel, "Leonora," is the story of how a woman overcomes her inborn, conventional hatred of divorce.

Next Friday the Appletons will bring out "The Basutos," by Sir Godfrey Lagden, K. C. M. G., who lived among these interesting African natives for a long time. The work, in two volumes, shows great care on the part of the author as to detail and accuracy. Besides describing the life of the people, he gives a history of many of the colonial governments of South Africa, while relating frankly the causes that led up to the Boer war. Sir Godfrey provides a number of maps and many pictures. An October novel, also to bear the Appleton imprint, will be W. B. Maxwell's "The Rest Cure." This well-known English writer deals with married life. The husband, entirely devoted to business, permits his wife to drift away from him by neglecting her entirely and regarding her merely as his housekeeper and the mother of his children. When she becomes implicated in a near-scandal, both wake up to their real relationship. And finally the husband is sent to the Mediterranean to build up his broken health.

A New Novel of New York

Fleming H. Revell Co. introduces this week a new novelist, whose field of inspiration is the commonplace life of New York City. The author's name is Melville Chater; his story is called "The Eternal Rose." Other books issued simultaneously by the same house this week are Clara E. Laughlin's "Everybody's Lonesome," Norman Duncan's "Billy Topsail and Company," which continues the adventures of a hero already well known to boy readers; Winifred Heston's "A Bluestocking in India," and another series of travel papers by Dr. Alonzo Bunker, called "Sketches from the Karen Hills."

"What's Wrong With the World," by Gilbert K. Chesterton, is published this week by Dodd, Mead & Co. Herein the biographer of Browning and Dickens and the brilliant author of "Varied Types" and "Tremendous Trifles" will appear as paradoxical as ever. Nobody yet knows to a surety whether Mr. Chesterton is a Roman Catholic or an Anarchist—or both. The same publishers are also issuing a vade mecum for youthful possessors of a telescope, "The Amateur Astronomer," translated by George Auborne Clarke, with 112 illustrations. "Bermuda, Past and Present," with reproduced photographs and a map, by Walter B. Hayward, is also on this week's list; as is, too, "The Diary of Philip Hone," edited by Bayard Tuckerman, in a new edition. Mr. Tuckerman will be recalled as the author of lives of Lafayette and William Jay. Dodd, Mead & Co, have decided to designate Mr. Frank Moore's new essays "Constrained Attitudes." As the author says, "The topics discussed are transitory, but they are bound to recur.

Mr. Choate's Addresses

"Abraham Lincoln, and Other Addresses" by the Hon. Joseph H. Choate, to be published by The Century Co. this Fall, gathers up material first given to the English public in various addresses, and includes the late Amabassador's farewell address in England. "The Boys' Book of Modern Aeroplanes," by Francis Arnold Collins, is promised by the Century Co. for early October. It will tell how to make aeroplane models and how to fly them—with many pictures. Henry Hatton and Adrian Plate, magicians, have written a book of "Magicians' Tricks," in which are explained for the first time many secrets. The book will be issued by the same house early in the Fall. "The Walter Camp Book of Football," to be issued in October, will be the first of a series of books on American sports to be edited by Walter Camp.

The Centenary Dickens

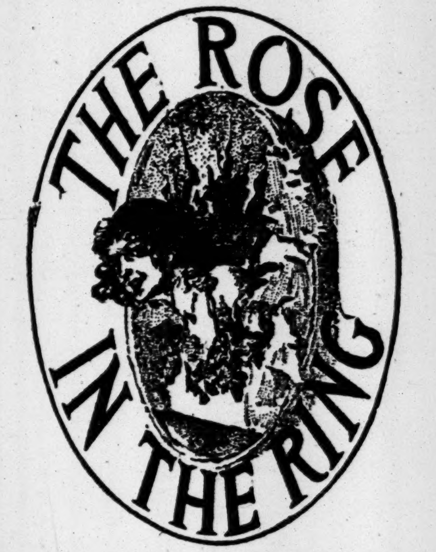
The first three volumes of the Centenary Dickens have just been brought out by Charles Scribner's Sons—"Oliver Twist" in one volume and "Sketches by Boz" in two. Three a month will follow until the work is complete. All the prefaces, dedications and notices which appeared in the various editions during the author's lifetime will be given, together with all the original illustrations to which he gave his approval. The latter are being reproduced by a new process from the original steel plates and wood-blocks, and will number close upon 700, forming in themselves a unique gallery of the work of Hablot K. Browne ("Phiz"), Cruikshank, Leech, Maclise, etc.

Apropos of the discussion concerning the life of books, Frederick A. Stokes Company have given out the dates of editions of the "Glory of the Conquered," by Susan Glaspell, a hitherto unknown author. The first appeared in January, 1909; the tenth on Aug. 4, 1910, and the eleventh is about to be printed.

Mr Thomas Whittaker will publish soon a new volume of sermons by the late Canon Farrar, edited by his son, the Rev. Eric Farrar, the title being "Bells and Pomegranates." They are written in the the author's familiar style.

"Gates of Twilight," a new book of poems by H. E. Harman of Atlanta, is to be issued early in October by Stone & Barringer Co. of Charlotte, N. C.

GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON'S
NEW NOVEL



THE ROSE IN THE RING

No recent novelist has pleased more readers more times than MR. GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON. If you liked GRAUSTARK, BREWSTER'S MILLIONS, TRUXTON KING, or others of his ten successful novels in the last ten years, you will like THE ROSE IN THE RING.

A pair of lovers; the uneven course of true love; rascals and intrigues; hard blows given and taken; dangers escaped; and a final triumphant ending:—all permeated with the author's characteristic humor, sentiment and breathless rush of story-telling, make this one of GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON'S best stories.
